GC stated that the approximate coordinates supplied previously to DI Chipolina stood and that the SIVE technicians had yet to extract and validate such data. They confirmed the approximate collision location was 6 to 6.5 miles off Santa Barbara Beach. GC asked if we could provide initial incident report via Schengen channels and DI Chipolina informed he would refer the request and revert once back in Gibraltar. GC stated the previous convictions of the 4 occupants would be sent by email upon request and through Schengen channels. Prior to ending meeting there was a brief discussion where the structure and conduct of investigations were summarised. GC confirmed they would need to discuss with a judge, yet to be appointed. 153.	10/03/2020	1018hrs	COP emails Ch.Supt Nigel Goddard, Head of Unit, NPoCC. He briefs him as to the incident involving the fatal collision at sea and that PIP has been implemented with an SIO being provisionally appointed but highlights the importance for this type of matters being dealt with by an independent team. Goddard is informed that COP reached out to the Small Island Forum Police forces but what was offered was not the ideal scenario, being a 3rd party oversight for a managed type investigation on behalf of the PCB. He explains that the PCBs role in Gibraltar does not have capacity or the capability to carry out investigations. COP also informs them that the services of the MDP in Gibraltar was sought but their senior management informed they did not have the skills required for such task.	COP Email

			Therefore he has requested the assistance of Goddard. He explains that he is looking for an independent force investigation team to take on the task. Lastly, COP also asked to see if assistance can also be provided by identifying a forensic pathologist who would be able to perform the PMs on both deceased prior to that which has already been arranged for the end of the week, explaining to him that the reasons are to mitigate any threats which might materialise by having the bodies within the hospital mortuary.
154.	10/03/2020	1200hrs	DS Garratt contacted Tim Yates of Sheppard's Marina in relation to ascertaining if he can obtain the navigational data from both vessels.	Notes DS 15 Garratt

231.	26/03/2020	1256hrs	Mr Finch from Verralls, contacts CI Perez and informs him that he is acting for the families of the deceased and their respective estates in Gibraltar. He also states that he is liaising with Spanish lawyers who are working on this matter in Spain. He requires to be provided with information, if he is to discharge the legal onus in both a criminal and civil context. He looks for an insight into the incident, including whether the coxswain of the RGP vessel has been suspended pending inquiry and whether the Police will be seeking the adjournment of the Coroner's investigation, as he claims to	DI Perera Emails be normal practice where a criminal offence has been committed.

232.	26/03/2020	1628hrs	Mr Debono from Verralls is informed by DI Perera that as part of the investigation the RGP had not obtained any medical evidence, as the survivors, had been arrested in relation to offences which would not be justified for the RGP to request such information as it would not prove or disprove any of the offences mentioned. He was anyhow informed that if he requires such information, a SAR would have to be submitted to the GHA, as it was where his client had been treated and examined.	DI Perera Emails
233.	26/03/2020	1652hrs	Supt Richardson emails DCI Gary Smith MPS and enquiries whether he wishes for Mr Finch to correspond with him directly or to be filtered by RGP PSD. Supt Richardson informs DCI Smith that given that we no longer have grounds to suspect that any part of the chase took place within BGTW, the RGP intends to recall the survivors and release them from arrest.	Supt Richardson emails
234.	26/03/2020	1713hrs	Mr Debono from Verralls emails DI Perera and informs him that the medical notes he was referring to was that which he had been shown by the Custody Sergeant whilst at NMH.	DI Perera Emails

He informed that an approach has been made to UKs NPOC and a team of the MPS was deployed to Gibraltar. It was further added that due to the current pandemic the team had to return to the UK earlier than thought.	DI Perera Emails
236.	27/03/2020	1156hrs	After consultation with the RGP DPO, DI Perera informs Leigh Debono from Verralls, that that the doctor's note he is referring to as being shown in custody	DI Perera Emails

			has been identified. Anyhow, his client (or through him with his expressed consent), should submit a SAR to the RGP for it to be considered.
237.	01/04/2020	1140hrs	CI Field authorised the release of the two survivors arrested on the day of incident without any charges being preferred against him. This was done by the Custody Sgt through Verralls.	Email from DCI Field
238.	01/04/2020	1856hrs	Gary Smith from MPS team informs COP, Supt Richardson and DCI Field via email to tell the lawyer representing the families Mr Chris Finch to go through RGP PSD rather than link directly with MPS. DCI Gary Smith includes in his email that he is aware that the criminal case against the survivors has discontinued and the family of the deceased / survivors and are considering legal action against the RGP / those deployed in the vessel. The Spanish may also be considering a homicide investigation, so restriction/ suspension may occur.	Supt Richardson email
239.	03/04/2020	1123hrs	CI Perez informs Mr Finch that all future communication with the RGP should be channelled through him. In respect to requests made by Mr Finch for the disclosure of PM reports and the opportunity to inspect the vessels, CI informed that the Coroner has indicated that the PM reports will be disclosed once he has received the final report from the pathologist. AS to the vessels, he was told that the Coroner is yet to receive the report from the marine expert and once such has been received, a copy will be made available to him.	DI Perera Emails
240.	06/04/2020	1137hrs	Mr Finch informs CI Perez that as the two survivors have been released from their arrest, they are now asking for their properties to be returned. He also wishes for that of the deceased.	DI Perera emails
241.	06/04/2020	1159hrs	Mr Finch communicates to CI Perez that it should be noted that once a person has been released from his arrest, he is entitled to have all his property returned, unless unlawful per se. He	DI Perera reiterated that there is no power to retain property if it is not of evidence in a carinal case.

242.	07/04/2020	1000hrs	Meeting with AG to discuss strategy for Op Kram including the potential consequences for the officers concerned. 250.	21/04/2020	1600hrs	FLO tasked by DI Perera, (following meeting with Supt Richardson, to try and ascertain from families of deceased what lawyers they were instructing) and to provide families with an update of investigation.	DI Perera Notes
251.	21/04/2020	1850hrs	Update received from HTCU: Due to the current capabilities available to the RGP HTCU, out of the nine phones which were either in possession of the crewmembers of the suspect RHIB or found strewn on its deck, full extractions or unlocking of the devices to access its data have not been possible on four of the phones. In view of this, through HTCU, contact has been made with their counterparts abroad (Cellebrite, to see if they are able to access the phones in question and extract any relevant data held on them. Once a reply is returned and if in the positive, it will be forwarded to HM Coroner for approval in meeting the costs. Another option offered by HTCU with six of the phones, is to request information in respect of SIM cards and their PUK codes, from their service providers (all of which are from Spain). With this there might be a possibility of retrieving call data. However, it must be borne in mind that requesting this through the official channels, such as EIOs, MLAs, etc, is not an option, as the investigation is not of a criminal nature	DC 106 Oton

			and there is no specific power under the Coroner's Act. A formal letter could be sent to a foreign authority to seek such information but it is not known whether it will be replied to.
252.	22/04/2020	1200hrs	Meeting between AG, DPP and CoP ref communications from lawyers representing the deceased indicating that they would be making a civil claim for damages. CoP enquires about crown counsel representation and again the need to agree a strategy. DPP states, no civil claim has yet been filed so there is no immediate need to appoint counsel. AG would give thoughts whether to leave the matter to be discussed at [Brexit] law enforcement group meeting or privately with his Brexit negotiator counterpart.	CoP notes
253.	22/04/2020	1234hrs	DI Perera informs HM Coroner that he has once again resumed the role of Coroner's Officer (as previously told to him by RGP SMT). Mr Pitto is informed that in respect of the mobile phones held in relation to this investigation, due to the software / encryption issues faced by the HTCU, some of these cannot be accessed for the purposes of retrieving date. He has been informed that enquiries will be carried out with HTCU counterparts in UK to see if they would be able to do this. The reason to continue pursuing their contents, is to try to establish where each of the crewmembers on board the suspect RHIB were sat. There might also be a possibility that information may be held on the phones as to messages / location of the chase and / or recordings of the incident. He is also asked if the authorises for the return of personal property which are not of evidential value, to the families of the deceased and survivors. Mr Pitto is also informed of a request from Mr Finch, to be provided with copies of the photographs of both PMs and that that of both vessels involved in	DI Perera Emails

254.	22/04/2020	1246hrs	DI Perera instructs FLO not to contact families anymore ref lawyers info, only welfare checks and if they provide lawyer info, the DI Perera to be informed.	FLO PC Passano notes
255.	22/04/2020	1603hrs	HM Coroner is forwarded an email sent by Mr Finch to CI PEREZ. This is for him to be aware of the stance being taken by VERRALLS. In the email, Mr Finch complains of not being provided with information requested and other requests made, including the surveying of the vessels by his own marine expert. He also asks for the location of the vessels at the time of the incident, asking if it happened in Spanish waters. Mr Finch claims that he will be writing to the Coroner as it appears the intention of the RGP is to close down all important avenues of enquires. He also claims that failure to suspend the officers involved in the collision indicates a predetermination of the enquiry from the outset, indicating a partisan approach and not that of an independent approach.	DI Perera Emails
256.	24/04/2020	1245hrs	Mr Finch emails Maurice Turnock from the Magistrates Court. He forwards him an email thread with CI Perez and wants the Coroner to be informed of what he describes as serious problems he is encountering with the RGP. He states that he considers this case to be of an unlawful killing. He mentions international implications, including ECHR.	DI Perera
257.	24/04/2020	1521hrs	In respect of the email sent to Mr Pitto as to the stance taken by Mr Finch and the complaints he is making, the Coroner informs that Mr Finch has been dealt with by necessary implication in a reply sent to him from his office.	DI Perera Emails

262.	05/05/2020	1258hrs	HM Coroner has been informed of the reply of Cellebrite UK in respect of being able to examine mobile phones held by Police, which were seized during the investigation and which were unable to be accessed by HTCU. He was asked if he authorised for this to be sent over for examination.	DI Perera Emails
263.	05/05/2020	1503hrs	HM Coroner informs that in respect of the examination of mobile phones, he was inclined to say no but would go through the SOLIS report prior to taking a decision.	DI Perera Notes
264.	06/05/2020	1118hrs	Mr Finch emails CI Perez complaining that he is still awaiting for a date for his maritime surveyor to be able to inspect the vessels involved in the collision. He also complains that there is no obvious reasons for the CSI phots taken of the vessels not being supplied to him.	DI Perera Emails
265.	06/05/2020	1614hrs	HM Coroner emails DI PERERA and informs that Mr Finch will be supplied with all necessary reports and information, once the Coroner's investigation was complete. He informed that this reflect the inquisitorial nature of the coronial process and the fact that in an inquest, interested persons are not parties as they might be in atrial. He states that if Mr Finch is interested in pursuing the matter on behalf of his clients civilly or even criminally, he should institute	DI Perera Emails proceedings and acquire the rights of a party at trial in that way. He also stated that he had no difficulty in returning the property (of deceased and survivors), even the phones. 269.	10/05/2020	1411hrs	Mr Finch informs CI Perez that legal representatives on behalf of the families are entitled to participate in the investigation into the deaths of their loved ones. He adds that there is no cooperation from the Police. He says this to be a clear abdication of the state's responsibility where the state agents are clearly responsible in fact and law for the deaths of these concerned. Any statements to be taken should be taken by their legal representatives, as the police can no longer be trusted to be independent and objective. The police you say on the instructions of the coroner has deliberately delayed and frustrated our inquiries and access to information, including examination of the boats and the draft PM report and even the names of the boat's crew. These actions constitute serious breaches of fundamental rights which will not go without full redress. Maybe you should advise the coroner what the RGP has done under his assumed direction, because there will be consequences."

08 03 20 0605Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Nick - We're dealing with a critical incident - one of our boats has been involved in a collision with a smuggling RHIB with 4 on board. 2 on the smuggling RHIB are fatalities. Our crew are uninjured but clearly shaken & shocked. I am invoking Post Incident Procedures and planning for consequence management. Once I have further updates I will let you know. Rgds Ian
08 03 20 0724Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Ian. Thank you. What are the nationalities of the deceased? Was it drugs or tobacco? Any GC or SVA involvement?
08 03 20 0733Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message So far we have 3 identified. 2 from Ceuta (moroccan descent) & a Portuguese. No Spanish law enforcement agency involved. RHIB suspected to be involved in drug smuggling. I have also informed The Convent. I have held a "Gold" command meeting in my office to address, welfare of the crew, the investigation that will now follow, security/safety to our law enforcement officers, community impact et al. Also linked up with GC and CNP more so after the disturbances in La Linea after the other death involving the our customs patrol boat but given that those on the RHIB are not from this region it may not have an impact. I am still waiting for the 4th & (also deceased) to be identified.

08 03 20 0737Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Just had the ID of the 4th one confirmed. He is also from Ceuta of Moroccan descent.
08 03 20 0740Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Thank you. Are our officers safely ashore and seen by med staff if necessary? Are their families informed they are ok, in case social media lets on there has been a fatal collision, so they don't worry?
08 03 20 0741Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Also, what time did it occur and was it firmly within BGTW or questionable?
08 03 20 0742Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message I think we should announce if possible to avoid social media speculation. Have you prepared media release or do you want Stuart's help?
08 03 20 0742Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Our crew are ok. Their welfare is being totally safeguarded. I am also circulating a notice to all staff to prevent speculation and social media reporting from within. I will issue a very brief press notice shortly.
08 03 20 0743Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok. Re the two who survived, captured? Hospital or cells?
08 03 20 0743Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Collision occurred at approx 0340hrs. Location still to be confirmed.
08 03 20 0744Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message The two who survived are in hospital with non critical injuries as far as I am informed.
08 03 20 0813Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Arrested, correct?
08 03 20 0814Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message They will be if they haven't been already.
08 03 20	CoP	MoJ	Whatsapp message Minsiter - We're dealing with a critical incident - one of our boats has been involved in a collision with a smuggling RHIB with 4 on board. 2 on the smuggling RHIB are fatalities. 08 03 20 0929Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message And of course if ty need anything from us/HMG just ask. Hope your guys are ok.
08 03 20 0941Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Thanks Nick.
08 03 20 0949Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message CM - the information suggests that the collision took place outside BGTW - approx 6NM east off the runway/Santa Barbara beach. (Note this is information and not yet confirmed evidence)
08 03 20 0953Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message When a death arises from police contact its best practice to engage with an independent investigating team & I am studying how to achieve this.
08 03 20 0953Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok. We need to liaise with AG on this and ensure we are transparent on this.
08 03 20 0954Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Yes, agreed. Any necessary additional expenditure will be approved.
08 03 20 0954Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Many thanks.
08 03 20 1031Hrs	GPA Ch	CoP	Whatsapp message Thanks - I saw it on the news feed.
08 03 20 1058Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Not asking any questions of you in view that it is under investigation and for Coroner to determine. Just like to say that it is unfortunate, to say the least!
08 03 20 1140Hrs	AG	CoP	Whatsapp message Been in New Mole for the last hour or so. Cooperation RGP/Spanish LEAs very good. New RGP Press Release today will say good cooperation with ES, drug related activity, 2 deaths are Spanish nationals of North African descent. Investigation continues. PR will not say where incident occurred but it is virtually certain it was outside BGTW eastern side opposite runway. It also seems that part of the chase was within BGTW. (This is a text the AG sent to CM which he copied to CoP. He sent me the copy straight after he sent it to the CM after I asked him who was going to brief up to CM)
08 03 20 1220Hrs	MoJ	CoP	Whatsapp message Hi. How are the officers?
08 03 20 1312Hrs	CoP	MoJ	Whatsapp message

			Our officers are ok. We are constantly keeping tabs of their welfare. We are expecting them to come today at some point to provide a detailed account of what occurred. This is in accordance with our force policy on post incident procedure. Thanks fro your interest. Its much appreciated.
08 03 20 1333Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Thanks for the briefing. I'll do a quick note for London for when it hits the press. Line will be. Investigation ongoing. Spanish nationals from Ceuta (did you say one person was Portuguese). Not sure in whose waters incident took place. RGP seeking assistance from UK police authorities. No assistance needed from FCO at this stage.
08 03 20 1347Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Trying to clarify exact position of the collision.

09 03 20 1131Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message Morning Michael - Nick Pyle tells me you want to meet. I am here at my office.
09 03 20 1152Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Let me know when you're downstairs and I will come down to meet you.
09 03 20 1152hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Will do.
09 03 20 1205Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Just arrive in reception
09 03 20 1205	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Coming down
09 03 20 1433Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Joey - been working through the weekend on this collision case. I am going to email you, (or if you want Elka), to formally notify you of the incident and refer you the fact that an investigation is underway. For purposes of transparency, this investigation should be independent & therefore I am trying to source out a team willing to take on the task. In UK the IOPC (our PCB) would decide whether the investigation would be wholly independent of managed by them with an external 3rd party (senior officer) overseeing on their behalf. If we applied that locally, it would mean the PCB would manage the investigation and we'd require a senior UK Officer to oversee it on the PCB's behalf. The field work though would be done by RGP Professional Standards. It may not be the best model as the independence element is not total. Then again for practicalities sake it may prove useful. I need to discuss the matter further with you & perhaps Frank too but I'm conscious that you're away. I have held meetings with the AG & HE (Nick Pyle) and they support my intent to secure the best model to use. Regards Ian

09 03 20 1435Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Thanks - best model to use, in my view, would be to outsource completely
09 03 20 1435Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message If I'm honest, the PCB would not have the necessary expertise
09 03 20 1436Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Neither would anybody in the GPA, if we are honest
09 03 20 1436Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message I agree - I share your views. It would be most unfair on PCB.
09 03 20 1439Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message The GPA/PCB (Police Complaints Board) should though retain some control similar to that when they receive a complaint against Police. Technically there isn't a complaint as no family member has yet filed one but it could happen. Even if it didn't happen, the fact that deaths have occurred we should treat this as an external complaint and not as internal one generated by the RGP itself. This aside for the concurrent coroner's investigation that will also take place.
09 03 20 1440Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message There has been another death at sea and GPA was not involved - why is this different ?
09 03 20 1441Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Because it wasn't arising from contact with the Police. It was Customs.
09 03 20 1441Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message OK- I see
09 03 20 1441Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Customs have it easier
09 03 20 1442Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok - we would both be back tomorrow – (Referring to Mr Frank Carreras the PCB Chairman and himself. They were away from Gibraltar).
09 03 20 1443Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message I will work to get an independent team out. ASAP. & we can discuss tomorrow. Time is of essence, will explain in person..... Politics.

11 03 20 1802Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message Michael - we have still not provided any official account to GC of the incident at sea and they have asked for a brief from us. I am now at a stage where I also require background details of those who were on-board the RHIB as this is being requested by the independent investitagtion team. I can hardly ask them for these details when we haven't released anything official to them. Its only prudent to do so I propose to send them the below details and on the back of this make our request to them. I would appreciate your views on what I propose to send. STARTS Ref: Initial Incident Report – Collision at Sea with fatalities At about 0300hrs on Sunday 8th March 2020, officers from the Royal Gibraltar Police Marine Interceptor Sir John Chapple (Bravo

			4) communicated with the Guardia Civil COS in relation to the presence of a suspect susect vessel activity in waters off the Playa de Santa Barbara, near to the eastern side between Gibraltar and La Linea. Bravo 4 deployed and remained ready to engage at a point approximately 3 miles East of the runway. Soon afterwards a chase ensued with the suspect vessel and Bravo 4 challenging the vessel, a 14mt semi-rigid hulled inflatable vessel (RHIB) crewed by 4 occupants, powered by 4 x 300hp engines and fitted with Garmin radar. The said vessel was suspected to be involved in illicit drugs trafficking activity. During the course of a high-speed pursuit shortly afterwards, there was a collision between both vessels, and this resulted in the death 2 of the 4 RHIB's occupants, namely: [redacted] [redacted] The remaining 2 occupants sustained injuries of various types, and were conveyed to St Bernard's Hospital in Gibraltar where they received treatment for their injuries and later discharged. [redacted] [redacted] Both [redacted] and [redacted] were arrested on suspicion of Importing a Prohibited Import (14mt RHIB), Dangerous Navigation and Obstructing Police. [redacted] gave a "No comment" interview at New Mole House Police station and [redacted] gave only a brief account of events stating that he had been 1 of the 4 RHIB's occupants and that they had been chased by Police between Gibraltar and Spanish waters prior to the collision between both vessels. Both [redacted] and [redacted] were later bailed out in the sum of £2500.00 to return to New Mole House Police Headquarters at 1100hrs on the 4th June 2020 whilst enquiries continue.

			A Coroner's investigation is already underway into the deaths of [redacted] and [redacted], and post-mortem examinations will be conducted by a Forensic Pathologist on Wednesday 11th March and Thursday 12th March 2020. The Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police has sought assistance of specialist investigators from the United Kingdom. ENDS
11 03 20 1858Hrs	HE	CoP	Email Ian, Good to hear about progress re Met help. Are we any clearer as to where the collision took place? London are keen to know whether it was inside or outside BGTW and if the latter, approximately by how far. Regards Nick

18 03 20 1530Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message Michael - Held video conference with GC as they wouldn't meet face to face because of the pandemic. They were obviously cagey with our UK colleagues but it served well to demonstrate that we were totally transparent. The UK team were happy with the meeting. What I was able to elicit from GC is that a judge is still to be assigned the matter & it is likely that it'll be a judge from La Linea. Again because of their lock down there are delays in their courts. GC anticipate that when appointed, the judge will request information and accounts from us. What form this will take is not clear - the judge could potentially summons our officers to provide their statements in person or simply request their accounts via police to police channels. What mechanisms we should rely on to facilitate this, were we to oblige, is something we'll need to discuss. GC also expects the family of the deceased to file a complaint in their courts to seek compensation. This will no doubt complicate matters for us as the judge may be swayed to look at the matter from a different perspective in terms of where the collision took place. GC are requesting from us for photos of the vessels, post mortem reports & statements from those involved in the collision. We have to carefully study this request and weigh the pros and cons of withholding the data or provide it at some point. Speak soon.

07 04 20 1000Hrs	AG	CoP	Meeting To discuss strategy of how we were going to deal with the Op Kram. I expressed concern with what my officers could be facing once a Spanish judge was assigned to the case. AG was stressing that we had to focus that this was a joint effort by GC and RGP to tackle organised crime and that yes, perhaps the RGP went too far by going out of BGTW but in essence they were discharging a law enforcement role and he would be happy to defend that position. Discussed the correlations with the Alcaidesa incident where RGP officers also went beyond their remit in to Spain and how that particular case had dragged on for 10 years and therefore I wanted a Gibraltar PLC strategy to deal with the case if only to keep on file until such time as we had to activate it. AG fully agreed with me and undertook to discuss with the CM whom he had quick access to.
22 04 20 1200Hrs	AG DPP	CoP	Meeting – To discuss Op Kram. Correspondence being received from the lawyers representing the families indicating that they would be making civil claims for damages. I enquired about legal representation and again the need to agree a [Gibraltar] strategy given all the strands the matter had (i) Coroners inquiry, (ii) Professional Standards investigation, (iii) the Spanish dimension in terms of courts and politics AG undertook to keep the matter alive with CM pending any developments on the political front. Spanish judge had still not been appointed because of the Covid19 lockdown measures in Spain. DPP said the civil claim hadn't been filed yet so there was no need to engage counsel as yet. AG wanted to have sight of the final investigation report from the UK before giving further thought to the strategy.

Informal Record of Meeting with HE the Governor and the Chief Minister, Monday 18th May 2020.

The Governor called on the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority to meet with him and the Chief Minister.

The purpose of the meeting was to express grave concerns about certain aspects of policing in Gibraltar which had come to a head in the week before.

The first is the publication of the HMICFRS Report into the RGP.

The second is the publication of news of the filing of legal claims in Spain by the relatives of the Spanish citizens killed in an incident at sea (which undoubtedly happened outside of BGTW).

The Governor expressed his view that the Chief Minister should introduce the subject for both, as both had already spoken, as required under the Police Act.

The Chief Minister said that the position was that BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister had lost confidence in the Commissioner of Police.

The Chief Minister set out what his concerns were by reference to the provisions of Section 34 of the Police Act given that this is the provision that allows for the GPA, after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister, to call upon the Commissioner to retire – and that these are the best objective criteria of 'confidence' available.

Ahead of that the Chief Minister noted that Section 13 (1) (f) of the Police Act also gives the Governor authority to call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the Authority has failed to discharge its responsibility.

The Chief Minister explained that both the Governor and he were particularly alive to the not so subtle differences between a 'retirement' (S.34) and a 'resignation' (S.13). The effect may be the same, but the route and signposting is markedly different. Both have recorded that the power of the Governor is much more explicit, for good reason.

The Chief Minster further explained that the GPA have power to "remove" a Commissioner (as per the heading of S.34, which is not relevant to interpretation) by inviting "retirement". The GPA would do so in the interests of policing in Gibraltar when seen through the prism of 5 key elements.

The GPA are therefore being invited by the Governor and the Chief Minister together to consider whether they believe that all OR any (note it is a disjunctive, not a conjunctive list) of the following 5 have been impacted.

The Chief Minister's view on the five criteria were clear.

1. The first criteria is Efficiency:

(a) The HMICFRS Report ('the Report') could not be clearer in the Chief Minister's view in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report go directly to efficiency directly and indirectly. It is, however, shocking to see the explicit reference in the first sentence of the second paragraph of the Report, marked 'Overview' on page 7 of the Report, to both 'efficiency' and 'effectiveness' (see item 2 below). This makes out a clear basis for serious concern on this issue (and item 2) given the rank the Commissioner held in 2016 and the fact that he has held the helm at the police since 2018. Additionally, it is equally explicitly stated under S.33(1)(a) of the Act that the buck stops with the Commissioner on efficiency:

> S.33(1)The Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service thereof.

Indeed, in his application for the role of Commissioner, the Chief Minister reminded, the now Commissioner had set out (as his 'Key Action 10') that he would immediately upon appointment establish a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been implemented by the 1st March 2019. This date had not been met and it is not clear if the working group had even been established. This 'Key Action' was considered by the Commissioner to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Despite that, not only have the 2015/6 reports not been complied with, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

(b) The incident at sea is further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The effect of the events at sea will create great financial and operational difficulties for the RGP. The RGP has already had to expend funds (which it has sought as supplementary or additional funds from Government) in an external report into the incident at sea. This is being provided by the Met Police in London. Additionally, the RGP is now facing the potential for its officers to be investigated and prosecuted in Gibraltar and / or Spain, officers potentially be legally extradited to Spain for homicide, the resulting high level of legal fees to be incurred and the potentially huge payments of damages to the families which will arise as a result and which will have to be met by the Gibraltar tax payer. An investigation will also be required into what Standard Operating Procedures are in place – approved by senior management – in respect of operations at sea. All of this vitiates efficiency entirely. The issue is a pressing one. The Metropolitan Police are already carrying out an investigation. The delay in that report being provided, and Spanish press reports of claims already filed, may lead to the Chief Minister exercising his powers udner S.15(1)(a) powers to seek a factual report or assessment. The Chief Minister has already raised this with the Governor. A note verbal complaint has been filed by the Spanish authorities on these events which the Chief Minister is waiting to see before he decides whether to exercise his powers, given he as received scant information until now from the Commissioner. It would be the first time since the Police Act came into effect that this power has been exercised.

2. Effectiveness:

(a) In respect of the HMICFRS Report, on this limb of the considerations, the points in re 1 above are linked, in particular in the sentence at the beginning of paragraph 2 of the 'Overview'. The report is similarly laced with matters referring to this aspect of the interest of policing in Gibraltar.

(b) In respect of the incident at sea, the effectiveness of the RGP is impacted as already set out in point 1 above. Additionally the RGP found itself without a key marine asset for some time and its effectiveness as sea was therefore even more severely impacted. Effectiveness of the RGP will now be seriously under threat given the onslaught of legal work which will be required in order to address the claims made, as well as those likely to be made, in respect of this incident.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity: The Chief Minister felt it was best to consider limbs 3 & 4 together as, in his view, they are inextricably linked.

(a) & (b) In the context of the Report (in particular its references to a failure to even understand the potential for, let alone the actual instances of, corruption) and the matters relating to the reporting to us of the events at sea involving the death of two Spanish nationals, this is an area of huge concern to both the Governor and the Chief Minister. Both feel that their respective dealings with the Commissioner have left them with the sense that he is lacking in both probity and integrity in his dealings with them. The Chief Minister indicated that he had held discussions with the Attorney General which led him to believe that Mr Llamas felt the same way, although he obviously could not speak for him.

(c) The Chief Minister also shared another event occurring last week which had left him also in a situation where the Commissioner had expressly misled him and which left him unable to believe the Commissioner.

The Chief Minister stated that for him this is possibly the issue of deepest concern as it goes to the integrity and probity of a key individual in the maintenance of the respect for the Rule of Law. Additionally, that individual, as Commissioner is, in the Chief Minister's view, at the head of the organisation that is institutionally one of the guardians of the Rule of Law alongside the Executive and the Judiciary. For the Chief Minister, to an extent the police becomes a fourth branch of government in the maintenance and preservation of the Rule of Law. The Chief Minister stated that without the Rule of Law we are unrecognisable as a nation. The Chief Minister said that he can imagine no greater concern than this in the context of his ability to discharge his oath to the Crown and to the People as Chief Minister.

5. Independence:

(a) This area of concern is highlighted in the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given the answers set out in the Report, is clearly not even understood in the RGP. Again, these concerns can cut across the Rule of Law in a meaningful way. It is not possible for the RGP to assert that it is acting independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of the Commissioner's service to date – despite his assertions of wanting to address the issues in his application.

His Excellency then expressed his views.

The Governor said that the Chief Minister had expressed views he entirely shared.

His Excellency stated that, in addition, he had felt misled when the incident at sea had occurred and that he felt he had not received all information available to the RGP in respect of that event. He said that there had been no proactivity in addressing the events especially given the serious outcome which had resulted in loss of life. He felt he had been left with no choice but to seek further information when this should have been forthcoming without the need with persistent enquiry from him. He said he felt this left a lot to be desired.

As a result, the Governor and the Chief Minister consider that, given the views that they have now expressed it is for the GPA to take this forward in the first instance.

They ask the GPA to consider these extremely serious concerns and issues and that the GPA should engage its powers under Section 34 of the Act which specifically provides that the GPA's action to "call upon" the Commissioner to retire cannot be commenced until BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister have been consulted and ONE of has agreed. (The part of the clause that relates to consultation is conjunctive and the part that relates to agreement is disjunctive). BOTH in fact agree that the Commissioner should be invited to retire by the GPA.

It is now a matter for the GPA to decide how to act and to decide that they want to engage the S.34(1) power.

If the GPA decide to go down this road, the first step is to allow the Commissioner to make representations, if he wishes, under S.34(2).

It will of course be necessary for the GPA to consider any representation the Commissioner might make.

Thereafter, if the GPA are of the view that the Commissioner should be invited to retire, then that is when they would need to consult BOTH of the Governor and the Chief Minister and then seek the agreement of ONE of them. The Governor and the Chief Minister would then also have the benefit of any representation that the Commissioner might have made under S.34(2) in expressing a final and firm view.

Commissioner Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Royal Gibraltar Police
New Mole House

Dear Commissioner McGrail,

Our meeting earlier this morning refers.

Please find below the main issues contributing to the loss of confidence, as expressed to the Authority by the Governor and the Chief Minister:

Efficiency:

The HMICFRS Report is clear in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report point directly to 'inefficiency' directly and indirectly.

It was also pointed out to the Authority that in your application for the role of Commissioner you would, if successful, immediately set up a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been met by the 1st March 2019. This action point was considered by you to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Not only have the recommendations and action points set out in the 2015/6 reports not been complied with but now, in addition, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

The incident at sea was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The Authority notes that the Chief Minister has written to you, seeking further information on this matter given that neither he or the Governor seem to have a full picture of what actually transpired.

Effectiveness:

As a result of the above, as well, the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and the RGP's effectiveness as sea was therefore severely impacted. The effectiveness of the RGP will also now be seriously compromised given the increased legal workload which will arise as a direct result of the claims made and all the corollary effects that they will give rise to.

Probity & Integrity:
It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is a case in point.

Independence:
This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. They expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service.

I trust that this serves to clarify matters further.

Yours,

22nd May 2020

Commissioner Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Royal Gibraltar Police
New Mole House

Dear Commissioner McGrail,

Invitation to Retire : Section 34 of the Police Act ('the Act')

Our meeting earlier this morning refers.

Today I expressed to you that the Gibraltar Police Authority was calling upon you to retire under the provisions of Section 34 of the Act.

I told you that the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar. The reasons which the Governor and the Chief Minister have provided the Authority for their loss of confidence are summarised in the paragraphs numbers 1 to 5 below and address the relevant factors set out in Section 34(1) of the Act.

Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief Minister and have taken the view that your position is untenable as Commissioner given that you have lost the confidence of BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister.

Please find below the main issues contributing to the loss of confidence, as expressed to the Authority by the Governor and the Chief Minister.

1. Efficiency:

The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report address 'inefficiency' directly and indirectly. Indeed, the "Overview" of the Report specifically provides a criticism (para 2, page 7) that the Force is not 'as effective or efficient as it could be'.

In this respect, the position is clear as to responsibility. Under Section 33 of the Act, it is the Commissioner who is responsible for the efficient administration of the Force. That means that responsibility in respect of this failing rests legally, directly with you.

It was also pointed out to the Authority that in your application for the role of Commissioner you would, if successful, immediately set up a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been met by the 1st March 2019. This action point was considered by you to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Not only have the recommendations and action points set out in the 2015/6 reports not been complied with but now, in addition, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The Authority notes that the Chief Minister has written to you directly, under Section 15 of the Act (copied to me as Chairman of the Authority), seeking further information on this matter given that neither he or the Governor seem to have a full picture of what actually transpired. The incident has resulted not just in a diplomatic complaint filed against the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, but also to a vessel being out of action, questions as to standard operating procedures in place and all the other concerns contained in the letter sent to you by the Chief Minister. I do not need to repeat that here, but I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident. Additionally, the Governor expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you about this most serious incident which has resulted in loss of life.

2. Effectiveness:

The issues relating to effectiveness were linked by the Governor and the Chief Minister. Additionally, as a result of the above, the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and the RGP's effectiveness as sea was therefore severely impacted for some time. The effectiveness of the RGP will also now be seriously compromised given the increased legal workload which will arise as a direct result of the claims made and all the corollary effects that they will give rise to.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity:

It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point. This is very serious indeed. I think you need to reflect carefully on this. The situation we are in is one where BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister respectively have expressed this view. It is not one of them that has expressed this view, which would be bad enough, but BOTH of them.

Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings.

The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity.

5. Independence:

This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service.

It is for those reasons that we are calling upon you to retire on the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity and the independence of policing in Gibraltar, but before doing so are giving you an opportunity, as provided for in Section 34(2) of the Act to make representations which we shall consider.

I trust that this serves to clarify matters further.

I look forward to receiving any representations you may wish to make under Section 34(2) of the Act.

Yours,

JJ Britto

Dear Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority,

RE: Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act

We write on behalf of our client, Ian McGrail, Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police, in response to the communications to him from the Chair of the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') on 22nd May 2020 which set out the Chair's decision to exercise powers under section 34(1) of the Police Act 2006 ('the 2006 Act'), calling on him to retire and seeking any representations from him under section 34(2). The three communications in question were (1) at a meeting that morning, (2) in a letter ('the first letter') handed to him at the 22 May meeting, and (3) in a further letter, sent to him late that evening ('the second letter').

We thank the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') for giving us the opportunity to make representations. We will explain below why the exercise of the s.34 power vested in the GPA would be wholly unjustified and grossly procedurally unfair. Moreover, there is an extremely troubling aspect to this, of which the Chair is fully aware, and which concerns the rule of law in Gibraltar, and which touches on the fundamental principle of the freedom of the Royal Gibraltar Police ('RGP') to carry out criminal enquiries without interference from politicians or the Attorney General.

At the outset, we wish to impress on the members of the GPA your solemn duties under the Constitution and the 2006 Act. The GPA is one of the few bodies created under the Constitution. The Constitution requires the GPA to "be independent in the exercise of its functions". These functions include, under the 2006 Act, that you must "ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar". You must also, because you are a constitutional body, act in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties including the European Convention on Human Rights. It should therefore be self-evident that the GPA plays an essential role in protecting the separation of powers between the executive and police, the rule of law and the rights of the citizens of Gibraltar.

It is in this light that you must make the decision whether to call on Mr. McGrail to retire – a decision which (because of section 34(3)) means he "shall" retire. You will therefore not just be making a request but giving him an instruction to prematurely end his distinguished 36-year policing career, and you will be removing from office the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar. In order to fulfil your constitutional duties, you must make the decision independently from the Governor and Chief Minister. You must not be directed by them. That would be quite wrong, and in violation of your obligations under the 2006 Act and the Constitution.

As set out below, we are deeply concerned by the approach of the Chair in the meeting he had with Mr. McGrail on 22 May. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that if he refused to comply with the invitation to retire then the Governor would use his powers under s.13(f) of the 2006 Act to call for his resignation. The decision was presented to Mr. McGrail as a fait accompli. The Chair said in effect that it did not matter how he responded – the result would be the end of his career either because he would be forced to retire in accordance with your request or would be called to resign by the Governor using his power under s.13(f). This is not how your power under s.34 works. It only applies if the GPA considers it is "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing" to request that the Commissioner retire, following consideration of any representations made by him. If you do not properly consider these representations and do not make an independent decision you will be acting unlawfully and your decision will be vulnerable to a judicial review challenge.

The damage to Gibraltar as a jurisdiction which claims to adhere to the Rule of Law would be incalculable. As people of standing in our community it will be immediately obvious to you already that the removal of the Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police in the way in which the GPA is being pushed to do is a travesty which will bring shame to Gibraltar and international derision when we are always trying to prove our democratic, non-colonial attributes in every international forum up to the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonization.

The background and motivations which we will proceed to explain (subject to the sensitivities of what is ultimately an ongoing very serious criminal investigation) uncover an abuse of power which is possibly unprecedented in Gibraltar.

The approach the Chair has taken thus far has been for the reasons explained below clearly unlawful. This could potentially be remedied by taking a fully independent decision now and concluding that Mr. McGrail should not be removed from office. This must be a decision of the full GPA, not the Chair alone, as the section 34 power vests in "the Authority". The GPA must also carefully consider whether any of its members has a conflict of interest which would exclude them from taking part in the decision-making process.

In light of the errors made to date, we respectfully suggest that you seek independent legal advice in order to assist you in making a lawful decision. We emphasise that it would be inappropriate to take advice from the Attorney General because he has already expressed a view on the substantive issues, as is clear from the second letter of 22nd May, and, moreover, he has played a key role in the issues we refer to in Section (d) below, as the Chair is already aware. We respectfully suggest that it may be prudent for you to take advice from lawyers in the United Kingdom given the multiplicity of local interests arising from this unfortunate case (as, indeed, Mr McGrail has done; he is represented by an expert counsel team from Gibraltar and London).

This letter is divided in to five sections:

(a) Preliminary Point - Recusal Issue;

(b) The legal framework;

(c) The invitation to retire;

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Failings; and

(e) Response to the substantive issues raised by the GPA.

(a) Preliminary point – Recusal Issue

1. There are two preliminary matters concerning recusal.

2. First, Mr. Nick Pyle is currently named as the member of the GPA appointed by the Governor.[1] He has been the interim Governor since February 2020 and he has had personal involvement in the background to this matter, as we summarise in these submissions. He should play no part in decision-making of the Authority under section 34 in any event, given the distinct role of the Governor under that section. We ask for an assurance that the GPA Chair will ensure that Mr. Pyle is not involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34.

3. Second, and related, we wish at the outset to raise an issue of very significant sensitivity and concern. It relates to a current police investigation. It would therefore be inappropriate to provide specific details of that investigation save as to the limited extent set out below (we address this further in section (d), as it is relevant to this invitation to retire). We know that the Chair is already aware of the background as it was discussed at his and Mr. McGrail's meeting on 22nd May, when he told Mr. McGrail it was discussed at the meeting when the Chief Minister and Governor said that they and the Attorney General had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. You will understand that it would not be appropriate for Mr. McGrail to provide more detail of a live investigation. However, we can say that it relates to national security and involves an alleged criminal conspiracy which potentially reaches to the highest levels of the community.

4. This is a further reason why it is essential that the Chair provide reassurance to us that Mr. Pyle will not be involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34. In addition, we suggest that it would be prudent for a further member of the GPA, Ms. Claire Pizzarello, to recuse herself from decision-making in this matter. We do not provide further details at this stage, and we trust that the Chair will agree that this would be a sensible course of action in the circumstances. (Should further information be required by the Chair, he should inform us of this.) We emphasise that there is no suggestion whatsoever of Ms. Pizzarello having any personal involvement in the matters in question, and this approach is suggested out of an abundance of caution.

(b) The legal framework

The Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 ('The Constitution')

5. Chapter 1 of the Constitution protects fundamental rights and freedoms. The Preamble states that the people of Gibraltar's right to self-determination must be "promoted and respected in conformity with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties". The European Convention on Human Rights is an "applicable international treaty".

6. The Constitution protects, amongst other rights, the right to privacy (section ('s') 7) and the right to freedom of expression (s.10).

7. The Constitution provides that there shall be a Police Authority for Gibraltar which "shall be independent in the exercise of its functions" (s.48(1)).

8. The 2006 Act establishes the GPA (section 3(1)).

9. Part I sets out the responsibilities and powers of the GPA. s. 5 relevantly includes responsibilities: "to secure the maintenance of an efficient and effective police force for Gibraltar", "to ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar", "to establish, operate and supervise the process for investigating complaints against police officers under this Act" and "to hold the Commissioner to account for matters which are the responsibility of the Authority.

10. Part II sets out the Governor's and the Government's responsibilities for policing. Section 13 provides for the Governor's powers "in default by the Authority", which are exercisable only where the Authority "has failed to discharge or perform a responsibility imposed on the Authority under this Act". The powers include "where in the opinion of the Governor the integrity, probity or independence of the police has been compromised or is at risk, to direct the Force to take appropriate action to remedy the situation or avoid the risk" and "to suspend from duty, or call for the resignation of the Commissioner".

11. Section 15(1) provides that the Chief Minister may exercise various powers on behalf of the Government, including (a) require factual or assessment reports from the Force or the Authority on any policing matter, provided that there may be withheld from any such report any fact disclosure of which is likely to prejudice the effective operation of the Force.

12. Part IV provides for the establishment of the Royal Gibraltar Police Force. Section 32(1) provides for the appointment of the Commissioner of Police by the Governor, acting on the advice of the Authority, subject to any provision of the Constitution; for such that the Authority may advise and as shall be set out in the instrument of appointment.

13. Section 33(1) provides that the Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service. (section 33(2)).

14. Section 34 provides for the removal of the Commissioner by the GPA. It is set out in full below:

> "34.(1) The Authority acting after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister and with the agreement of either of them, may call upon the Commissioner to retire, in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar.

(2) Before seeking the approval of the Governor and the Chief Minister under subsection (1), the Authority shall give the Commissioner an opportunity to make representations and shall consider any representations that he makes.

(3) Where the Commissioner is called upon to retire under subsection (1), he shall retire on such date as the Authority may specify or on such earlier date as may be agreed upon between him and the Authority."

Human rights

15. The European Convention on Human Rights protects the right to respect for private and family life under Article 8 and the right to freedom of expression under Article 10. Both rights can be interfered with by the state by certain situations but only where that interference is lawful, necessary and proportionate in pursuance of a legitimate aim.

16. The European Court of Human Rights and the Council of Europe (which oversees the European Court) have repeatedly emphasised that corruption threatens the rule of law. There have been a number of cases where sanctions imposed on whistleblowers have been found to breach Article 10 ECHR in cases involving the dismissal of public servants this has sometimes been articulated as an attack on reputation protected by Article 8 ECHR. As you will see below, the law relating to whistleblowers is relevant.

17. In Guja v. Moldova (No. 1)[2] the Grand Chamber held unanimously that there had been a violation of Article 10 (freedom of expression). The applicant was Head of the Press Department of the Moldovan Prosecutor General's Office. The case concerned his dismissal for giving a newspaper two letters received by the Prosecutor General's Office which disclosed interference by a high-ranking politician in pending criminal proceedings.

The Court balanced the conflicting factors under Art.10 and concluded there had been a breach.

> [72] ... The Court thus considers that the signalling by a civil servant or an employee in the public sector of illegal conduct or wrongdoing in the workplace should, in certain circumstances, enjoy protection. This may be called for where the employee or civil servant concerned is the only person, or part of a small category of persons, aware of what is happening at work and is thus best placed to act in the public interest by alerting the employer or the public at large.

18. Article 8 ECHR includes the right to protection of reputation.[3] As stated in Axel Springer AG v. Germany[4], judgment (Grand Chamber) of 7 February 2012, paras. 83-84:

> "... [T]he right to protection of reputation is a right which is protected by Article 8 of the Convention as part of the right to respect for private life ... In order for Article 8 to come into play, however, an attack on a person's reputation must attain a certain level of seriousness and in a manner causing prejudice to personal enjoyment of the right to respect for private life ...

19. The Council of Europe's Criminal Law Convention on Corruption ("the Corruption Convention") of 27th January 1999 states[5] in its pre-amble that "corruption threatens the rule of law, democracy and human rights, undermines good governance, fairness and social justice, distorts competition, hinders economic development and endangers the stability of democratic institutions and the moral foundations of society".

20. Each Party to the Corruption Convention shall adopt measures to ensure that persons or entities are specialised in the fight against corruption. They shall have the necessary independence in accordance with the fundamental principles of the legal system of the Party, in order for them to be able to carry out their functions effectively and free from any undue pressure.

21. The preamble to the Council of Europe Code of Police Ethics[6] states that "the criminal justice system plays a key role in safeguarding the rule of law and that the police have an essential role within that system". Paragraph 15 provides:

> The police shall enjoy sufficient operational independence from other state bodies in carrying out its given police tasks, for which it should be fully accountable.

22. Paragraph 34 states:

> Public authorities shall support police personnel who are subject to ill-founded accusations concerning their duties.

23. The Committee of Ministers' Recommendation on the protection of whistleblowers adopted on 30th April 2014 relevantly states in the preamble that "freedom of expression and the right to seek and receive information are fundamental for the functioning of a genuine democracy" and recognises that individuals who report or disclose information on threats or harm to the public interest, i.e. whistleblowers, can contribute to strengthening transparency and democratic accountability. Paragraph 21 states:

> Whistleblowers should be protected against retaliation of any form, whether directly or indirectly, by their employer and by persons working for or acting on behalf of the employer. Forms of such retaliation might include dismissal, suspension, demotion, loss of promotion opportunities, punitive transfers and reductions in or deductions of wages, harassment or other punitive or discriminatory treatment.

24. Protection from retaliation is clearly a matter of fundamental importance particularly when the potential victim is none other than the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar.

(c) The invitation to retire

25. On the morning of 22nd May 2020 Mr. McGrail met with the GPA Chair, when the Chair invited him to retire pursuant to s.34(1) of the 2006 Act.

26. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that he had met with the Governor and the Chief Minister on Monday 18th May and they had told him they had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. He said that he had taken notes of the meeting. It began with the Governor and Chief Minister taking him through the various options under the Police Act and focussing on section 13 (the power of the Governor to suspend from duty or call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the GPA has failed to discharge its duties) and section 34 (the GPA's power to remove the Commissioner from post).

27. The Chair made it very clear that he did not make this decision himself and that in his view the decision was entirely for the Governor and the Chief Minister to make. Although he said Mr. McGrail could make representations, it was made clear to him that if he does not take the offer of retirement then the Governor will trigger his power under s.13 to call for his resignation. It is in effect, an 'offer he can't refuse' – or, to put it another way, it is the equivalent, for an office-holder, of constructive dismissal.

28. It was also made clear to Mr. McGrail that the issue of his handling of the investigation referred to above was an important factor in the decision making by the Governor and Chief Minister. He said that the AG had all lost confidence in him because he had "lied" about the particular operation – which he strenuously denied.

29. At the time of the meeting none of the alleged issues with Mr. McGrail's conduct had been put in writing. When Mr. McGrail highlighted that this was unfair, the Chair offered to provide him with his notes of the 18th May meeting. Mr. McGrail asked for the reasons to be put in writing so he could properly respond.

30. At the meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed a letter containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s. 34(1) power ('the first letter'). This was a short letter which provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"), however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to s.34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". Mr. McGrail was given 7 days to respond to the initial letter (i.e. by today, 29th May – a period which included a long weekend) and invited to seek more time if required.

31. Mr. McGrail received a second letter late on Friday night, 22nd May, which provided more detail, relevantly stating:

    a. "the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar."

    b. "Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief

    c. Five "main issues" (in reality, these are four issues as two run together) were set out "contributing to the loss of confidence", including:

i. Efficiency: "The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear (sic) damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP...."

ii. "Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction."

iii. "I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident... [he has] expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you..."

iv. Effectiveness: that the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and will now be "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload".

v. Probity and integrity "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point...

vi. "additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings"

vii. "The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity."

viii. Independence: "This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service."

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Flaws

32. This process has been tainted from the outset by conspicuous unfairness, and it is grossly procedurally unfair. These flaws fall into the category described by Lord Bridge in Calvin v. Carr [1979] UKPC 1, [1979] 2 All ER 440: "when the defect is so flagrant, the consequences so severe, that the most perfect of appeals or rehearings will not be sufficient to produce a just result." The approach adopted here amounts to an attack on the Constitution, the rule of law and human rights principles, and it subverts the principle of separation of powers in a number of respects.

i. The Vanishing Reason for the Invitation to Retire

33. First, we indicated at the outset of this letter, when addressing the preliminary matter of recusal, that there is a sensitive matter concerning an ongoing criminal investigation, the detail of which Mr. McGrail does not address herein. The relevance of this issue to the invitation to retire is as follows. This matter was discussed in the 22nd May meeting as forming part of the reasoning behind the Chief Minister and the Governor informing the GPA Chair that he should invite Mr. McGrail to retire. Indeed, Mr. McGrail indicated at that meeting that he understood it to be the real and central reason for the request. However, this reason is, oddly, not cited in the second, detailed letter of 22nd May. Instead, that letter refers expressly only to two other matters – the incident at sea in March 2020 and the inspection report following the inspection in October 2019.

35. By contrast, in recent months, and particularly the past fortnight, Mr. McGrail has received very significant and at times intemperate private criticism from the Chief Minister and Attorney General about a separate matter, namely how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled. For many months the AG has been trying (unsuccessfully, we might add) to persuade Mr. McGrail to change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted. Mr. McGrail has rebuffed these attempts and has treated this investigation as he would any other - characteristic of his probity and professionalism. The operational decisions in respect of this investigation have, in any event, been taken by individual officers below Mr. McGrail's rank, acting professionally and appropriately.

36. On 12th May, out of courtesy, Mr. McGrail notified the Chief Minister, the AG and the Minister of Justice of a certain operational action which was taken by the RGP in the case. Both the Chief Minister and AG immediately messaged him to say, in no uncertain terms, that they disapproved of the action. He was immediately called into a meeting with the Chief Minister and the AG. He was very severely criticised for the action that had been taken. The Chief Minister told him that, in his view, Mr. McGrail had handled the investigation "very very wrongly". He was told by the AG that he had to this point approved of his work but from that day he could not "entertain" Mr. McGrail again. The emotional response from both the Chief Minister and the AG is startling.

37. This was followed by two subsequent meetings with the AG and Director of Public Prosecutions (on 13th and 15th May respectively) where pressure was put on Mr. McGrail by the AG to change the RGP's investigative approach to the operation and he was given the strong impression that the AG was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and "Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words).

38. It is grossly inappropriate in a jurisdiction under the Rule of Law for politicians to interfere with any live criminal investigation in this way. It tramples over the separation of powers which is an integral feature of our Constitution. However, in this case the Chief Minister has a personal connection to the outcome of the investigation, which makes his intervention even more inappropriate. Not only should he not attempt to influence the investigation, he should completely recuse himself for any decisions or conversations which touch upon it.

39. The reason it is relevant to your decision is that we submit to you that the timing of the use of the s.34 process, which was triggered by the Chief Minister and the Governor and, we understand, came as a complete surprise to the GPA Chair, strongly suggests that the incident at sea and inspection report are fig leaves for the real reason Mr. McGrail is being pressured to retire, i.e. his (proper and reasonable) handling of a live criminal investigation.

40. It is unnecessary for us merely to rely on an inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point. The GPA Chair confirmed to Mr. McGrail at their meeting on 22nd May that his handling of the criminal investigation referred to above was spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail. The Chair told Mr. McGrail he took a note of his meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor, which we assume he can provide to you for your consideration. It is wholly unclear why this matter is then omitted from the letters sent to Mr. McGrail on 22nd May – although a simple explanation is that it was obvious to those writing the letters that if it were included it would invalidate the entire process. This is a clear breach of the requirements of fairness in itself – this was a factor cited in the meeting on 22nd May, at which no written documents were given to Mr. McGrail, yet the letters omit this material factor.

41. Further, we note that a factor which is cited in the Chair's 22nd May second letter is the Attorney General being said to have "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail, for an unspecified reason: "Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings". The Chair made clear to Mr. McGrail at the 22nd May meeting that this was entirely because of the criminal investigation matter referred to above and it reflects the comments made to Mr. McGrail by him directly at the meeting on 12th May. In reality, it is clear that this incident is at the heart of this request under section 34, despite it not appearing in the second letter.

42. We note that in the Chair's second letter it is stated "the Governor and the Chief Minister ... consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised". Unfortunately, we agree with that statement, and that statement alone, but for significantly different reasons. If the GPA decides to exercise its s.34 power, in the full knowledge that background involves the Chief Minister and AG seeking to interfere with a live criminal investigation, this would indeed be an affront to the rule of law and a breach of your duties under the Constitution. This would be a gross violation of the rule of law, and not the actions of an independent body in a mature democracy.

ii. Independence

43. There are further serious procedural failings. It was made clear to Mr. McGrail at the meeting on 22nd May 2020 that the Chair was proceeding on the basis that this is a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and he has taken his lead from them. This is also clear from the first letter, which followed the meeting. This is a fundamental misunderstanding of the statutory scheme: the section 34 decision is for the Authority. It also disregards the vital importance of the independence of the Authority, enshrined in the Constitution, s. 48(1).

iii. A Settled Decision

44. The process followed on 22nd May is not compliant with section 34. The statute makes clear that submissions must be sought under section 34(2) before the section 34(1) process is followed. The Commissioner is entitled to be given an opportunity to make representations, and for them to be considered. For this to be a meaningful opportunity, the Authority must not have a closed mind. In this instance, however, the Authority Chair has called upon the Commissioner to retire (under section 34(1)), indicating that this decision has been reached already: "the Authority feels that it is left with no option but to exercise the powers afforded to the Authority under section 34(1)..." The wording used is unambiguous. This was clear at the meeting on 22nd May, and it is expressly set out in the first letter of that date.

45. The first letter is instructive. At this meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed this short letter, containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s.34(1) power. This was very brief and provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire based on the Governor and the Chief Minister's views ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"); however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to section 34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". This language, promising to take the submissions into consideration, cannot be squared with the fact that definitive language making clear that the Authority has already set out an invitation to retire under section 34(1).

46. This not only raises concerns under section 34. It also results in a process which is not compliant with the concept of natural justice. Mr. McGrail cannot be penalised by a decision which would have such a devastating impact upon him without him being given prior notice of the case he has to answer, and a fair opportunity to answer it. This has not been the case here.

iv. The Relevance of Section 13

47. At the meeting of 22nd May, the Chair informed Mr. McGrail that this was not a decision for him, but a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and that if he did not invite Mr. McGrail to retire under section 34 then the Governor would exercise his power under s. 13. The Chair made clear that this had informed the decision to trigger section 34. However, this is an extraordinary situation, raising very serious concerns, and it taints the section 34 decision. The entire point of section 13 is that it only applies when Authority is in default; it is not a mechanism for the Governor to simply use when he disagrees with the Authority, or when he disagrees with an action by the Police Commissioner, and nor is it a power which should be pre-emptively threatened in order to lean on the Authority to trigger section 34.

(e) Response to the issues raised in the letter

48. We have addressed above why we believe that this attempt to remove Mr. McGrail from post is a pretence which would not have occurred but for the Chief Minister and AG's criticism of his handling of a particular live investigation. However, it is of course important and necessary to respond directly to the two issues which are directly mentioned in the 22 May letter. We should emphasise that our client takes both the incident at sea and the inspection report extremely seriously, as can be seen by his immediate and continuing actions in response to them, however we do not accept, even arguably, that either issue could be the basis of the use of the section 34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from his post in the interests of "efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar".

Mr. McGrail's career to date

49. Before addressing the substantive issues, we want to give you some background about Mr. McGrail's career as a police officer. This is so that in considering the issues, you can do so in the context of his record, which can only be described as exemplary. Mr. McGrail has had a long, unblemished and distinguished career in the RGP for 36 years, having joined in 1984. In the first decade of his career he served in front-line policing, and following the "fast launch" public disturbances in the mid-1990s he had particular responsibility for uplifting RGP's capacity and capability in order and personal safety.

50. In 2006, he became the youngest and most junior inspector at the time to be promoted to Chief Inspector. From 2012 he was a Superintendent. In 2015 he was included in the Queen's Birthday State Honours list and was awarded the Overseas Territories Police

Medal for meritorious service. He has been awarded the Queen's Golden and Diamond Jubilee medals and the long service and good conduct medal with first and second clasps. And, as you know his record is exemplary. Mr. McGrail has numerous letters of appreciation throughout his career and been commended five times, including once by the Director of the United States Naval Criminal Investigation Service and on another by the Chief Justice of Gibraltar. All the commendations have been for meritorious investigative work leading to prosecutions. He has throughout his career sought to develop personally and professionally and attended the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy Programme for 3 months in Quantico, Virginia 2007 , is a Master of Science in Policing and Public Order with the University of Leicester and in 2013 attended the Strategic Command Course with the UK's College of Policing.

51. What has distinguished Mr McGrail is his dedication to service and ability to innovate and develop new ideas and working practices. In 1995 following the most severe riots in the last twenty years in Gibraltar, Mr McGrail was one of two officers tasked with reviewing and developing the RGP's response to public order situations. He went on to qualify as a public order instructor and also as a public order commander. He created and developed an RGP public order unit, commenced a training and development programme, which continues in the form he devised to this day.

52. His flair for innovation and openness to new working practices saw him create the Corporate Development department. Corporate development being a non-existent concept in the RGP at the time. Mr McGrail was instrumental in creating / drafting policies and guidelines in areas where they were required. In addition, he helped put procedures in place to improve the processes around the detention and custody of persons in police detention.

53. On 1st May 2018, Mr. McGrail was appointed as Commissioner of the RGP for a four-year term of warrant, on the advice of the GPA. In his letter of appointment, it was requested that the GPA conduct a review process against the objectives set out in the vision statement and action plan he provided to the Governor. This was supposed to take place two years into his term, which means it should be taking place now. In his letter, the Governor at the time, His Excellency General Edward Davis, said he looked forward to working closely with Mr. McGrail "as we all do our utmost to protect, progress and promote the Rule of Law in Gibraltar".

54. Since he took up the post of Commissioner, one of the first things he did was present to the Gibraltar Police Authority all the force policies for the Authority to ratify as required in law, something which had not been done previously. This is characteristic of his qualities of openness, transparency and accountability.

55. More recently he has been instrumental in the development of the Force Intelligence Unit, taking it from being a unit of limited capability to professional and proactive unit properly servicing the organisation. Mr McGrail's networking skills have enabled him to draw upon contacts in the U.S., Spain and the U.K. to enhance the RGP's intelligence exchange and law enforcement co-operation mechanisms with all these territories. Very significant cross border operations have been carried under his leadership attracting extensive positive media coverage. These efforts have also been recognised by the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General as it no doubt aids the building of relationships with the Kingdom of Spain in the post-Brexit era. Mr. McGrail is part of the Gibraltar law enforcement delegation to work on delivering the Brexit MOU on law enforcement co-operation with Spain. All these mentioned points have brought improvements to the quality of service delivered by the RGP.

56. In the organisational context Mr. McGrail has pushed for procedural and policy advancements. The RGP's total complement of officers results in officers such as Mr. McGrail having to embark on the tasks described on their own, without the benefit of a supporting team as would be the case in a UK mainland force. Further complicating the task is the distance between the RGP and mainland forces makes it impractical to regularly meet and consult colleagues engaged in similar projects to share experience and knowledge.

57. The year 2019 saw unprecedented levels of demand imposed on the RGP including a total of 85 major events, which included 13 Assemblies/demonstrations, 10 international football matches (including a top 3 with the most ultra-fan base in Europe, who were at the matches in numbers), European Elections, General Elections, Small Island Games that run for a full week, Grace 1 (the first time a vessel had been boarded for contravening EU sanctions), eight large scale music events, major social events such National Day, New Year's Eve Celebrations, the Festival of lights and 14 Public Military Events. Mr McGrail oversaw the planning and execution of all of these events all of which met with the operational aims and objectives. Public security and safety was successfully upheld.

58. He has also been responsible for, in just two years in post:

a. Adopting the UK Home Office counting rules for the recording of crime. The RGP's previous methods had been subject of criticism by HMIC for presenting overly favourable detection rates.;

b. Project Servator which is a community orientated counter-terrorism initiative;

c. Restructuring of the force to release police officers to core policing duties;

d. Restructuring and uplifting of the Economic Crime Unit ('ECU'), to incorporate a fraud and Anti Money Laundering Unit;

e. The creation of the RGP's first ever Wellbeing Strategy 2019/2022;

f. The creation of 16 Wellbeing Champions, spread throughout the force;

g. The creation of a bespoke Mental Health referral procedure with Ocean Views medical facility for all police officers and support staff. No other HMGOG department has this system in place;

h. Significant strides with PSN connectivity this is connectivity with the UK police service;

i. Partnership building and resources obtained through National Police Co-ordination Centre for Brexit contingency planning, Small Island Games & International football matches;

j. COVID-19 policing – which has seen restrictions in freedom of movement as never seen before in modern history.

59. Additionally, under Mr McGrail's leadership, the RGP has developed and implemented the following new policies and reviewed a further number of them. All of these have met the approval of the GPA:

a. 2018: Response Team Leader Policy (new), Gifts and Hospitality Policy (new), Alcohol and Substance Abuse Policy (new), Taser Policy (New)

b. 2019: Transfer Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Management of Exhibits (Reviewed & Amended); Domestic Violence (Reviewed & Amended); Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Mobile Device Policy (New).

c. 2020: Caution policy (Reviewed & Amended), Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Bullying Policy (New); Grievance policy and Procedure (New); Compromised Persons Policy (New); Mental Wellbeing Policy New (No police service in the UK has this).

60. During Mr. McGrail's tenure, there has been an 8.3% reduction in crime, a 33% reduction in repeat victimisation, a 33% reduction in repeat offending and a 54% detection rate. These statistics are enviable to any UK police service. Additionally, during his tenure, a good level of public satisfaction has been maintained and in certain areas improved, according to your own public consultation surveys. He has, most recently, appeared on live television delivering public information bulletins for COVID-19 crisis on four occasions: on 9th April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 21st April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 3rd May and Minister of Justice and on the 10th May with the Minister of Justice again. If the Government or Chief Minister had lost confidence in his abilities you might reasonably ask why he was allowed to give these important briefings to the whole of Gibraltar.

61. Further, and for the sake of completeness, we remind you of Mr. McGrail's success in promoting international law enforcement cooperation, in an area which has been fraught with difficulties in the past, has been recognised by both the Spanish National Police and the Guardia Civil who have nominated Mr. McGrail for the "La Cruz de la Orden del Mérito Policial con distinctivo Blanco" and "La Orden del Mérito de la Guardia Civil con distinctivo" medals respectively. This is of course unprecedented and underscores the high esteem with which Mr. McGrail is held by his international colleagues in Spain.

The incident at sea

62. On 8th March 2020 at around 03:38 an incident occurred involving a collision at sea between an RGP patrol craft and a smuggling vessel. Two people on the smuggling vessel, Dris Mohamed and Abdeselam Ahmed, reportedly both Spanish nationals, died in the incident and two were injured. The incident occurred outside of British Gibraltar Territorial Waters ('BGTW').

63. The March 2020 incident is raised by the 22 May letters in two ways: in itself ("the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction"); and in respect of communication (the Governor "expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you" and raises concerns that he has "no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident...").

64. As regards the unfortunate incident itself, there is no explanation as to why it is suggested that the actions of individual officers reflect on Mr. McGrail or are indicative of a systemic pattern of acting beyond the remit and jurisdiction of the RGP. There is no particularity at all, meaning it is impossible to respond in any detail save to say that at Mr. McGrail responded to the incident with his usual integrity and transparency. It is simply bizarre to claim that the Governor and Chief Minister have lost confidence in Mr. McGrail because they blame him for the incident itself when (a) at the time of the meeting with the Chair and the 22 May letters the Chief Minister had requested, but had not received, a response to the detailed request for information which was sent to him on 21 May this was the first such request Mr. McGrail has received, and (b) at that time they had not received (and still have not received) the independent report which is being carried out by the Metropolitan Police and was commissioned within days by Mr. McGrail himself or the conclusive report of the independent marine accident expert.

65. A further example is given relating to the RGP being without the use of a vessel, and thus being, "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload". Again, there is no indication as to why this would justify the exceptional step of inviting the Commissioner to retire, and, indeed, this would not address the issue regarding the vessel. In any event, the proposition that the effectiveness of the marine section has been compromised is nonsense. The RGP's Marine Section has resilience. It has other vessels and the fact that one of them has been out of service because of the collision has not hampered capabilities.

66. In any event, it is for the GPA to reach an independent decision in respect of this issue. We submit that it would be highly unfair and contrary to the principles of natural justice for the GPA to pre-emptively blame Mr McGrail for this incident, prior to a detailed consideration of the independent report from the Metropolitan Police. However, and in any event, the fact that the alleged 'loss of confidence' it is so obviously premature and pre-emptive further proves the point we make above that the real motives behind the action by the Governor and Chief Minister are not this incident. Rather, this incident is serving as a pretext, although on any analysis not a convincing one.

67. As regards communication, we understand that the Section 15 reply (sent shortly before these submissions) comprehensively debunks the suggestion that there was inadequate communication. Mr. McGrail messaged the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General within two hours of the emergency response group being convened and kept them fully informed throughout, promptly responding to all requests for information. He subsequently met with the Attorney General on 17th March to develop a working strategy to deal with the consequences of the incident, which the AG agreed to. He further briefed the AG on 18 March on the progress of the Metropolitan Police investigation. The Metropolitan Police team was also in direct contact with the Governor. On 22nd March Mr. McGrail again met with the Attorney General and DPP to discuss the potential civil legal action arising from the incident. The AG did not want to consider further strategy until the Metropolitan Police's report findings had been received. This has still not been received despite many requests to expedite it the Covid 19 Crisis in the UK has taken its toll on policing as in many other areas of business. A marine investigator's report has also been commissioned and is currently being finalised. The simple point here is that it is premature to reach any conclusions in relation to this incident and it would be highly unfair to dismiss Mr. McGrail on the basis of a wholly unparticularised and vague accusation such as this.

68. In relation to the suggestion that Mr. McGrail has misled the Governor, this is not particularised; it is a vague slur, without explanation. We do not know what it refers to. If it relates to the incident taking place in Spanish waters, it is not possible to follow the rationale. In any event, the Governor was promptly and fully briefed by Mr McGrail on that issue and Mr. McGrail understands that the Metropolitan Police team, who were conducting an independent investigation, also briefed the Governor's office.

69. A further slur is included in relation to Mr. McGrail's "probity and integrity," phrased in a hopelessly vague way, without specificity: "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity - the maritime incident is one case in point..." Reference is made to the Attorney General, but as we have submitted above this could only refer to the criminal investigation, as the Chair also informed Mr. McGrail.

The HMICFRS Report

70. The claim that confidence in Mr. McGrail's ability to do his job has been lost to a lack of efficiency on the part of the RGP, based on the findings of the HMICFRS, does not stack up. As can be seen from the above, Mr. McGrail has a long and distinguished career. His term as Commissioner has been busy and successful. It is simply absurd to accuse him of failing to take proactive steps to address systemic issues which were identified in the 2016 report, two years before he commenced in office.

71. As regards efficiency, the inspection report is clear that there are long-standing problems, which were identified in the previous (2016) inspection report, have not been fully addressed by the time of the October 2019 inspection. Mr. McGrail had by that time only been in post for a little over a year, and it is simply not credible to suggest that these flaws can and should be laid at his door. Further, during his short period in office prior to the inspection he had to address the July 2019 arrest and investigation of the Iranian Oil Tanker "Grace 1" which was an extraordinary incident, managed by the RGP and supported by the Royal Marines, and which attracted widespread acclaim (see the brief reference at p. 13 of the report).

72. In addition, the report makes clear in respect of efficiency that the RGP is in need of additional resources, from the Government/ FCO.

73. Insofar as it is suggested that Mr. McGrail did not set up a working group, his response is that as a result of the unprecedented demand placed on the RGP during 2019, the RGP has been addressing the issues raised in the Report by merging them in daily work practices. This can be seen by the initiatives referred to above and the results achieved. In addition, as you know Mr. McGrail has provided the Authority and the Minister of Justice with a comprehensive road map for implementing the 2020 report. These have both been agreed to be the proper procedure and no concerns have been raised. Indeed, some of the recommendations in the Report have since been met and the others are in progress. It would simply be irrational to conclude that this approach would justify forcing him to take early retirement.

74. It is of note that the 22nd May letter was the first Mr. McGrail has heard that either the Chief Minister or Governor - or indeed any member of the Government - lays blame for any of the issues identified in the report with him. None of the conversations he has had around the report have reflected the 22nd May letter which again raises the strong inference that this issue is being used as a pretence to mask the real reason for attempting to remove Mr. McGrail. For example, the Minister for Justice, Samantha Sacramento MP, messaged him on 29 April to say the report "is shocking reading on the face of it, but if you analyse it deeper it's not that bad, and it's has easy solutions" and "it can all be fixed don't worry". This message reflected the tone and content of the communications around the report. There have also been a number of very recent articles in the press which highlight the exceptional nature of the RGP given the unusually wide range of issues it has to deal with – from drug smuggling and international fraud to world diplomatic incidents involving maritime vessels and the potential unfairness of applying the same standards as apply to other forces to such an unusual jurisdiction.

75. In addition, we note that an article in the Gibraltar Chronicle of the 28th May 2020 by an independent journalist, Mr. James Neish, who is intimately aware of the work of the RGP, suggests that the Report may have unfairly minimised the unique demands made of the RGP and which it responds to successfully for the most part. The article is titled "It's always easier to judge from a distance".

76. As stated above, the GPA must reach an independent conclusion in respect of this issue. It has not carried out the 2-year performance review requested by the Governor at the time of Mr. McGrail's appointment. We submit that there is a complete lack of evidence of Mr. McGrail's culpability for any of the issues highlighted by the inspection report. He has, in any event, taken extensive steps to improve and modernise the RGP. It would therefore be grossly unfair to conclude that, having been in post just over a year before the inspection,

Mr. McGrail is sufficiently blameworthy for the conclusions of the inspection report such that he should be forced to retire "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar". However, and in any event, in order to reach such a conclusion it would be necessary for the GPA to carry out a full and fair review into Mr. McGrail's record during his time in post.

Conclusion

77. For the reasons stated above there is no possible, valid reason for the GPA to exercise its s.34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from office. The only rational decision for the GPA to reach is to dismiss the request of the Governor and Chief Minister. In any event, the defects in this process are already so flagrant that it would not be possible to reach a just result unless it is to allow Mr. McGrail to remain in post.

Yours faithfully,

Charles Gomez
Charles Gomez & Co

HM Government of Gibraltar

THE CHIEF MINISTER

Dr J J Britto
Chairman
Gibraltar Police Authority
Unit 25B Casemates Square
Gibraltar

5th June 2020

Dear Joey,

Re: Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company, on behalf of the Commissioner of Police to the Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority ("the Letter").

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the Letter. Your having done so serves two purposes. Firstly, it fairly provides me with an opportunity to respond to the very serious and vile allegations made against me by the Commissioner of Police ("COP"). Secondly, it gives the Authority the opportunity to have whatever regard it considers appropriate to my response when it makes its further decisions (if any) in relation to its invitation to the COP to retire.

Let me say at the very outset that serious as they are, the COP's allegations against me are completely untrue. Like any other person who values the rule of law (of which the independence of operational policing is a key element), I would be the first to admire the courage of a COP who fearlessly makes a stand in defence of the independence of policing and its freedom from political interference. It would be a relief to know that our police force was under such leadership.

t +350 20070071 f +350 20076396 e cm@gibraltar.gov.gi w gibraltar.gov.gi

However, this does not provide the COP with licence to elevate the product of his apparently fertile imagination, and the consequent speculative inferences which it leads him to make, to the status of fact, as he does. Still less does it entitle the COP to make (on the basis of such speculation as to the motives of each of them), the very grave allegations that he makes against all of His Excellency the Governor, the Chief Minister, the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions. It seems to me that such allegations could only properly be made and justified if supported by credible evidence. They are not, as they cannot be because they are untrue. For that reason, they are a fanciful nonsense which self evidently serves to vividly illustrate why the COP is undeserving of my confidence.

I wish to make clear that I stand by and ratify everything that I have previously said to you about my loss of confidence in the COP, and the reasons for it. To those reasons I would now add the extraordinary nature and content of the Letter, on the basis of which my loss of confidence in the COP is further increased and cemented. Furthermore, it is not immediately clear to me how the COP can preside over the efficiency and effectiveness of the RGP in the light of the obvious breakdown of his relationship with each of the Governor, the Government (myself and all other members of my Cabinet), the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions that necessarily results from the contents of the Letter.

You will have seen in this regard the letter dated 3 June 2020 addressed to you by His Excellency the Governor which His Excellency has shared with me. Of further significance arising from this letter is the entirely unjustified and reckless nature of the allegation against the Governor, who was not at the material time even aware of the criminal investigation interference which is alleged to justify the COP's allegations against him. Yet, such is the nature of the Letter. I made His Excellency aware of that investigation at the same time as I referred the matter to you. I did so in a spirit of complete transparency.

I am, of course, not accountable to the Authority for my conduct as Chief Minister. Nevertheless, from a position of institutional respect for the GPA as the statutory body responsible for ensuring the independence of policing in Gibraltar, your role in respect of section 34 of the Police Act, and indeed deference to its members, I set out below my response to the COP's allegations in so far as they concern me.

The allegations levelled against me by the COP could not be more serious in nature. He accuses me of corruptly (see para 16- 22) interfering with the conduct by the RGP of a criminal investigation, in an unprecedented "abuse of power", motivated by a wish to retaliate against him (see paras 23 and 24) and a "personal connection with the outcome of the investigation" (para 38). He further accuses me of lying to the Authority about the "real reasons" for "pressuring" the COP to retire which he describes as a "a pretence" (para 48), "a pretext" (para 66) and "fig leaves" for the real reason which he declares to be a desire on my part to impede the COP's proper and reasonable handling of a live criminal investigation (para 39) and, which latter (asserted by him) reason is (as candidly stated by Mr Gomez at para 33) "the real and central reason for the request". In other words, I stand accused by the COP of all of outright dishonesty, wholly improper (indeed potentially unlawful) interference with the RGP and corruption.

Not content to level these grave allegations against me without a shred of evidence to support them, the COP has the temerity to declare that it is unnecessary for him "merely to rely on any inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point" because (according to the COP) during your meeting on 22 May you confirmed to him that I had told you that his handling of "the criminal investigation" was "spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had lost confidence in Mr McGrail." This is relied on as some sort of "smoking gun" that puts his grave accusations beyond doubt or somehow justify his making them (para 40).

In the context of all the above, that he also accuses me of undermining the rule of law, that my conduct is 'an affront to the rule of law' and of seeking to "direct you" in your decisions (second para on page 2), serious as they are in themselves, pale into relative insignificance.

The COP's allegations are entirely untrue, and the manner in which he describes such interaction as there has been between us is so distorted as to be obvious that it would mislead the Authority.

Let me be absolutely clear, I have at no time or in any manner sought to interfere with the RGP's conduct of the criminal investigation in question in any manner of for any purpose, including (but not limited to) my alleged "personal connection with the outcome of the investigation". That personal connection is, presumably, the fact that Mr James Levy QC, whose conduct is apparently under investigation, is the senior partner of Hassans, a law firm of which I am also a partner although presently on a sabbatical.

At no time have I sought to intervene in or interfere to prevent Mr Levy being investigated or to prevent a search warrant being obtained and executed against him at the offices of Hassans, facts which I first learned about as they were already happening, that is, as the search warrant was being enforced at the offices of Hassans and at Mr Levy's home. This can be best illustrated by reference to the fact that at 12:25 pm on the 12th May 2020 I received a "Whats App" from the COP in which he said to me "CM- before you hear it from anyone else I want to inform you that detectives are executing a search warrant at Hassan for (JL) in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez".

I responded at 12.34 in the following terms:
"Ian, Thank you for the courtesy of this information. I think that is a bad decision. A search should only have been sought if you believed that the person in question was not going to cooperate and will try to destroy evidence. If, as you say, you are hoping for cooperation, especially in a case involving a senior Silk and head of Gibraltar's largest legal firm, you should, in my view, first have sought to contact that person and obtain cooperation. Given my close personal relationship with JL, I won't comment further."

The COP replied at 12:35 as follows: "Noted CM".

I repeated that view to the COP during a meeting at my office in No 6 later on the same on day, coinciding with his presence in No 6 in connection with a Covid planning meeting in the basement of No 6. I also made it abundantly clear to him that my reaction would have been identical had he taken the same action against any other senior member of the Gibraltar Bar, all of whom, like him, are officers of the court with the legal and ethical obligations consequent to that status. These are the messages and the meeting to which the COP refers, in terms that I do not recognise, in paragraph 36 of the Letter.

The above is the full extent of my communications with the COP or the RGP in relation to the "criminal investigation" since then.

In so far as concerned my alleged motives for doing so, i.e. my personal connection with the outcome of the investigation, the accusation made against me is not sustainable even on the COP's case. In his Whats App at 12:25 (as the events were occurring) he told me that the warrant obtained and executed against Mr Levy was "in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez". So, when I expressed the view that I did 9 minutes later at 12:34, I had no reason to believe that the investigation was of Mr Levy.

In fact, I am clearly entitled to express the views that I did in the above manner. That does not constitute interfering with the investigation in the grave manner of the allegations made, or at all. I am entitled to express my views to the COP on matters of policing policy in Gibraltar. I did not prevent the obtaining or the execution of the search warrant, both of which had already occurred. I have made no attempt to secure an end to those investigations, against Mr Levy or anyone else. Indeed, when I discovered that one of the persons under investigation was a civil servant, I directed the Chief Secretary that HMGOG should be a complainant to the police in the investigation, which duly occurred. Therefore, the notion that I was motivated by concern for the outcome of the investigation in so far as concerned my alleged personal connection with it is therefore simply unsustainable, as the COP well knows. This was an investigation in which I had insisted my Government should be a complainant (ie the entity whose interests may have been criminally damaged) and in respect of a National Security facility which I had been instrumental in creating in the public interest of Gibraltar. It is remarkable that the COP could even believe, less still suggest to others, that I might want to interfere with such an investigation.

In my opinion, the obtaining and execution of a search warrant which the COP referred me to in his Whats App in such circumstances (such as I described in my own Whats App response to the COP) is of dubious legality, abusive, unprecedented in policing in Gibraltar, incompatible with public confidence in policing and the good name and reputation of Gibraltar as a business and finance centre. It is noteworthy in this regard that these are policy matters in which, as Chief Minister, I have a legitimate interest, and that in the event of the RGP being sued for the unlawful obtaining and execution of a search warrant, it is HMGOG that has to bear the financial consequences.

Be all the above as it may, serious as they are, and as the COP also well knows, those are not the reasons why I have further lost confidence in him by virtue of this criminal investigation. I have not lost confidence in him because he obtained and executed a search warrant in circumstances in which I believe it was inappropriate to do so. Nor is the reason "how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled" (para 35, and elsewhere in the Letter). The primary reason is that the COP has clearly lied to me.

During the meeting to which I refer above, the COP stated to me in explicit terms, in response to my concerns about the propriety of the warrant, that he had obtained and executed the search warrant against Mr Levy in reliance on legal advice from the Director of Public Prosecutions who had confirmed that it was appropriate to seek such a warrant and proceed in that way. I have since determined that this categorical statement from the COP, clearly designed to suggest to me that my views as to the law were wrong and he / his officers had acted properly (and not compromised the investigation or exposed HMGOG to potential claims for civil damages) was wholly untrue. In fact, it is now clearly established that at no time did the COP or the RGP obtain legal advice from the DPP to that effect, a fact which the COP has now acknowledged in writing to Hassans (and has been separately confirmed to me by the DPP). This is unacceptable to me and goes to the COP's probity and integrity in his dealings with me, and to my ability to have confidence in him. This is unrelated to the nature, direction or conclusion which the investigation might take or reach (which I have been supportive of from the beginning, continue to be and have caused my Government to be a complainant for), as that continues to take its course. The COP has understood that, as evident from the fact that the investigation in question has not been affected in any way and has, rightly, continued unabated.

Additionally, I cannot accept the COP's statements in relation to his briefings to me about the "incident at sea". This was an incident with extremely serious external political consequences and very material potential financial consequences to the Government. I have, since our original discussion, already had to answer questions in the Parliament on this matter and there has been additional media reporting related to it both before and arising from my answer (including on the Spanish national broadcaster, RTVE). It has been the established practice for at least 50 years that Commissioners of Police keep the Chief Minister of the day fully, timeously and spontaneously informed, in detail about incidents of that kind. Had COP properly done so in this case it would not have been necessary for me to exercise the Chief Minister's powers under section 15 of the Police Act for the first ever time, as I confirmed to the Parliament. His Excellency the Governor has complained of the very same thing.

I have already taken you through my deep concerns in relation to the report from HM Inspectorate of Constabulary, which are also deeply concerning to me and relate to the efficacy and effectiveness of the RGP, both of which are the direct, legal responsibility of the COP under the Police Act.

Nothing in the Letter from the COP raises any real issue of interference with the independence of policing in Gibraltar, and the COP cannot raise imaginary allegations to escape the fact that he has lost the confidence of every relevant authority in Gibraltar, and the proper consequences thereof. His allegations are untrue and are based entirely on speculation on his part as to everyone's motives for forming the views of him that they have. It is in itself wholly improper that he should make such spurious and damaging allegations without evidence commensurate with their gravity (or indeed any evidence). This now also goes to my further lack of confidence in the COP.

Please do not hesitate to ask me to clarify any matter that it would be of assistance to the Authority that I explain further.

With very best wishes,

Dear Mr. Chairman

Re: Invitation to Retire – section 34 Police Act.

I would like to thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29 May 2020 sent to you by Mr Charles Gomez, acting on behalf of the Commissioner of Police ("CoP"), on the above-captioned matter (the "Letter").

A number of matters and allegations in the Letter concern me, either directly or indirectly. My position within the GPA (paras 1-4 of the Letter) is one which I assume you will be addressing yourself in the GPA's reply to Mr Gomez. In any event, as you are aware, I wrote to you on 19 February 2020 explaining how I thought we could proceed during such time as I was acting as Governor. For clarity, all my communications with you since 19 February 2020 have been as Governor and NOT as a member of the GPA. attached

With regard to the remaining contents of the Letter, I would like to address only two specific points at this stage. What I say is without prejudice to further information that I would be happy and able to provide if it were considered necessary to do so. Silence on any point made in Letter is not be interpreted as my acquiescence to any of them.

1. The relevance of the ongoing criminal investigation and its timing.

The first issue is the offensive assertion that my lack of confidence in the CoP, and therefore my conviction that he lacks both probity and integrity, is based on the RGP's handling of the so-called ongoing criminal investigation.

My deep concerns with the CoP's leadership qualities have absolutely nothing to do with that investigation. The already-existing concerns that I have had with the CoP were confirmed by the incident at sea (March 2020) and the HMIC Report (published in May 2020).

In relation to the former, the seriousness of the incident of 8 March 2020 does not require explanation. By its own, it has raised grave concerns with wide-reaching political, financial, reputational and sovereignty implications. They raise very serious concerns about the leadership at the RGP.

Furthermore, I suspected at the time of the immediate aftermath of the incident that the CoP's disclosure of information to me was evasive in particular in relation to the critical issue of whether or not the incident had occurred within BGTW. I know that when the CoP was telling me that it was not clear where the incident had occurred, he was informing the Chief Minister that the incident had indeed occurred outside BGTW. Indeed, it occurred some 7.5 nautical miles beyond Gibraltar's baseline and therefore well outside BGTW. I find this evasiveness on a key issue to demonstrate a total lack of respect to the office of Governor particularly since the CoP knew that this was the crucial issue for me and for both the UK and Gibraltar Governments as far as diplomatic relations with Spain were concerned.

In relation to the latter, on 30 April 2020, after having seen a draft of the Report, I wrote to the Chief Minister saying that I found the Report to be "quite damning". Indeed, the day before, I had written to you saying that I did not think that the Report should be published.

I was informed, for the first time, of the very existence of the criminal investigation referred to in the Letter on 15 May 2020 (when the matter was raised with me for information by the Chief Minister, as he thought it right to disclose this to me as we considered matters related to the RGP and CoP).

I want to be clear, therefore, that my lack of confidence in the CoP's probity and integrity, and my conviction that the rule of law is compromised by the fact that I have lost confidence in him, therefore clearly arose well before I was aware of that criminal investigation. It is incorrect and untrue for anyone to suggest otherwise.

For Mr Gomez to therefore suggest, through conjecture and assumption, that the incident at sea and the HMIC Report were "fig leaves for the real reason Mr McGrail is being pressured to retire" (para 39) is an outrageous accusation which I bitterly resent and strongly object to. It is clearly not borne out by the facts and chronology as expressed above. In addition, for Mr Gomez to suggest that I had been aware of the incident at sea and the HMIC Report "for months" (para 34) is a wholly inaccurate statement which may mislead the GPA.

As a final point on this issue, I would also like to reiterate that these two incidents occurred on the back of a growing unease that I had been feeling over the months, in particular with the numerous allegations of bullying and mismanagement that I had picked up on. I have also been gravely concerned by the potential for corruption identified in the HMIC Report which has, tellingly, remained unaddressed by the CoP, despite his lawyer's response casting aspersions and allegations of corruption against others.

The CoP is the person who is ultimately responsible and accountable for all the actions and behaviour of the RGP, including those stated above.

2. The contents and allegations made in the Letter.

The second issue I must address is the tone and content of the Letter. I must place on record that the allegations made in the Letter that I am (or may be) interfering with the independence of the GPA, that I am (or may be) compromising the rule of law in Gibraltar and participating in a plot to discredit the CoP or influence the ongoing criminal investigation are entirely untrue and nothing short of a most scurrilous attack on my integrity. I find such allegations to be malicious and entirely misplaced. I strenuously refute them and hold each one up as a further demonstration of good reason for my lack of confidence in the CoP and my concerns about his probity and integrity.

To conclude, I communicate to you as Governor that, for all the above stated reasons, the content, tone and style of the Letter have done nothing but cement my lack of confidence in the CoP and my concerns about the integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar in addition to the matters I have already communicated to you as Governor.

Yours sincerely

Dear Joey,

Re: Commissioner of Police - Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29th May 2020 that you have received from Charles Gomez and Co representing the Commissioner of Police ("COP"), Ian McGrail ("the letter").

I have no formal role under the Police Act in relation to the matters currently before the Authority for consideration. Therefore, whilst my views about the COP are relevant only in so far as the Authority wishes to have regard to them, I cannot allow the Authority's record to stand unrebutted on the basis of the untrue and scurrilous allegations made by the COP. Thank for giving me the opportunity to do so.

The letter makes important and very serious allegations against me, namely, that I have improperly, corruptly and in abuse of my powers "interfered" with an ongoing criminal investigation by:

(i) privately subjecting the COP to "significant and at times intemperate private criticism" about how the criminal investigation has been handled; and
(ii) trying "for many months" to persuade COP to "change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted".

In support of those statements it is said that I have feigned loss of confidence in the COP as a means of disguising my alleged real objective which is said to be, effectively, to "nobble" the investigation and prosecution to which the investigation relates, and that in some way, this should be deduced from

The Attorney General
t +350 20051731 e michael.llamas_QC@gibraltar.gov.gi w gibraltar.gov.gi

issues relating to "timing" of actions by others and the allegation (also denied by me) that I have reacted with "startling" emotion and consequential insinuation that this is apt to sustain the fantastic allegations made against me by the COP. I hasten to say that each of them is untrue and without merit or justification.

Part of the narrative of the COP's allegations against me is that I apparently gave him "the strong impression that I was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and 'Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words)". I am not aware that the Chief Minister is a person in need of protection in the context of the criminal investigation in question. In so far as concerns the fact that I was primarily concerned with protecting "Gibraltar PLC' (which is vernacular for the public interest of Gibraltar) that is absolutely correct. That is my constitutional role and my job (a fact that the COP, and those advising him appear to overlook).

At a personal level, I deeply regret (because I have always enjoyed excellent working and personal relations with him) to have to say that I cannot recognise the truth in the statements and allegations that COP now makes in the letter. They are untrue.

I have a constitutional role both in relation to prosecutions (I have ultimate responsibility and control over them) and for the rule of law (I am the guardian of the laws of Gibraltar and compliance with them). This is important because it renders proper interventions by me which may not be proper if engaged in by others. What the COP is effectively doing, on the basis of pure speculation and assumption on his part, is to cast the gravest aspersions on my motives for my statements, views and actions.

I should comment also that, in any event, the COP is not (as he appears to believe) immune to having his actions "strongly disapproved of" or being "severely criticised for them". Yet he equates both to the improper interference with the conduct of a criminal investigation and a violation of police independence. This, worryingly, shows lack of understanding and judgment by the COP.

Because of my roles described above, and also the fact that I am the Crown's (in all its facets, including the RGP) principal legal adviser in Gibraltar, it has always been customary for the COP and the RGP to seek the Attorney General's advice and to discuss ongoing investigations with him, whenever that is required. Mr McGrail has done so, both before and after becoming COP.

Contrary to what the letter says, I have never said that the COP lied to me. What I have told him is that he has incurred in a serious breach of my trust (which I explain below) as a result of which I have lost confidence in him.

I turn now to what has actually occurred. I first became aware of this criminal investigation on the 11 May 2019, when I received an email from the COP (sent also to the Chief Minister, Minister of Justice, the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the DPP) asking to meet with us urgently to brief us in relation to certain information that they had obtained in that criminal investigation. That meeting took place on Monday 13 May 2019. At that meeting, or shortly thereafter, I became aware that James Levy QC had shares in one of the companies involved in that dispute and that he was mentioned in communications with the three suspects and was potentially a person of interest to the investigation.

Far from seeking to intervene or interfere for that reason, I had no further involvement with the criminal investigation until over 11 months later when, in early-April 2020, the DPP called me to discuss the Government's position in relation to the ongoing issues about the ownership of a computer platform and its software that HMGOG uses, to which the criminal investigation related.

During that discussion the DPP explained to me that the RGP had drawn up a list of 76 charges (some of which could be impacted by the question of ownership of the platform) and that the RGP were thinking of issuing search warrants against Mr James Levy QC. I was alarmed, both by the number of charges (which would be quite inappropriate in any prosecution) and also by the proposal to obtain and issue a search warrant against a senior lawyer without first seeking voluntary co-operation or voluntary production of evidence. My concern was not because of any sense that lawyers should be exempt from this mechanism, rather it was (as would be the case of any person) that such warrants should reflect the reality of the risk of destruction of evidence unless the person is taken by surprise, or the refusal of the person to provide the evidence voluntarily. Not only can that not be assumed against any person, still less a practising lawyer, but Mr Levy had been aware of the RGP's interest in him for many months, and had had plenty of opportunity to destroy evidence if he were minded or inclined to do so. I have a legitimate public interest role and function (indeed, a responsibility) in respect of both these matters.

I asked to meet with the COP in relation to these two matters, and we did so on 7th April 2019. In that meeting I advised him of my concern about the need to obtain clarity on the issue of ownership of the computer platform since it was clear that that issue would likely have an impact on at least some of the proposed charges, and I also told him that I was worried about the overall number (76) charges, which seemed wholly excessive, not to say absurd. I reminded him of the general wisdom of focusing the

The outcome of that discussion was that we reached a clear understanding that the the RGP would not take any further action until they had considered my advice about the rationalisation of the charges, and then the COP would come back to see me again. It was clear beyond peradventure that nothing would happen until we met again. The next I hear (from COP himself, as it was happening) was that RGP officers were in the process of executing search warrants against Mr Levy at the offices of Hassans and at his home.

I have never said anything to the COP which can be interpreted as anything other than advice and assistance, as has always been the practice. The COP is of course free to take whatever action he considers lawful and appropriate regardless of any advice that I may give him on the matter, and he did so. He unquestionably has that right. What the COP cannot do, and also expect to retain my personal confidence, is to act contrary to an understanding reached between us, as he has done. This, and not my disapproval of his actions (even though I think that they were ill advised), is the reason for my loss of confidence in him.

I have made it explicitly clear to the COP throughout that the conduct of the investigation (including the seeking and execution of search warrants) are, whatever I may advise him, operational matters entirely for him. Nothing that I have ever said to the COP or any other member of the RGP has been even remotely open to the possible (mis)interpretation that I have advised or encouraged, still less that I have interfered to bring about or try to bring about, the curtailment of the investigation, how it is carried out by the RGP or to prevent any person from being charged. It is outrageously wrong and unfair for the COP to allege that I have (let alone that I have done so repeatedly over an extended period of time) and I am shocked and deeply resent that he has done so. This necessarily deepens my loss of confidence in him going forward.

I remain at the Authority's disposal for anything with which I may be able to assist it further by way of clarification or further explanation.

Yours Sincerely,

Michael Llamas QC

Your Excellency

Re: Complaints made by you and the Chief Minister against the Commissioner of Police

I refer to the complaints made verbally to me as Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority on 18th May, 2020, by you and the Chief Minister against the Commissioner of Police.

The Authority commenced a process under section 34 of the Police Act in accordance with a decision taken at a meeting of the Authority held on 21st May, 2020. The decision was taken by five members of the Authority personally present at the meeting and four others by telephone after the meeting. The only member who did not participate was you, who as Governor, was one of the complainants. Pursuant to this decision, on 22nd May, 2020, I, on behalf of the Authority, invited the Commissioner to retire. I did this at a meeting with him held on 22nd May, 2020, at the Commissioner's office followed up by two letters to him that same day. In my second letter I stated the grounds advanced to me by you and the Chief Minister for your respective loss of confidence in him. I also invited him to make representations which we would consider before taking a final decision.

On 29th May, 2020, Charles Gomez & Company wrote to the Authority attacking the process on the grounds of fundamental unfairness, abuse of process and procedural flaws. Bias was not expressly alleged but it was impliedly so given that the Authority was accused of effectively doing what the you and the Chief Minister wanted and reaching a decision without considering representations by the Commissioner.

We have taken independent legal advice and have been advised that the process which we have adopted under section 34 of the Police Act is fundamentally flawed and should be withdrawn. However, we are also advised that the complaints by you and the Chief Minister remain live and have to be determined. We have also been advised that the Authority, as presently constituted, is vulnerable to challenge on the grounds of bias. The Authority considers that as presently constituted it is unable to process the complaints without being vulnerable to legal challenge and is not therefore prepared to do so.

Yours faithfully

Dear Commissioner

Thank you for coming to see my yesterday.

During our discussion you handed to me a copy of an email dated 5 June from Charles Gomez to James Neish under the subject "Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act." I have now read that email and note the final 14 words which state "our client feels he must apply for early retirement from the Royal Gibraltar Police."

This matter is of course directly relevant to me as it is the Governor who, under S 32.(1) of the Police Act 2006 and acting on the advice of the Authority, appoints the Commissioner.

Before I review all the papers I have on this matter in advance of our meeting on Monday, can you please confirm to me, by no later than midday tomorrow, whether that is indeed your decision, and, if so, whether you will be tendering your letter of resignation on Monday with immediate effect.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Commissioner

Thank you for coming to see me today.

We discussed your intention to retire and I agreed that this was the best course of action, adding that I would need a letter to that effect. I asked that your retirement be with effect from 18.00 on the 9th of June, and suggested that you may wish to make an announcement accordingly. Please do let me know if you intend to do so and perhaps we can discuss timing. I will then follow up with the following press release:

"His Excellency the Governor, Nick Pyle OBE, has accepted a request from the Commissioner of Police to retire with effect from 18.00 hrs on Tuesday 09 June.
Recognising the Commissioner's 36 years of service to the Royal Gibraltar Police, and cognisant of him being awarded the Overseas Territories Police Medal for meritous service in 2015, the Governor wishes the Commissioner all the very best for his retirement.
The Assistant Commissioner will perform the duties of the Commissioner until further notice, as set out in the Police Act 2006."

You agreed to retire as set out above subject to financial terms being agreed which I believe you have done so with the Chief Secretary. I therefore look forward to receiving your letter.

I would like to reaffirm my commitment, notwithstanding the above, to ensure you are treated fairly and with respect at all times.

Dear Commissioner

Thank you for your letter of 9 June submitting an application for early retirement from the Royal Gibraltar Police on the following terms as outlined in your letter, namely:

1. Untaken leave will be paid
2. Days off in lieu which have not been taken as leave will be paid
3. Pension will be calculated at current salary. Payments to begin on 1 July 2020
4. A contribution of £2500 towards my legal fees

I approve your application and agree to the terms as listed in full and final settlement of all claims what so ever and how so ever arising.

I therefore note that you will be relinquishing command of the Royal Gibraltar Police at 18.00 hrs this evening.

This is obviously going to cause us huge issues. Damages claims, political problems etc. I am totally there to support the officers on the front line. I am starting to have huge concerns about the senior management of the RGP. I will alert to a particular matter when we meet, but in terms of the past few months alone: (i) this case of deaths occasioned outside of BGTW (where the statute gives them no status as police officer; (ii) the HMIC inspection issues; (iii) the Federation bullying allegations; (iv) the runway incident, where we had to go in to bat for them despite all aspects having clearly been mishandled by the RGP (and parts of MoD also); and (v) the continuing saga of the Alcaidesa claims. I think I will be asking Ian MacGrail to provide more detail and in writing as to what happened here and what they are going to do to engage with these claims before there is any requirement that they do so. I am starting lose confidence here. Best wishes. Fabian

20/05/2020, 14:19 - Michael Llamas: To be clear I can forward your email to DPP and Yeats?

20/05/2020, 14:52 - Fabian Picardo: Yes.

20/05/2020, 18:49 - Michael Llamas: Michael - aside from Delhi....the CM's response to our 'ask' for legal representation.... I honestly do not know why he has reacted like this. Have you briefed him of our meetings we've had on the matter?

20/05/2020, 18:49 - Michael Llamas: He is aware you and I have spoken about this. I forwarded to him Cathal's email to me today since it was necessary in view of the wider issues.

20/05/2020, 18:49 - Michael Llamas: Good. But the wobbler he's thrown is what I do not understand. Anyway, something for me to take up with him. Thanks.

20/05/2020, 18:51 - Fabian Picardo: "Wobbler" ...

20/05/2020, 18:51 - Michael Llamas: Ya

20/05/2020, 18:56 - Michael Llamas: They are very stubborn. I can't understand why he's said wobbler

20/05/2020, 18:59 - Michael Llamas: Just seen his email to you. Does not address the issue.

20/05/2020, 21:17 - Fabian Picardo: I have sent the reply to the governor. Will likely reply with the 15(1)(a) notice.

31/07/2020, 11:54 - Fabian Picardo: It has to be clear he is withdrawing from the Inquiry otherwise I am going ahead. I will not allow anyone to pretend I have anything to hide here. If they are difficult, we go ahead.

16/03/2021, 16:57 - Michael Llamas: Hi M, hope you are well. The RGP have asked to meet with me re: Op Delhi as they are getting nothing back from CM and CS on their witness statements. These were sought months ago. This may have a detrimental impact on the dismissal application to be held in June. Without their statements the crown's case is weaker. Additionally, without their statements, the Crown would need to consider whether it would apply for summonses to have both attend court and testify at the trial. Grateful if we could discuss. 16/04/2019, 22:36 - Albert Mena: Have John Perez asking to talk to me. Advice please

14/05/2020, 09:49 - Fabian Picardo: Hi. This article has just appeared. A civil claim has been filed in Spain (in Ceuta) by the families of the deceased in the incident with the RGP off the Eastside. This is obviously going to cause us huge issues. Damages claims, political problems etc. I am totally there to support the officers on the front line. I am starting to have huge concerns about the senior management of the RGP. I will alert to a particular matter when we meet, but in terms of the past few months alone: (i) this case of deaths occasioned outside of BGTW (where the statute gives them no status as police officer; (ii) the HMIC inspection issues; (iii) the Federation bullying allegations; (iv) the runway incident, where we had to go in to bat for them despite all aspects having clearly been mishandled by the RGP (and parts of MoD also); and (v) the continuing saga of the Alcaidesa claims. I think I will be asking Ian MacGrail to provide more detail and in writing as to what happened here and what they are going to do to engage with these claims before there is any requirement that they do so. I am starting lose confidence here. Best wishes. Fabian

29/10/2020, 15:52 - Fabian Picardo: Dear Mr Baglietto QC,

You will no doubt be aware that the police investigation involving 36 North Ltd has resulted in three persons being charged with conspiracy to defraud Bland Ltd and that they have now appeared before the Supreme Court of Gibraltar.

Following an extensive investigation we have concluded that Mr Levy is no longer considered a suspect in this matter. Given that Mr Levy has already provided a written submission further to questions posed by the investigating team, I should be grateful if you would consider editing Mr Levy's account with a view of it being included in the evidence in the form of a witness statement.

Finally, in the circumstances it is our intention to return the devices that were handed over to police voluntarily on the 12th May 2020. These items (which remain unexamined) may be collected from NMH during normal office hours or alternatively I could arrange for them to be dropped off to you.

Kind Regards,

Mark

27/11/2020, 10:17 - Fabian Picardo: Good morning Chief, I have been asked to forward to you a letter regarding a request from the investigating team into the fraud investigation surrounding the NSCIS. The team claim that the defence and defendants have cited you, as we expected them to do and therefore they have a duty to follow reasonable lines of enquiries. They have provided you with a list of questions and a guidance document, but they are at your disposal, as I am should you need to discuss this with us. Richard.

20/03/2018, 18:41 - Fabian Picardo: No let's discuss.

20/04/2020, 18:22 - Darren Grech: F Joey after me concerned about RGP report which he needs to make available to Nick etc. Wanted you to peruse and elicit opinion. Says he has emailed you but does not want to push because he knows you have a mountain to climb. D

20/04/2020, 19:08 - Fabian Picardo: Is this the annual policing plan?

20/04/2020, 19:09 - Darren Grech: No it is the outcome of an inspection "God knows why" commissioned by Ian, which I have not seen but which Joey days does not make for good reading.

20/04/2020, 19:11 - Fabian Picardo: Fuff. Ok. Can u ask him to reforward to me...

20/04/2020, 19:12 - Darren Grech: 😊 yes

20/05/2020, 16:45 - Fabian Picardo: Darren, when Joey speaks tomorrow at the GPA, he is going to explain my views on a sensitive subject. Your support for me on this is key. I have grave, grave concerns.

20/05/2020, 16:46 - Darren Grech: I know and they are my concerns too for a whole range of reasons. 👍 You have this support.

08/06/2020, 21:32 - Darren Grech: Cheers. Did not consult principal auditor which was my original reason for delay. But like you say merely a formality. If he wants to bring this up in any reports he can. Horse has bolted anyway.

08/06/2020, 21:51 - Darren Grech: Favourable reply received; all is well, for now

08/06/2020, 21:59 - Fabian Picardo: Very good news.

08/06/2020, 22:02 - Darren Grech: It is and it goes say with my job, but at the end of the day you also have a feeling there is a human being there who sure has made mistakes but must be hurting. But like I said if you don't want to take these decisions then deliver pizzas or something. And also have to think of the interest of Gib.

08/06/2020, 22:18 - Fabian Picardo: Ya. I have felt for him, although he will never believe it.

08/06/2020, 22:40 - Darren Grech: I think the guiding compass has to be doing what is right for the right reasons and still feel that connection to the human being whose future you have in your hands. So I guess feeling sad is still acceptable having taken the right decision.

08/06/2020, 22:45 - Fabian Picardo: Yes. That is the balance.

08/06/2020, 22:54 - Darren Grech: Enjoy bike ride; keep at it you are doing great 09/06/2020, 09:26 - Darren Grech: If the person ticks all the other boxes then the RGP needs a woman of substance at the top for a period of time to cut through all the male testosterone nonsense and cowboy behaviour!

09/06/2020, 09:28 - Fabian Picardo: Indeed

09/06/2020, 11:42 - Darren Grech: F, happy for this to go out as soon as Ian releases his statement which should happen at 1pm? So slightly after then? Governor will release his as soon as Ian's as well?

Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar notes the decision announced today by Ian McGrail to retire as Commissioner of Police. After 36 years of service to Gibraltar, the Government wishes Mr McGrail well in his retirement.

09/06/2020, 12:23 - Fabian Picardo: Yes, as soon as Ian's is out, and the Governor's is out, then issue ours.

26/06/2019, 16:43 - Ian McGrail: CM - Been chatting to Stuart Green ref Panorama questions you have received regarding the Alcaidesa incident & your understanding of it having been dealt a civil matter? Could we have a quick chat about this. I am currently in the bunker with DCM in a brexit meeting.

26/06/2019, 16:58 - Fabian Picardo: Hi Ian. Happy to talk. Give me 5 mins. I didn't say it was a civil matter, I said it progressed as a private prosecution cos the victims insisted. But let's bottom that out.

26/06/2019, 17:01 - Ian McGrail: 👍 will call you when i finish witg dcm

27/06/2019, 23:20 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks! See you then.

29/06/2019, 16:07 - Ian McGrail: CM - before you shoot off to the wedding reception, I have a hard copy update to share with you and AG ref Op Florence. Would also like to brief you both in respect of certain issues/observations.

29/06/2019, 17:13 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. Just seen. What shall we do? Shall I come to the office?

29/06/2019, 17:16 - Ian McGrail: Just left michael's office & discussed the issues with him. Its basically same issues he is toying with & which he says you are fully aware of so i reckon we don't need to meet til monday unless something major develops.

29/06/2019, 17:17 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. Even better. I will be in touch with him and am seeing JL Ghio tonight.

29/06/2019, 17:17 - Ian McGrail: 👍

11/07/2019, 09:29 - Ian McGrail: Good morning CM - I would be extremely grateful for 5-10mins of your time to discuss what I foresee will become a very undesirable situation with regards to the relationship between the RGP and Gib Police Federation Board. Related to this I have tried seeking out information from Michael Crome on certain admin matters relating to the 2x full time convenors but he has referred me to you.

There is a clear pattern developing which is not heading in a good direction & which is why I feel it important that I explain how I am going to deal with the matter before it reaches you via the Fed Convenors themselves. Rgds Ian.

11/07/2019, 09:42 - Fabian Picardo: Hi. Sure. Lol better next week if possible?

FP3/12

11/07/2019, 09:43 - Ian McGrail: Yes that's ok. I will ask your office when its most convenient. Many thanks.

11/07/2019, 09:48 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. Great performance this week. Many challenges. Great success. F

11/07/2019, 09:49 - Ian McGrail: Indeed. Many thanks.

18/09/2019, 14:34 - Ian McGrail: CM - I am informed that Maurice Morello of the Gib Pol Fed has sought a meeting with you. I respectfully ask that if he touches on the matter of his allowance as convenor, which is under review, that you take in to account my views and that of the Chief Sec. I had reason to make disciplinary intervention on him on Monday which is also why he may want to off load to you.

I am very disappointed with the way the GPF are conducting themselves - totally confrontational and toxic. Happy to discuss further if you feel the need to do so.

18/09/2019, 15:09 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks Ian. Will call you before I see him. Best wishes.

18/09/2019, 15:10 - Ian McGrail: Many thanks CM.

20/09/2019, 10:36 - Ian McGrail: Good morning CM - I need to brief you up on an operation we are going to strike on. I have spoken to MoJ who said it was best for me speak to you direct. I can do it over the phone or in person. Wouldn't take more than 5mins. However, I am due to fly out the afternoon on a job trip.

20/09/2019, 10:44 - Fabian Picardo: I will call you shortly.

09/10/2019, 16:29 - Ian McGrail: CM - I am waiting to fly out from LGW in an hour or so. I have just received very disturbing news from Richard Ullger. He met with the GPF this afternoon and amongst other things the chairman has admitted meeting up with Leo Olivero for a coffee and making very damaging suggestions to him which brings absolute discredit on the RGP. You will be shocked when you hear it. I need to speak to you tomorrow to explain. I am seeing HE tomorrow together with Joey Britto and HE's request.

10/10/2019, 12:37 - Fabian Picardo: Noted. All we need.

10/10/2019, 12:41 - Ian McGrail: I am dealing with Maurice Morello & Leif Simpson via discipline route but needed you to be aware in case you meet with them.

11/10/2019, 13:24 - Ian McGrail: CM - Have I missed a supposed communication from you ref not co-operating with Spanish Law Enforcement until they recognise our waters?

11/10/2019, 13:37 - Fabian Picardo: Completely skewered by Panorama of course. Utter nonsense. I will send you my full answer later.

11/10/2019, 13:41 - Ian McGrail: Many thanks. I do not intend to respond unless you think I should do so simply because as we know, it will just feed him to write further nonsense. It is so evident that they have a policy to try and discredit me at all costs and on all fronts.

28/01/2020, 19:20 - Ian McGrail: CM - I hope all is going well in London. I really feel tight bringing this matter up at this time when you are so tied up with Brexit matters but this issue is picking up considerable adverse traction - I am sure you aware of the latest diatribe viz the Gib Police Federation as exposed on Panorama & social media. I have today briefed Min Sacramento on my concerns, but post to this meeting I have been advised that you are favourably considering legislation to exclude the GPF conveners, who are warranted officers, from from Force discipline regulations. This has been said by the GPF Chair himself in quite an arrogant, defiant and confident tone earlier today. Surely this cannot be true & I sincerely hope this is 100% not the case. I seek your reassurance that this statement by Sgt Maurice Morello is incorrect. I, together with the senior command of the RGP are seriously concerned with the journey the GPF are on. Today Sgt Morello literally said that legislation is sitting on the CM's desk to exclude the conveners from any discipline regulations - you cannot imagine the adverse hype this is causing. Already I have notion of a very fractured GPF Board who are not all in agreement with the way the Chairman and Secretary are running business - this is not a healthy state of affairs at all. I trust we can meet on your return to Gib so that you can hear out the serious concerns we have with the latest developments.

Best rgds

Ian

30/01/2020, 11:31 - Fabian Picardo: Ian, as you can imagine, the last thing on my mind this week is the GPF. Things are not, in my view, as black and white as your SMT appear to see it or as the GPF see it. I have no legislation on my desk, but I am highly sympathetic to the principle that Union leaders should not be subject to the discipline of those who they represent their people against. I am happy to discuss this and consider with you how best to find a solution that works for all sides here. I also think that "an investigation into who has talked to Panorama" (which I am not saying is happening, but that newspaper has alleged under the pen of Leo Olivero), smacks of Zimbabwe. It's not a good look for a modern police force, in my view. Happy to tell you more when we meet.

30/01/2020, 13:08 - Ian McGrail: CM - Many thanks for your text. I strongly sense that you are not fully aware of the circumstances which has led to the assistant commissioner commencing an internal investigation. There has been a course of conduct developing during the past 2 years which we have, through subtle leadership, tried our very best to address. The principles of why the federation was created are being totally abused. Notwithstanding, I have certain suggestions to make when we meet & which can draw the line to all of this - I hope they will meet with your approval. CM, I have self reflected hard over the past few days. I can assure you that my intentions are in the best interests of the RGP and Gibraltar. If you accept my proposal on Wednesday when we meet I am confident that you will align yourself with my views on the matter.

Wishing you and the rest of the delegation a safe return home

Best regards

08/03/2020, 06:05 - Ian McGrail: CM - We're dealing with a critical incident - one of our boats has been involved in a collision with a smuggling RHIB with 4 on board. 2 on the smuggling RHIB are fatalities. Our crew are uninjured but clearly shaken & shocked.

I am invoking Post Incident Procedures and planning for consequence management.

Once I have further updates I will let you know.

08/03/2020, 07:24 - Fabian Picardo: Ian. Thank you. What are the nationalities of the deceased? Was it drugs or tobacco? Any GC or SVA involvement?

08/03/2020, 07:33 - Ian McGrail: So far we have 3 identified. 2 from Ceuta (moroccan decent) & a Portuguese. No Spanish law enforcement agency involved. RHIB suspected to be involved in drug smuggling. I have also informed The Convent. I have held a "Gold" command meeting in my office to address, welfare of the crew, the investigation that will now follow, security/safety to our law enforcement officers, community impact et al.

Also linked up with GC and CNP more so after the disturbances in La Linea after the other death involving the our customs patrol boat but given that those on the RHIB are not from this region it may not have an impact. I am still waiting for the 4th & (also deceased) to be identified.

08/03/2020, 07:37 - Ian McGrail: Just had the ID of the 4th one confirmed. He is also from Ceuta of Moroccan decent.

08/03/2020, 07:40 - Fabian Picardo: Thank you. Are our officers safely ashore and seen by med staff if necessary? Are their families informed they are ok, in case social media lets on there has been a fatal collision, so they don't worry?

08/03/2020, 07:41 - Fabian Picardo: Also, what time did it occur and was it firmly within BGTW or questionable?

08/03/2020, 07:42 - Fabian Picardo: I think we should announce if possible to avoid social media speculation. Have you prepared media release or do you want Stuart's help?

08/03/2020, 07:42 - Ian McGrail: Our crew are ok. Their welfare is being totally safeguarded. I am also circulating a notice to all staff to prevent speculation and social media reporting from within. I will issue a very brief press notice shortly.

08/03/2020, 07:43 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. Re the two who survived, captured? Hospital or cells?

08/03/2020, 07:43 - Ian McGrail: Collision occurred at approx 0340hrs. Location still to be confirmed.

08/03/2020, 07:44 - Ian McGrail: The two who survived are in hospital with non critical injuries as far as I am informed.

08/03/2020, 08:13 - Fabian Picardo: Arrested, correct?

FP3/15

08/03/2020, 08:14 - Ian McGrail: They will be if they haven't been already.

08/03/2020, 09:49 - Ian McGrail: CM - the information suggests that the collision took place outside BGTW - approx 6NM east off the runway/Santa Barbara beach.

08/03/2020, 09:53 - Ian McGrail: When a death arises from police contact its best practice to engage with an independent investigating team & I am studying how to achieve this.

08/03/2020, 09:53 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. We need to liaise with AG on this and ensure we are transparent on this.

08/03/2020, 09:54 - Fabian Picardo: Yes, agreed. Any necessary additional expenditure will be approved.

08/03/2020, 09:54 - Ian McGrail: Many thanks.

07/04/2020, 19:22 - Ian McGrail: CM - I hope you're keeping well - its been quite a while since we've been in touch. I feel you ought to be aware of this.....

Not sure if you have been advised that only a short while ago we received a complaint that the MD of Casais has tried to bribe or has already bribed one of the senior surveyors contracted by HMGoG to oversee the Westside/Bayside schools project.

07/04/2020, 19:26 - Fabian Picardo: Hi Ian. Albert Mena advised me of this early afternoon. Very concerning. Jaw dropping.

07/04/2020, 19:27 - Ian McGrail: Indeed.

12/05/2020, 12:25 - Ian McGrail: CM - before you hear it from anyone else I want to inform you that detectives are executing a search warrant at Hassans for (JL) in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez. Its been done in the most discreet of ways and we're hoping there is co-operation.

Rgds

12/05/2020, 12:34 - Fabian Picardo: Ian, Thank you for the courtesy of this information. I think that is a bad decision. A search warrant should only have been sought if you believed that the person in question was not going to cooperate and will try destroy evidence. If, as you say, you are hoping for cooperation, especially in a case involving a senior Silk and head of Gibraltar's largest legal firm, you should, in my view, first have sought to contact that person and obtain cooperation. Given my close personal relationship with JL, I won't comment further.

12/05/2020, 12:35 - Ian McGrail: Noted CM.

Joey Britto

13/02/2020, 19:24 - Joey Britto: Dear Fabian - just to keep you posted - CoP and Federation today agreed on a review of their working relationship via mediation - so for now they have at least agreed on something!

Best wishes

Joey

13/02/2020, 19:26 - Joey Britto: This is obviously quite separate to anything you may wish to do in terms of legislation etc - I'm just concerned with them seeing eye to eye for now.

13/02/2020, 19:33 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks!

13/02/2020, 19:35 - Joey Britto: I'll alway try to give you good news!

13/02/2020, 19:41 - Joey Britto:

09/03/2020, 17:54 - Joey Britto: Fabian - I have been kept informed of tragic incident at sea by CoP - just so you know - I'm working with CoP on best possible model for independent investigation into circumstances surrounding this. Will of course consult you via Darren, if that's ok.

Best

Joey

09/03/2020, 18:46 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks. Or via here. Shall I set up a WhatsApp group?

09/03/2020, 18:47 - Joey Britto: Sure - if you don't mind

09/03/2020, 18:48 - Fabian Picardo: Commissioner, you and me?

09/03/2020, 18:48 - Joey Britto: Do you want to include Darren as well?

09/03/2020, 19:59 - Joey Britto: CoP mentioned Frank as chair of PCB - what do you think?

09/03/2020, 19:59 - Joey Britto: I mean - to include in group

09/03/2020, 20:04 - Joey Britto:

16/04/2020, 14:00 - Joey Britto: Dear Fabian,

FP3/17

Once again forgive the intrusion - I realise you have far more pressing matters than this but I'm asking in the light of all the praise and positivity that RGP is receiving from the community and HMGoG - I would welcome a steer so I know I am not putting my foot in it, so to speak!

I have received the HMIC report on the RGP: they have pulled no punches and have highlighted several areas for development, in relation to internal governance, and have expressed themselves in no uncertain terms!

I have naturally discussed this with CoP and my initial thinking is to submit, by email, a copy of the report along with my recommendations on how to deal with it, from a public perspective, to you, Nick (as Governor) and Samantha (with CoP) in copy.

Maybe I'm being over cautious but the report could have been better - to be fair, RGP have taken it on the chin and are already working towards all the recommendations.

My question is: are you ok for me to submit to you, MfI and the Governor at the same time?

Happy to meet if you feel we should...

Apologies for bothering you!

Best wishes,

Joey

20/04/2020, 19:28 - Joey Britto: Good evening, have sent email as advised by Darren ref HMIC report...

20/04/2020, 19:31 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks Joey. Will review asap my friend.

20/04/2020, 19:33 - Joey Britto: Thank you very much.

20/04/2020, 19:37 - Joey Britto: CoP seems to be quite comfortable and amenable to dealing with this, in case you are wondering and you wish to speak to him...

FP3/18

21/04/2020, 08:31 - Joey Britto: Dear Fabian, I trust you are well. I need to send MfJ a copy of the inspection report as well: police will want to discuss some of the areas identified for development and improvement with her: vetting, safeguarding, vulnerable people, domestic violence etc etc....

21/04/2020, 08:55 - Fabian Picardo: Ok to send to her.

21/04/2020, 08:55 - Joey Britto: Will do

06/05/2020, 18:34 - Joey Britto: Fabian - Darren spoke to me - just a heads up - we are going to issue PR by RGP on report tomorrow at around 10.30 - I'll also issue a short supporting statement from GPA as well. De verdad, apologies for all the hassle!

KR

Joey

06/05/2020, 19:42 - Fabian Picardo: No problem.

06/05/2020, 19:42 - Joey Britto: 😊

06/05/2020, 19:42 - Joey Britto: Thanks

18/05/2020, 11:37 - Joey Britto: FYI - I'm meeting them this Thursday morning - some of them work so I've had to allow notice

KR

Joey

18/05/2020, 11:52 - Fabian Picardo: Thank you. Much appreciated. I am happy to prepare a note for you if you think that would be helpful.

18/05/2020, 12:05 - Joey Britto: Would you? Only if it's no trouble...?

18/05/2020, 12:07 - Joey Britto: I know what I have to say to them but would be good to have something for me to act as a summary of sorts 18/05/2020, 12:12 - Fabian Picardo: Sure. I will set out a file note of this morning so you can use it to reflect what we told you.

18/05/2020, 12:12 - Joey Britto: Thank you

20/05/2020, 08:35 - Joey Britto: Fabian - remember the notes you were going to send me either via WhatsApp or email - I don't want to get this wrong, please... thanks. Meeting my colleagues tomorrow at 9.30...

KR Joey

20/05/2020, 08:38 - Fabian Picardo: Yup. Onto it already.

20/05/2020, 16:40 - Fabian Picardo: <Media omitted>

20/05/2020, 16:40 - Fabian Picardo: Joey, Just for you. Its an informal record converting the notes I had.

20/05/2020, 16:41 - Joey Britto: Thank you very much. I shall revert as soon as I've had the GPA meeting 20/05/2020, 16:42 - Fabian Picardo: Thank you.

20/05/2020, 17:32 - Fabian Picardo: I still worry about syntax, spelling etc when I write something you are going to see!

20/05/2020, 18:25 - Joey Britto: Well, you know you shouldn't - you write extremely well!

20/05/2020, 18:50 - Fabian Picardo: I have picked up my own typos! I will send corrected version later!

20/05/2020, 19:18 - Joey Britto: Thanks.

20/05/2020, 23:29 - Fabian Picardo: <Media omitted>

20/05/2020, 23:30 - Fabian Picardo: Joey, amended. All were really typos except for the important removal of the word 'not' in p3, in the third line. That changed the tense of the sentence to the direct opposite of what I meant. Very best wishes. Fabian 20/05/2020, 23:42 - Joey Britto: Thank you, Fabian. I'll revert ASAP after the meeting I'll have to call a couple of members who can't actually make it tomorrow first but will get back to you and Nick soon after.

Joey

21/05/2020, 11:58 - Joey Britto: Fabian - could I possibly see you this afternoon when Ernest goes to see you at 4.00?

21/05/2020, 11:59 - Joey Britto: Or around that time?

21/05/2020, 12:02 - Fabian Picardo: Yes. Sure. See you then.

21/05/2020, 12:02 - Joey Britto: Thanks see you at 4.00

21/05/2020, 18:26 - Joey Britto: <Media omitted>

21/05/2020, 18:30 - Fabian Picardo: Hi. Yes. That is what you will, in effect be doing. You come back to us to seek our consent after the representations have been received. I will write the sequencing down for you as I see it if you wish. I am just going to finish a note first.

21/05/2020, 18:42 - Joey Britto: <Media omitted>

21/05/2020, 18:42 - Joey Britto: In any case, I'm sending you text of draft letter I plan on giving him after my meeting - grateful for your once over?

FP3/20

21/05/2020, 19:17 - Joey Britto: Perhaps my letter should say ..you shall be invited to retire unless you wish to make representations as to why you should not within xx days?

21/05/2020, 19:18 - Joey Britto: PS - be patient with me!

21/05/2020, 19:31 - Fabian Picardo: Lol. Give me a few minutes as I am finishing something.

21/05/2020, 19:34 - Joey Britto: Sorry 😐

21/05/2020, 21:00 - Fabian Picardo: <Media omitted>

21/05/2020, 21:00 - Fabian Picardo: Also sent by email. See references to loss of confidence by me and the Governor.

21/05/2020, 21:00 - Joey Britto: Oh - so you've sent this already?

21/05/2020, 21:00 - Fabian Picardo: Yes.

21/05/2020, 21:02 - Joey Britto: So this would make more sense now:

21/05/2020, 21:03 - Fabian Picardo: Yes. Exactly. I would suggest that you provide 7 days at the end. If he considers more time is required he should write to you asking for more time. This is to serious to let it ride. Best wishes. Fabian

21/05/2020, 21:04 - Joey Britto: Ok 🤙

22/05/2020, 09:50 - Joey Britto: Can I see you today before lose of play - I've given him letter but he is asking for details in writing - alone about getting a lawyer etc I need to discuss a couple of issues he's raised please 22/05/2020, 09:59 - Fabian Picardo: Hi Joey. Sure. Shall we meet at 2pm?

22/05/2020, 09:59 - Joey Britto: See you then - thanks

22/05/2020, 15:32 - Joey Britto: <Media omitted>

22/05/2020, 15:33 - Joey Britto: Fabian - please see nain points I felt were the most relevant to put in writing

22/05/2020, 15:38 - Joey Britto: There's a 'neither nor' that slipped in - typo

22/05/2020, 15:59 - Fabian Picardo: There are some "his" rather than yours.

22/05/2020, 16:05 - Joey Britto: Yes sorry - I'll fix it of course - but as summary is it ok?

22/05/2020, 16:06 - Fabian Picardo: Cant read fully for another hour. In a celac meeting.

22/05/2020, 16:09 - Joey Britto: Ok sorry

22/05/2020, 18:19 - Joey Britto: <Media omitted>

22/05/2020, 18:19 - Joey Britto: Fixed - this is a summary of main points but I suspect he'll want much more almost expecting something like a charge sheet... see if you feel I can send him this...

22/05/2020, 18:47 - Joey Britto: Apart from everything I feel worse having to bother you so much - I apologise for this 22/05/2020, 18:55 - Fabian Picardo: Dont worry. I am checking it now.

22/05/2020, 19:36 - Fabian Picardo: <Media omitted>

22/05/2020, 19:37 - Fabian Picardo: I have added a little more so that he knows the case he has to meet.

22/05/2020, 19:37 - Joey Britto: Thank you very much and once again, I really appreciate this!

22/05/2020, 19:39 - Fabian Picardo: Least I could do

22/05/2020, 19:39 - Fabian Picardo: .We

22/05/2020, 19:39 - Joey Britto: De verdad

22/05/2020, 19:39 - Fabian Picardo: must get it right and he deserves to be given the picture he has to address.

22/05/2020, 19:40 - Joey Britto: indeed - he has it verbally and now in writing

22/05/2020, 19:40 - Joey Britto: Thank you once again

29/05/2020, 11:43 - Joey Britto: Dear Fabian - I feel I should share report from CoP with GPA colleagues under strict confidentiality- given I was copied in I feel obliged to do so... seeing as it was addressed to you, I would need your permission.

29/05/2020, 11:44 - Fabian Picardo: Of course. I fully agree.

29/05/2020, 11:44 - Joey Britto: Thank you

29/05/2020, 17:52 - Joey Britto: F - I have just received a letter from CoP as well as a letter from Bicholas Gomez who is representing him. Naturally I shall share with GOA colleagues for their views but I am going to forward to you, Nick and Michael as well. Is this ok?

29/05/2020, 17:52 - Fabian Picardo: Yes please.

29/05/2020, 17:52 - Joey Britto: *Nicholas

29/05/2020, 17:52 - Joey Britto: Will email it to the three 29/05/2020, 18:15 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks. Got it.

29/05/2020, 18:23 - Joey Britto: Can I call you?

29/05/2020, 18:38 - Fabian Picardo: Hang on cos in Platinum now. Will call u asap.

29/05/2020, 18:39 - Joey Britto: Ok thank you

Nick Pyle (Chat with Deputy Governor)

30/04/2020, 15:05 - Deputy Governor Mobile: UK decision on C-19 travel restriction delayed possibly until next week. I suspect due to disagreement! We also need to speak about the HMIC inspection

Report of the RGP. I'll email my thoughts.

30/04/2020, 15:08 - Fabian Picardo: THanks. I understand the latter does not make for positive reading...

05/05/2020, 09:07 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Morning. Hope you were not up too late finalising Unlock the Rock. I meant to tell you I'd spoken to Joey Britto re the RGP inspection report and didn't think we therefore needed to meet with the Commissioner. I haven't read CoP's press statement but my advice was that it should not be backward looking and try to explain the past, it should simply focus on the way forward.

14/05/2020, 09:49 - Fabian Picardo: Hi. This article has just appeared. A civil claim has been filed in Spain (in Ceuta) by the families of the deceased in the incident with the RGP off the Eastside. This is obviously going to cause us huge issues. Damages claims, political problems etc. I am totally there to support the officers on the front line. I am starting to have huge concerns about the senior management of the RGP. I will alert to a particular matter when we meet, but in terms of the past few months alone: (i) this case of deaths occasioned outside of BGTW (where the statute gives them no status as police officer; (ii) the HMIC inspection issues; (iii) the Federation bullying allegations; (iv) the runway incident, where we had to go in to bat for them despite all aspects having clearly been mishandled by the RGP (and parts of MoD also); and (v) the continuing saga of the Alcaidesa claims. I think I will be asking Ian MacGrail to provide more detail and in writing as to what happened here and what they are going to do to engage with these claims before there is any requirement that they do so. I am starting lose confidence here. Best wishes. Fabian

14/05/2020, 09:49 - Fabian Picardo: https://elfarodeceuta.es/denuncian-policia-gibraltar-muerte-dos-ceuties/

14/05/2020, 09:58 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Agree. As we thought at the time, wrong appointment. Remind me to tell you about the recruitment process which was abject. Should we meet tomorrow after or before platinum?

15/05/2020, 11:02 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Re the RGP, I'm still happy of course to meet after platinum. I've asked the Met where things are with their independent report. Commissioner has not mentioned it to me.

15/05/2020, 11:17 - Fabian Picardo: We should meet. It's very concerning. Evidence of a deeper malaise I fear. Come over after platinum.

15/05/2020, 11:37 - Deputy Governor Mobile: 👍

15/05/2020, 20:03 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Good as always to catch up. I don't see any option re CoP given the evidence. I'll speak to Joey carefully sometime next week. Quite bizarrely, the Federation could end up "defending"Ian! Have a good weekend. Nick 15/05/2020, 20:42 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks Nick.

I think you have probably seen this coming before I have. To extent I allowed too much of the benefit of the doubt here and strained the most important relationship Gibraltar has (with the UK) in doing so.

I sincerely hope the Federation doesn't make such a mistake, because it would lead me not to have confidence in it if they did. Again, we shall have to set out our thinking clearly and then I doubt anyone would see this cumulative record of behaviour as defensible. But loss of life really puts us now in different territory.

I never would have thought I would be of this view, especially post Castree - but it feels like the RGP has gone backwards not forwards. A real pity for the good people in there who need nurturing and good leadership.

Have brought papers home to get under the skin of this.

Try to have a break this weekend if you can.

Best wishes.

Fabian

15/05/2020, 20:57 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Thanks. Agree we need to approach this correctly and carefully (but that's a given in my opinion). It's good to have faith in human nature but sometimes we need a reminder that not everyone has the same ethics / morality they should have and group think doesn't help (within the RGP). I will get some rest. I hope you too. Enjoy your bbq. Best. Nick 16/05/2020, 11:47 - Fabian Picardo: My pillow always gives me the best advice: if we are going to do this, do we very discretely at your end, line someone up. We cannot have it headless.

16/05/2020, 13:58 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Thinking about it quite a lot. Need to discretely bring Joey Britto into our thinking. I'm happy to do that Monday.

16/05/2020, 14:04 - Fabian Picardo: Yes. Agreed. Shall we do so early? Morning coffee the three of us in my or yours?

16/05/2020, 14:05 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Let's do mine. 09.30?

16/05/2020, 14:06 - Fabian Picardo: Yes. Agreed. Shall I ask him or will you?

16/05/2020, 14:08 - Deputy Governor Mobile: I've just asked him. I'll also try to speak to our OT Police Advisor based in Miami. I'll update you on my thinking before we meet 16/05/2020, 14:09 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. I will try to fair that draft I have prepared also for discussion. Any news on the Met's report?

16/05/2020, 14:17 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Nothing yet re Met report. Will call them if necessary.

18/05/2020, 22:23 - Deputy Governor Mobile: ....now onto the next challenge. It will be interesting to see what Joey come back with. Enjoy your days off. Long walk with the dog for me tomorrow.

18/05/2020, 22:28 - Fabian Picardo: Thank you. Didn't have time to prep better cos of pesky VTC! Lol. Have promised to send Joey a note of what I said so he can relay to GPA. Not hard given I have written it out for us. Will share with you to ensure it is not contentious between us. Enjoy the walk!

19/05/2020, 11:44 - Fabian Picardo: On the other, what's your instinct on the 15(1)(a) report? Shall I seek it given Met report isn't imminent? I am in two minds.

19/05/2020, 12:15 - Deputy Governor Mobile: I'm sure (or hope) CoP has done his own internal investigation and therefore has an internal report. You could a) ask on the basis of the claim being filed as the peg or b) wait until say Friday to see what Joey comes up with. Slight preference to leave this to the GPA but worried they will not be timely enough. Using 15.(1)(a) would speed things up and on balance, I'd go for that.

19/05/2020, 13:59 - Fabian Picardo: Yes re both. But on CoP issue, we cannot allow ourselves to be at daggers drawn for too long - that would be institutionally bad for Gibraltar and the rule of law. I will ensure in what I prepare for Joey that I propose a timetable: 48 hours or 7 days to provide reasons?

19/05/2020, 14:23 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Given there should be some sort of report/paperwork already compiled, 48 hours is not unreasonable as it should just be a question of pulling it together.

19/05/2020, 14:24 - Fabian Picardo: Exactly

20/05/2020, 16:47 - Fabian Picardo: Nick, is someone attending in your place tomorrow? Phil?

20/05/2020, 16:48 - Fabian Picardo: This is the note I have sent Joey:

20/05/2020, 16:48 - Fabian Picardo: <Media omitted>

20/05/2020, 16:49 - Fabian Picardo: If it needs amending, happy to send him a version with changes. Just need to ensure that we send it to him before tomorrow. He was having kittens about it so have sent it to him as a prop at least for now.

20/05/2020, 17:01 - Deputy Governor Mobile: I've a 17.00 call. I'll look at the note immediately afterwards and revert by 17.30

20/05/2020, 17:13 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks. I meant the GPA.

20/05/2020, 17:47 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Sorry - didn't know GPA was meeting. I stepped out of the GPA on 18 Feb. Phil not attending. Some typos in your note and there is a not in 3rd sentence on page 3 that should not be there.

20/05/2020, 17:48 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Want to talk through typos or I could type it up?

20/05/2020, 17:48 - Fabian Picardo: Damn. My english teacher is going to take me to task. Can you point out the typos? I am on a bicycle! Just stopped to read ur message...

20/05/2020, 17:49 - Fabian Picardo: Sure.

20/05/2020, 21:56 - Deputy Governor Mobile: It was Verralis who were engaged at the time.

20/05/2020, 22:05 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. Noted.

20/05/2020, 22:06 - Fabian Picardo: (Not surprised).

20/05/2020, 23:28 - Fabian Picardo: With amendments. The superfluous 'not' on p3 was very well spotted!

20/05/2020, 23:44 - Deputy Governor Mobile: 👍 save bottom of page 2. HMICFRS inspection was 2019 not 2020. Sorry, should have spotted that first time.

21/05/2020, 12:39 - Deputy Governor Mobile: The Met have promised a formal report of findings to date by next Wednesday latest. I said important they send to CoP first as the requester etc.

21/05/2020, 12:39 - Fabian Picardo: Ok. Noted. Lots of local issues.

21/05/2020, 12:39 - Fabian Picardo: Alongside the investigation I mean. E.g., the local lawyers instructed etc.

21/05/2020, 12:58 - Deputy Governor Mobile: It's only going to grow and get more complicated.

21/05/2020, 19:55 - Fabian Picardo: See your email. Sent draft there. Its here also if easier:

21/05/2020, 21:00 - Fabian Picardo: Also sent by email.

21/05/2020, 21:10 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Thanks. Have a good evening.

22/05/2020, 10:27 - Fabian Picardo: Can I see you today before lose of play - I've given him letter but he is asking for details in writing - alone about getting a lawyer etc I need to discuss a couple of issues he's raised please

22/05/2020, 10:29 - Fabian Picardo: Nick, that is from Joey. I am going to see him at 2pm and will brief you after. [THE REMAINDER OF THIS MESSAGE HAS BEEN REMOVED]

22/05/2020, 20:40 - Fabian Picardo: Nick, above the letter Joey is sending the Commissioner. He has drafted it from our note. He asked me to read it over and confirm it sets out the position we communicate accurately. I felt it did.

22/05/2020, 20:40 - Fabian Picardo: I am left with such a bad taste in the mouth. Anyway. It has to be done for reasons we have debated at length.

22/05/2020, 22:07 - Deputy Governor Mobile: This is the first issue for many a year that has conflicted me and troubled my nights and weekends - I'm very good at switchcomg off. But I am absolutely sure that we are doing the right thing in the right way. My conscience is clear. This is the right thing for the RGP and for Gibraltar, painful though it is.

22/05/2020, 22:08 - Deputy Governor Mobile: I also fear a leak to the press. As a result, I've briefed Sarah and asked her to put a short note up to the Minister. As we have done, bettter to get ahead of things.

22/05/2020, 22:24 - Fabian Picardo: Thank you for those notes. Really helped me. F

27/05/2020, 17:44 - Fabian Picardo: Today is the day they were supposed to receive the report of the Met Police... Have you received anything from the RGP? Or can you try to obtain directly? At the end of the day, GoG is paying but I bet you they wont send it to me today as a result of my letter...

27/05/2020, 18:59 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Evening. Ive spent the afternoon submerged in audit stuff, so quite a lot of emails to wade through but nothing from RGP so I am trying to obtain direct. I've managed to get a copy of the ToRs which I'll forward by email. Had a good meeting with a Joey who agrees with our approach re secondment. Joey gave CoP 7 working days to respond so I suspect we will not know his next moves until Wednesday given the public holiday.

27/05/2020, 19:01 - Deputy Governor Mobile: OT police advisor will work behind to scenes to indentify candidates for the us/GPA to consider. I'll will not formally request him to help until CoP's future confirmed so we are seen to be following procedures.

27/05/2020, 19:17 - Fabian Picardo: Just seen the TORs. I think I am even more worried now. If you wanted to design a brief to try to avoid a proper review, you would do it in that way. Poor in form and in substance. I trust Met will see through that and provide the detail required.

27/05/2020, 19:22 - Deputy Governor Mobile: I deleted my comments on the ToR's as I didn't know how to express them politely. My language was not appropriate for an email! As well as breach of trust and loss of confidence, CoP has demonstrated significant lacking in leadership competences which I think can be summed up in abject decision making capabilities.

27/05/2020, 20:02 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Ps. Met have sent report to Ian. Don't know when but they have said they will send to me.

27/05/2020, 20:19 - Fabian Picardo: Great. Lets see if he immediately sends to us or not. Given that we are paying and the Section 15 request for info, if he does not send it in the next few hours it will be even more damning...

27/05/2020, 20:40 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Report sent to Ian lunchtime today!

28/05/2020, 14:22 - Fabian Picardo: Anything from Met or McGrail?

28/05/2020, 14:44 - Deputy Governor Mobile: I've got 2 sitrepsfrom the Met, one dated 23/3 the other 19/5. Not clear when first was sent to CoP. I'll forward with comments once I've studied them (later today).

28/05/2020, 15:10 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks. Incredible he hasn't sent the report to us yet.

28/05/2020, 16:50 - Fabian Picardo: Ian has sent me the factual report I asked for. I am trying to download it, but I cannot. I am trying to forward it to you, but I think it is not getting through. Very strange. And I think no Met Report (unless it is part of their response and in the same document).

28/05/2020, 18:07 - Deputy Governor Mobile: There is no met report - more a record of some actions taken and not of what more is needed. Not particularly satisfactory. I'll forward what I but I've not studied in dept - end of year audit deadline tomorrow and sign off is to PUS. Worth grabbing a coffee tomorrrow?

02/06/2020, 09:02 - Deputy Governor Mobile: <Media omitted>

02/06/2020, 10:04 - Fabian Picardo: Midday? AG and Joey?

02/06/2020, 10:17 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Works for me. I'll check with he others.

02/06/2020, 10:18 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks!

08/06/2020, 20:22 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Darren has informed me that he'll be working on it tonight and tomorrow morning. Shall we give it till midday before we meet again to allow him time to firm everything up?

08/06/2020, 21:31 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Nick - you will have my letter with the agreed terms by 0830hrs tomorrow morning. Could you now send me the letter you had intended for me. I will relinquish command at 1800hrs tomorrow.

26/11/2021, 16:10 - Deputy Governor Mobile: OT Police Advisor read through some of my files on the McGrail matter. He is categorical in his belief we took "the correc course of action".

26/11/2021, 16:22 - Fabian Picardo: That is great to hear!

26/11/2021, 16:25 - Deputy Governor Mobile: Also based on his engagement with RGP. It was a very productive visit.

Richard Ullger

27/11/2020, 09:58 - Richard Ullger: Good morning Chief, I have been asked to forward to you a letter regarding a request from the investigating team into the fraud investigation surrounding the NSCIS. The team claim that the defence and defendants have cited you, as we expected them to do and therefore they have a duty to follow reasonable lines of enquiries. They have provided you with a list of questions and a guidance document, but they are at your disposal, as I am should you need to discuss this with us. Richard.

27/11/2020, 10:15 - Fabian Picardo: Thanks Richard. Delighted to help with any relevant lines of inquiry. Best wishes. Fabian

27/11/2020, 10:17 - Richard Ullger: Thank you Sir, most kind.

Informal Record of Meeting with HE the Governor and the Chief Minister, Monday 18th May 2020.

The Governor called on the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority to meet with him and the Chief Minister.

The purpose of the meeting was to express grave concerns about certain aspects of policing in Gibraltar which had come to a head in the week before.

The first is the publication of the HMICFRS Report into the RGP.

The second is the publication of news of the filing of legal claims in Spain by the relatives of the Spanish citizens killed in an incident at sea (which undoubtedly happened outside of BGTW).

The Governor expressed his view that the Chief Minister should introduce the subject for both, as both had already spoken, as required under the Police Act.

The Chief Minister said that the position was that BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister had lost confidence in the Commissioner of Police.

The Chief Minister set out what his concerns were by reference to the provisions of Section 34 of the Police Act given that this is the provision that allows for the GPA, after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister, to call upon the Commissioner to retire – and that these are the best objective criteria of 'confidence' available.

Ahead of that the Chief Minister noted that Section 13 (1) (f) of the Police Act also gives the Governor authority to call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the Authority has failed to discharge its responsibility.

The Chief Minister explained that both the Governor and he were particularly alive to the not so subtle differences between a 'retirement' (S.34) and a 'resignation' (S.13). The effect may be the same, but the route and signposting is markedly different. Both have recorded that the power of the Governor is much more explicit, for good reason.

The Chief Minster further explained that the GPA have power to "remove" a Commissioner (as per the heading of S.34, which is not relevant to interpretation) by inviting "retirement". The GPA would do so in the interests of policing in Gibraltar when seen through the prism of 5 key elements.

The GPA are therefore being invited by the Governor and the Chief Minister together to consider whether they believe that all OR any (note it is a disjunctive, not a conjunctive list) of the following 5 have been impacted.

The Chief Minister's view on the five criteria were clear.

1. The first criteria is Efficiency:

(a) The HMICFRS Report ('the Report') could not be clearer in the Chief Minister's view in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report go directly to efficiency directly and indirectly. It is, however, shocking to see the explicit reference in the first sentence of the second paragraph of the Report, marked 'Overview' on page 7 of the Report, to both 'efficiency' and 'effectiveness' (see item 2 below). This makes out a clear basis for serious concern on this issue (and item 2) given the rank the Commissioner held in 2016 and the fact that he has held the helm at the police since 2018. Additionally, it is equally explicitly stated under S.33(1)(a) of the Act that the buck stops with the Commissioner on efficiency:

> S.33(1)The Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service thereof.

Indeed, in his application for the role of Commissioner, the Chief Minister reminded, the now Commissioner had set out (as his 'Key Action 10') that he would immediately upon appointment establish a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been implemented by the 1st March 2019. This date had not been met and it is not clear if the working group had even been established. This 'Key Action' was considered by the Commissioner to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Despite that, not only have the 2015/6 reports not been complied with, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

(b) The incident at sea is further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The effect of the events at sea will create great financial and operational difficulties for the RGP. The RGP has already had to expend funds (which it has sought as supplementary or additional funds from Government) in an external report into the incident at sea. This is being provided by the Met Police in London. Additionally, the RGP is now facing the potential for its officers to be investigated and prosecuted in Gibraltar and / or Spain, officers potentially be legally extradited to Spain for homicide, the resulting high level of legal fees to be incurred and the potentially huge payments of damages to the families which will arise as a result and which will have to be met by the Gibraltar tax payer. An investigation will also be required into what Standard Operating Procedures are in place – approved by senior management – in respect of operations at sea. All of this vitiates efficiency entirely. The issue is a pressing one. The Metropolitan Police are already carrying out an investigation. The delay in that report being provided, and Spanish press reports of claims already filed, may lead to the Chief Minister exercising his powers udner S.15(1)(a) powers to seek a factual report or assessment. The Chief Minister has already raised this with the Governor. A note verbal complaint has been filed by the Spanish authorities on these events which the Chief Minister is waiting to see before he decides whether to exercise his powers, given he as received scant information until now from the Commissioner . It would be the first time since the Police Act came into effect that this power has been exercised.

2. Effectiveness:

(a) In respect of the HMICFRS Report, on this limb of the considerations, the points in re 1 above are linked, in particular in the sentence at the beginning of paragraph 2 of the 'Overview'. The report is similarly laced with matters referring to this aspect of the interest of policing in Gibraltar.

(b) In respect of the incident at sea, the effectiveness of the RGP is impacted as already set out in point 1 above. Additionally the RGP found itself without a key marine asset for some time and its effectiveness as sea was therefore even more severely impacted. Effectiveness of the RGP will now be seriously under threat given the onslaught of legal work which will be required in order to address the claims made, as well as those likely to be made, in respect of this incident.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity: The Chief Minister felt it was best to consider limbs 3 & 4 together as, in his view, they are inextricably linked.

(a) & (b) In the context of the Report (in particular its references to a failure to even understand the potential for, let alone the actual instances of, corruption) and the matters relating to the reporting to us of the events at sea involving the death of two Spanish nationals, this is an area of huge concern to both the Governor and the Chief Minister. Both feel that their respective dealings with the Commissioner have left them with the sense that he is lacking in both probity and integrity in his dealings with them. The Chief Minister indicated that he had held discussions with the Attorney General which led him to believe that Mr Llamas felt the same way, although he obviously could not speak for him.

(c) The Chief Minister also shared another event occurring last week which had left him also in a situation where the Commissioner had expressly misled him and which left him unable to believe the Commissioner.

The Chief Minister stated that for him this is possibly the issue of deepest concern as it goes to the integrity and probity of a key individual in the maintenance of the respect for the Rule of Law. Additionally, that individual, as Commissioner is, in the Chief Minister's view, at the head of the organisation that is institutionally one of the guardians of the Rule of Law alongside the Executive and the Judiciary. For the Chief Minister, to an extent the police becomes a fourth branch of government in the maintenance and preservation of the Rule of Law. The Chief Minister stated that without the Rule of Law we are unrecognisable as a nation. The Chief Minister said that he can imagine no greater concern than this in the context of his ability to discharge his oath to the Crown and to the People as Chief Minister.

5. Independence:

(a) This area of concern is highlighted in the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given the answers set out in the Report, is clearly not even understood in the RGP. Again, these concerns can cut across the Rule of Law in a meaningful way. It is not possible for the RGP to assert that it is acting independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of the Commissioner's service to date – despite his assertions of wanting to address the issues in his application.

His Excellency then expressed his views.

The Governor said that the Chief Minister had expressed views he entirely shared.

His Excellency stated that, in addition, he had felt misled when the incident at sea had occurred and that he felt he had not received all information available to the RGP in respect of that event. He said that there had been no proactivity in addressing the events especially given the serious outcome which had resulted in loss of life. He felt he had been left with no choice but to seek further information when this should have been forthcoming without the need with persistent enquiry from him. He said he felt this left a lot to be desired.

As a result, the Governor and the Chief Minister consider that, given the views that they have now expressed it is for the GPA to take this forward in the first instance.

They ask the GPA to consider these extremely serious concerns and issues and that the GPA should engage its powers under Section 34 of the Act which specifically provides that the GPA's action to "call upon" the Commissioner to retire cannot be commenced until BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister have been consulted and ONE of has agreed. (The part of the clause that relates to consultation is conjunctive and the part that relates to agreement is disjunctive). BOTH in fact agree that the Commissioner should be invited to retire by the GPA.

It is now a matter for the GPA to decide how to act and to decide that they want to engage the S.34(1) power.

If the GPA decide to go down this road, the first step is to allow the Commissioner to make representations, if he wishes, under S.34(2).

It will of course be necessary for the GPA to consider any representation the Commissioner might make.

Thereafter, if the GPA are of the view that the Commissioner should be invited to retire, then that is when they would need to consult BOTH of the Governor and the Chief Minister and then seek the agreement of ONE of them. The Governor and the Chief Minister would then also have the benefit of any representation that the Commissioner might have made under S.34(2) in expressing a final and firm view.

Subject: RE: March 2020 fatal collision between RGP and alleged Spanish smugglers; filing of civil case

As an update, the CM and I met last Friday and, following a long discussion about the RGP and its recent performance, concluded that we had lost confidence in the Commissioner of Police and that we would ask the GPA to call for his retirement. I therefore asked Joey Britto, the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA), to meet with the CM and I. The meeting took place in the Convent on Monday.

At my request, the CM set out the issues of concern, namely the damning HMIC report, the fatal collision, Police Federation allegations of bullying, and the mishandling of a high-profile ongoing investigation in which the Commissioner apparently went against the advice of the Attorney General and Director of Public Prosecutions. The CM then went into detail by linking our concerns to relevant sections of the Police Act. The CM concluded by stating that as a result, we had both lost confidence in the Commissioner and were therefore requesting the GPA to consider using the powers available to them under Section 34 of the Police Act (2006) to call upon the Commissioner to retire. The CM reminded the Chair that should this not happen, the Act gave the Governor powers to call for the resignation of the Commissioner.

I endorsed the CM's position and said that there had to be accountability for the failings, not least given the loss of life. I said the collision incident alone raised grave concerns and has wide-reaching political, financial, reputational and sovereignty implications which may not go well for Gibraltar. I said the common thread through all the issues appeared to be a lack of management and leadership and therefore in my opinion, it is the Commissioner who has to held accountable. I said should the GPA determine that a call to retire was not appropriate, I would consider using the powers available to me under Section 13.(1)(f) which allowed me to call for the resignation of the Commissioner and that as things stood, I would need strong and persuasive arguments not to do so. I said whilst I was not looking to pre-judge the deliberations of the GPA and was mindful that the Commissioner is allowed to make representations as Section 34 allows, the GPA should be in no doubt as to the strength of my feelings. I concluded by saying the powers I have under Section 13.(1)(f) only come into play "in default by the Authority" and as such, the GPA was under some scrutiny.

A clearly shocked Chair said he took note, could see where we were coming from and would convene a meeting of the GPA as soon as practicable, commenting that the Commissioner would most likely fight this.

Comment. The CM was visibly angry during our meeting on Friday and is clearly worried at the political, financial and sovereignty damage the fatal collision incident could do to Gibraltar. Invoking Governor's powers will not go down well and is likely to provoke a backlash. The CM and I recognise the difficulties that lie ahead and have agreed we must be completely as one on this. The Police Act was carefully written shortly after the Constitution was revised and gives us each powers with some overlap. But I agree with the CM and it is important we are seen to be as one on this issue. The RGP, which has many decent and capable officers, is in need of fresh modern leadership and someone skilled in transformational change management. When discussing this the CM rather surprisingly said "we should look externally for a replacement". I was shot down by the former GPA Chair when I recommended this in early 2018

Without doubt, the CM has the bit between his teeth and wants the Commissioner removed from his position as soon as possible. As a result, the CM asked me to postpone the Gibraltar Contingency Council meeting we were due to have tomorrow. I believe the GPA is meeting tomorrow.

I do not think we need to brief the Minister at this stage but should probably do so should the Commissioner step down, hence the length of this email which gives the detail should things take a turn for the worse.

Dear Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority,

RE: Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act

We write on behalf of our client, Ian McGrail, Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police, in response to the communications to him from the Chair of the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') on 22nd May 2020 which set out the Chair's decision to exercise powers under section 34(1) of the Police Act 2006 ('the 2006 Act'), calling on him to retire and seeking any representations from him under section 34(2). The three communications in question were (1) at a meeting that morning, (2) in a letter ('the first letter') handed to him at the 22 May meeting, and (3) in a further letter, sent to him late that evening ('the second letter').

We thank the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') for giving us the opportunity to make representations. We will explain below why the exercise of the s.34 power vested in the GPA would be wholly unjustified and grossly procedurally unfair. Moreover, there is an extremely troubling aspect to this, of which the Chair is fully aware, and which concerns the rule of law in Gibraltar, and which touches on the fundamental principle of the freedom of the Royal Gibraltar Police ('RGP') to carry out criminal enquiries without interference from politicians or the Attorney General.

At the outset, we wish to impress on the members of the GPA your solemn duties under the Constitution and the 2006 Act. The GPA is one of the few bodies created under the Constitution. The Constitution requires the GPA to "be independent in the exercise of its functions". These functions include, under the 2006 Act, that you must "ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar". You must also, because you are a constitutional body, act in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties including the European Convention on Human Rights. It should therefore be self-evident that the GPA plays an essential role in protecting the separation of powers between the executive and police, the rule of law and the rights of the citizens of Gibraltar.

It is in this light that you must make the decision whether to call on Mr. McGrail to retire – a decision which (because of section 34(3)) means he "shall" retire. You will therefore not just be making a request but giving him an instruction to prematurely end his distinguished 36-year policing career, and you will be removing from office the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar. In order to fulfil your constitutional duties, you must make the decision independently from the Governor and Chief Minister. You must not be directed by them. That would be quite wrong, and in violation of your obligations under the 2006 Act and the Constitution.

As set out below, we are deeply concerned by the approach of the Chair in the meeting he had with Mr. McGrail on 22 May. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that if he refused to comply with the invitation to retire then the Governor would use his powers under s.13(f) of the 2006 Act to call for his resignation. The decision was presented to Mr. McGrail as a fait accompli. The Chair said in effect that it did not matter how he responded – the result would be the end of his career either because he would be forced to retire in accordance with your request or would be called to resign by the Governor using his power under s.13(f). This is not how your power under s.34 works. It only applies if the GPA considers it is "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing" to request that the Commissioner retire, following consideration of any representations made by him. If you do not properly consider these representations and do not make an independent decision you will be acting unlawfully and your decision will be vulnerable to a judicial review challenge.

The damage to Gibraltar as a jurisdiction which claims to adhere to the Rule of Law would be incalculable. As people of standing in our community it will be immediately obvious to you already that the removal of the Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police in the way in which the GPA is being pushed to do is a travesty which will bring shame to Gibraltar and international derision when we are always trying to prove our democratic, non-colonial attributes in every international forum up to the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonization.

The background and motivations which we will proceed to explain (subject to the sensitivities of what is ultimately an ongoing very serious criminal investigation) uncover an abuse of power which is possibly unprecedented in Gibraltar.

The approach the Chair has taken thus far has been for the reasons explained below clearly unlawful. This could potentially be remedied by taking a fully independent decision now and concluding that Mr. McGrail should not be removed from office. This must be a decision of the full GPA, not the Chair alone, as the section 34 power vests in "the Authority". The GPA must also carefully consider whether any of its members has a conflict of interest which would exclude them from taking part in the decision-making process.

In light of the errors made to date, we respectfully suggest that you seek independent legal advice in order to assist you in making a lawful decision. We emphasise that it would be inappropriate to take advice from the Attorney General because he has already expressed a view on the substantive issues, as is clear from the second letter of 22nd May, and, moreover, he has played a key role in the issues we refer to in Section (d) below, as the Chair is already aware. We respectfully suggest that it may be prudent for you to take advice from lawyers in the United Kingdom given the multiplicity of local interests arising from this unfortunate case (as, indeed, Mr McGrail has done; he is represented by an expert counsel team from Gibraltar and London).

This letter is divided in to five sections:

(a) Preliminary Point – Recusal Issue;

(b) The legal framework;

(c) The invitation to retire;

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Failings; and

(e) Response to the substantive issues raised by the GPA.

(a) Preliminary point – Recusal Issue

1. There are two preliminary matters concerning recusal.

2. First, Mr. Nick Pyle is currently named as the member of the GPA appointed by the Governor.[1] He has been the interim Governor since February 2020 and he has had personal involvement in the background to this matter, as we summarise in these submissions. He should play no part in decision-making of the Authority under section 34 in any event, given the distinct role of the Governor under that section. We ask for an assurance that the GPA Chair will ensure that Mr. Pyle is not involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34.

3. Second, and related, we wish at the outset to raise an issue of very significant sensitivity and concern. It relates to a current police investigation. It would therefore be inappropriate to provide specific details of that investigation save as to the limited extent set out below (we address this further in section (d), as it is relevant to this invitation to retire). We know that the Chair is already aware of the background as it was discussed at his and Mr. McGrail's meeting on 22nd May, when he told Mr. McGrail it was discussed at the meeting when the Chief Minister and Governor said that they and the Attorney General had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. You will understand that it would not be appropriate for Mr. McGrail to provide more detail of a live investigation. However, we can say that it relates to national security and involves an alleged criminal conspiracy which potentially reaches to the highest levels of the community.

4. This is a further reason why it is essential that the Chair provide reassurance to us that Mr. Pyle will not be involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34. In addition, we suggest that it would be prudent for a further member of the GPA, Ms. Claire Pizzarello, to recuse herself from decision-making in this matter. We do not provide further details at this stage, and we trust that the Chair will agree that this would be a sensible course of action in the circumstances. (Should further information be required by the Chair, he should inform us of this.) We emphasise that there is no suggestion whatsoever of Ms. Pizzarello having any personal involvement in the matters in question, and this approach is suggested out of an abundance of caution.

(b) The legal framework

The Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 ('The Constitution')

5. Chapter 1 of the Constitution protects fundamental rights and freedoms. The Preamble states that the people of Gibraltar's right to self-determination must be "promoted and respected in conformity with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties". The European Convention on Human Rights is an "applicable international treaty".

6. The Constitution protects, amongst other rights, the right to privacy (section ('s') 7) and the right to freedom of expression (s.10).

7. The Constitution provides that there shall be a Police Authority for Gibraltar which "shall be independent in the exercise of its functions" (s.48(1)).

8. The 2006 Act establishes the GPA (section 3(1)).

9. Part I sets out the responsibilities and powers of the GPA. s. 5 relevantly includes responsibilities: "to secure the maintenance of an efficient and effective police force for Gibraltar", "to ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar", "to establish, operate and supervise the process for investigating complaints against police officers under this Act" and "to hold the Commissioner to account for matters which are the responsibility of the Authority.

10. Part II sets out the Governor's and the Government's responsibilities for policing. Section 13 provides for the Governor's powers "in default by the Authority", which are exercisable only where the Authority "has failed to discharge or perform a responsibility imposed on the Authority under this Act". The powers include "where in the opinion of the Governor the integrity, probity or independence of the police has been compromised or is at risk, to direct the Force to take appropriate action to remedy the situation or avoid the risk" and "to suspend from duty, or call for the resignation of the Commissioner".

11. Section 15(1) provides that the Chief Minister may exercise various powers on behalf of the Government, including (a) require factual or assessment reports from the Force or the Authority on any policing matter, provided that there may be withheld from any such report any fact disclosure of which is likely to prejudice the effective operation of the Force.

12. Part IV provides for the establishment of the Royal Gibraltar Police Force. Section 32(1) provides for the appointment of the Commissioner of Police by the Governor, acting on the advice of the Authority, subject to any provision of the Constitution; for such that the Authority may advise and as shall be set out in the instrument of appointment.

13. Section 33(1) provides that the Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service. (section 33(2)).

14. Section 34 provides for the removal of the Commissioner by the GPA. It is set out in full below:

> "34.(1) The Authority acting after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister and with the agreement of either of them, may call upon the Commissioner to retire, in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar.

(2) Before seeking the approval of the Governor and the Chief Minister under subsection (1), the Authority shall give the Commissioner an opportunity to make representations and shall consider any representations that he makes.

(3) Where the Commissioner is called upon to retire under subsection (1), he shall retire on such date as the Authority may specify or on such earlier date as may be agreed upon between him and the Authority."

Human rights

15. The European Convention on Human Rights protects the right to respect for private and family life under Article 8 and the right to freedom of expression under Article 10. Both rights can be interfered with by the state by certain situations but only where that interference is lawful, necessary and proportionate in pursuance of a legitimate aim.

16. The European Court of Human Rights and the Council of Europe (which oversees the European Court) have repeatedly emphasised that corruption threatens the rule of law. There have been a number of cases where sanctions imposed on whistleblowers have been found to breach Article 10 ECHR – in cases involving the dismissal of public servants this has sometimes been articulated as an attack on reputation protected by Article 8 ECHR. As you will see below, the law relating to whistleblowers is relevant.

17. In Guja v. Moldova (No. 1)[2] the Grand Chamber held unanimously that there had been a violation of Article 10 (freedom of expression). The applicant was Head of the Press Department of the Moldovan Prosecutor General's Office. The case concerned his dismissal for giving a newspaper two letters received by the Prosecutor General's Office which disclosed interference by a high-ranking politician in pending criminal proceedings.

The Court balanced the conflicting factors under Art.10 and concluded there had been a breach.

> [72] ... The Court thus considers that the signalling by a civil servant or an employee in the public sector of illegal conduct or wrongdoing in the workplace should, in certain circumstances, enjoy protection. This may be called for where the employee or civil servant concerned is the only person, or part of a small category of persons, aware of what is happening at work and is thus best placed to act in the public interest by alerting the employer or the public at large.

18. Article 8 ECHR includes the right to protection of reputation.[3] As stated in Axel Springer AG v. Germany[4], judgment (Grand Chamber) of 7 February 2012, paras. 83-84:

> "... [T]he right to protection of reputation is a right which is protected by Article 8 of the Convention as part of the right to respect for private life ... In order for Article 8 to come into play, however, an attack on a person's reputation must attain a certain level of seriousness and in a manner causing prejudice to personal enjoyment of the right to respect for private life ...

19. The Council of Europe's Criminal Law Convention on Corruption ("the Corruption Convention") of 27th January 1999 states[5] in its pre-amble that "corruption threatens the rule of law, democracy and human rights, undermines good governance, fairness and social justice, distorts competition, hinders economic development and endangers the stability of democratic institutions and the moral foundations of society".

[5] https://www.coe.int/en/web/conventions/full-list/-/conventions/rms/0900001680007f3f.

20. Each Party to the Corruption Convention shall adopt measures to ensure that persons or entities are specialised in the fight against corruption. They shall have the necessary independence in accordance with the fundamental principles of the legal system of the Party, in order for them to be able to carry out their functions effectively and free from any undue pressure.

21. The preamble to the Council of Europe Code of Police Ethics[6] states that "the criminal justice system plays a key role in safeguarding the rule of law and that the police have an essential role within that system". Paragraph 15 provides:

> The police shall enjoy sufficient operational independence from other state bodies in carrying out its given police tasks, for which it should be fully accountable.

22. Paragraph 34 states:

> Public authorities shall support police personnel who are subject to ill-founded accusations concerning their duties.

23. The Committee of Ministers' Recommendation on the protection of whistleblowers adopted on 30th April 2014 relevantly states in the preamble that "freedom of expression and the right to seek and receive information are fundamental for the functioning of a genuine democracy" and recognises that individuals who report or disclose information on threats or harm to the public interest, i.e. whistleblowers, can contribute to strengthening transparency and democratic accountability. Paragraph 21 states:

> Whistleblowers should be protected against retaliation of any form, whether directly or indirectly, by their employer and by persons working for or acting on behalf of the employer. Forms of such retaliation might include dismissal, suspension, demotion, loss of promotion opportunities, punitive transfers and reductions in or deductions of wages, harassment or other punitive or discriminatory treatment.

24. Protection from retaliation is clearly a matter of fundamental importance particularly when the potential victim is none other than the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar.

(c) The invitation to retire

25. On the morning of 22nd May 2020 Mr. McGrail met with the GPA Chair, when the Chair invited him to retire pursuant to s.34(1) of the 2006 Act.

26. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that he had met with the Governor and the Chief Minister on Monday 18th May and they had told him they had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. He said that he had taken notes of the meeting. It began with the Governor and Chief Minister taking him through the various options under the Police Act and focussing on section 13 (the power of the Governor to suspend from duty or call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the GPA has failed to discharge its duties) and section 34 (the GPA's power to remove the Commissioner from post).

27. The Chair made it very clear that he did not make this decision himself and that in his view the decision was entirely for the Governor and the Chief Minister to make. Although he said Mr. McGrail could make representations, it was made clear to him that if he does not take the offer of retirement then the Governor will trigger his power under s.13 to call for his resignation. It is in effect, an 'offer he can't refuse' – or, to put it another way, it is the equivalent, for an office-holder, of constructive dismissal.

28. It was also made clear to Mr. McGrail that the issue of his handling of the investigation referred to above was an important factor in the decision making by the Governor and Chief Minister. He said that the AG had all lost confidence in him because he had "lied" about the particular operation – which he strenuously denied.

29. At the time of the meeting none of the alleged issues with Mr. McGrail's conduct had been put in writing. When Mr. McGrail highlighted that this was unfair, the Chair offered to provide him with his notes of the 18th May meeting. Mr. McGrail asked for the reasons to be put in writing so he could properly respond.

30. At the meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed a letter containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s. 34(1) power ('the first letter'). This was a short letter which provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"), however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to s.34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". Mr. McGrail was given 7 days to respond to the initial letter (i.e. by today, 29th May – a period which included a long weekend) and invited to seek more time if required.

31. Mr. McGrail received a second letter late on Friday night, 22nd May, which provided more detail, relevantly stating:

    a. "the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar."

    b. "Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief

    c. Five "main issues" (in reality, these are four issues as two run together) were set out "contributing to the loss of confidence", including:

i. Efficiency: "The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear (sic) damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP...."

ii. "Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction."

iii. "I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident... [he has] expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you..."

iv. Effectiveness: that the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and will now be "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload".

v. Probity and integrity "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point...

vi. "additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings"

vii. "The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity."

viii. Independence: "This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service."

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Flaws

32. This process has been tainted from the outset by conspicuous unfairness, and it is grossly procedurally unfair. These flaws fall into the category described by Lord Bridge in Calvin v. Carr [1979] UKPC 1, [1979] 2 All ER 440: "when the defect is so flagrant, the consequences so severe, that the most perfect of appeals or rehearings will not be sufficient to produce a just result." The approach adopted here amounts to an attack on the Constitution, the rule of law and human rights principles, and it subverts the principle of separation of powers in a number of respects.

i. The Vanishing Reason for the Invitation to Retire

33. First, we indicated at the outset of this letter, when addressing the preliminary matter of recusal, that there is a sensitive matter concerning an ongoing criminal investigation, the detail of which Mr. McGrail does not address herein. The relevance of this issue to the invitation to retire is as follows. This matter was discussed in the 22nd May meeting as forming part of the reasoning behind the Chief Minister and the Governor informing the GPA Chair that he should invite Mr. McGrail to retire. Indeed, Mr. McGrail indicated at that meeting that he understood it to be the real and central reason for the request. However, this reason is, oddly, not cited in the second, detailed letter of 22nd May. Instead, that letter refers expressly only to two other matters – the incident at sea in March 2020 and the inspection report following the inspection in October 2019.

35. By contrast, in recent months, and particularly the past fortnight, Mr. McGrail has received very significant and at times intemperate private criticism from the Chief Minister and Attorney General about a separate matter, namely how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled. For many months the AG has been trying (unsuccessfully, we might add) to persuade Mr. McGrail to change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted. Mr. McGrail has rebuffed these attempts and has treated this investigation as he would any other – characteristic of his probity and professionalism. The operational decisions in respect of this investigation have, in any event, been taken by individual officers below Mr. McGrail's rank, acting professionally and appropriately.

36. On 12th May, out of courtesy, Mr. McGrail notified the Chief Minister, the AG and the Minister of Justice of a certain operational action which was taken by the RGP in the case. Both the Chief Minister and AG immediately messaged him to say, in no uncertain terms, that they disapproved of the action. He was immediately called into a meeting with the Chief Minister and the AG. He was very severely criticised for the action that had been taken. The Chief Minister told him that, in his view, Mr. McGrail had handled the investigation "very very wrongly". He was told by the AG that he had to this point approved of his work but from that day he could not "entertain" Mr. McGrail again. The emotional response from both the Chief Minister and the AG is startling.

37. This was followed by two subsequent meetings with the AG and Director of Public Prosecutions (on 13th and 15th May respectively) where pressure was put on Mr. McGrail by the AG to change the RGP's investigative approach to the operation and he was given the strong impression that the AG was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and "Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words).

38. It is grossly inappropriate in a jurisdiction under the Rule of Law for politicians to interfere with any live criminal investigation in this way. It tramples over the separation of powers which is an integral feature of our Constitution. However, in this case the Chief Minister has a personal connection to the outcome of the investigation, which makes his intervention even more inappropriate. Not only should he not attempt to influence the investigation, he should completely recuse himself for any decisions or conversations which touch upon it.

39. The reason it is relevant to your decision is that we submit to you that the timing of the use of the s.34 process, which was triggered by the Chief Minister and the Governor and, we understand, came as a complete surprise to the GPA Chair, strongly suggests that the incident at sea and inspection report are fig leaves for the real reason Mr. McGrail is being pressured to retire, i.e. his (proper and reasonable) handling of a live criminal investigation.

40. It is unnecessary for us merely to rely on an inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point. The GPA Chair confirmed to Mr. McGrail at their meeting on 22nd May that his handling of the criminal investigation referred to above was spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail. The Chair told Mr. McGrail he took a note of his meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor, which we assume he can provide to you for your consideration. It is wholly unclear why this matter is then omitted from the letters sent to Mr. McGrail on 22nd May – although a simple explanation is that it was obvious to those writing the letters that if it were included it would invalidate the entire process. This is a clear breach of the requirements of fairness in itself – this was a factor cited in the meeting on 22nd May, at which no written documents were given to Mr. McGrail, yet the letters omit this material factor.

41. Further, we note that a factor which is cited in the Chair's 22nd May second letter is the Attorney General being said to have "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail, for an unspecified reason: "Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings". The Chair made clear to Mr. McGrail at the 22nd May meeting that this was entirely because of the criminal investigation matter referred to above and it reflects the comments made to Mr. McGrail by him directly at the meeting on 12th May. In reality, it is clear that this incident is at the heart of this request under section 34, despite it not appearing in the second letter.

42. We note that in the Chair's second letter it is stated "the Governor and the Chief Minister ... consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised". Unfortunately, we agree with that statement, and that statement alone, but for significantly different reasons. If the GPA decides to exercise its s.34 power, in the full knowledge that background involves the Chief Minister and AG seeking to interfere with a live criminal investigation, this would indeed be an affront to the rule of law and a breach of your duties under the Constitution. This would be a gross violation of the rule of law, and not the actions of an independent body in a mature democracy.

ii. Independence

43. There are further serious procedural failings. It was made clear to Mr. McGrail at the meeting on 22nd May 2020 that the Chair was proceeding on the basis that this is a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and he has taken his lead from them. This is also clear from the first letter, which followed the meeting. This is a fundamental misunderstanding of the statutory scheme: the section 34 decision is for the Authority. It also disregards the vital importance of the independence of the Authority, enshrined in the Constitution, s. 48(1).

iii. A Settled Decision

44. The process followed on 22nd May is not compliant with section 34. The statute makes clear that submissions must be sought under section 34(2) before the section 34(1) process is followed. The Commissioner is entitled to be given an opportunity to make representations, and for them to be considered. For this to be a meaningful opportunity, the Authority must not have a closed mind. In this instance, however, the Authority Chair has called upon the Commissioner to retire (under section 34(1)), indicating that this decision has been reached already: "the Authority feels that it is left with no option but to exercise the powers afforded to the Authority under section 34(1)..." The wording used is unambiguous. This was clear at the meeting on 22nd May, and it is expressly set out in the first letter of that date.

45. The first letter is instructive. At this meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed this short letter, containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s.34(1) power. This was very brief and provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire based on the Governor and the Chief Minister's views ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"); however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to section 34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". This language, promising to take the submissions into consideration, cannot be squared with the fact that definitive language making clear that the Authority has already set out an invitation to retire under section 34(1).

46. This not only raises concerns under section 34. It also results in a process which is not compliant with the concept of natural justice. Mr. McGrail cannot be penalised by a decision which would have such a devastating impact upon him without him being given prior notice of the case he has to answer, and a fair opportunity to answer it. This has not been the case here.

iv. The Relevance of Section 13

47. At the meeting of 22nd May, the Chair informed Mr. McGrail that this was not a decision for him, but a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and that if he did not invite Mr. McGrail to retire under section 34 then the Governor would exercise his power under s. 13. The Chair made clear that this had informed the decision to trigger section 34. However, this is an extraordinary situation, raising very serious concerns, and it taints the section 34 decision. The entire point of section 13 is that it only applies when Authority is in default; it is not a mechanism for the Governor to simply use when he disagrees with the Authority, or when he disagrees with an action by the Police Commissioner, and nor is it a power which should be pre-emptively threatened in order to lean on the Authority to trigger section 34.

(e) Response to the issues raised in the letter

48. We have addressed above why we believe that this attempt to remove Mr. McGrail from post is a pretence which would not have occurred but for the Chief Minister and AG's criticism of his handling of a particular live investigation. However, it is of course important and necessary to respond directly to the two issues which are directly mentioned in the 22 May letter. We should emphasise that our client takes both the incident at sea and the inspection report extremely seriously, as can be seen by his immediate and continuing actions in response to them, however we do not accept, even arguably, that either issue could be the basis of the use of the section 34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from his post in the interests of "efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar".

Mr. McGrail's career to date

49. Before addressing the substantive issues, we want to give you some background about Mr. McGrail's career as a police officer. This is so that in considering the issues, you can do so in the context of his record, which can only be described as exemplary. Mr. McGrail has had a long, unblemished and distinguished career in the RGP for 36 years, having joined in 1984. In the first decade of his career he served in front-line policing, and following the "fast launch" public disturbances in the mid-1990s he had particular responsibility for uplifting RGP's capacity and capability in order and personal safety.

50. In 2006, he became the youngest and most junior inspector at the time to be promoted to Chief Inspector. From 2012 he was a Superintendent. In 2015 he was included in the Queen's Birthday State Honours list and was awarded the Overseas Territories Police

Medal for meritorious service. He has been awarded the Queen's Golden and Diamond Jubilee medals and the long service and good conduct medal with first and second clasps. And, as you know his record is exemplary. Mr. McGrail has numerous letters of appreciation throughout his career and been commended five times, including once by the Director of the United States Naval Criminal Investigation Service and on another by the Chief Justice of Gibraltar. All the commendations have been for meritorious investigative work leading to prosecutions. He has throughout his career sought to develop personally and professionally and attended the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy Programme for 3 months in Quantico, Virginia 2007 , is a Master of Science in Policing and Public Order with the University of Leicester and in 2013 attended the Strategic Command Course with the UK's College of Policing.

51. What has distinguished Mr McGrail is his dedication to service and ability to innovate and develop new ideas and working practices. In 1995 following the most severe riots in the last twenty years in Gibraltar, Mr McGrail was one of two officers tasked with reviewing and developing the RGP's response to public order situations. He went on to qualify as a public order instructor and also as a public order commander. He created and developed an RGP public order unit, commenced a training and development programme, which continues in the form he devised to this day.

52. His flair for innovation and openness to new working practices saw him create the Corporate Development department. Corporate development being a non-existent concept in the RGP at the time. Mr McGrail was instrumental in creating / drafting policies and guidelines in areas where they were required. In addition, he helped put procedures in place to improve the processes around the detention and custody of persons in police detention.

53. On 1st May 2018, Mr. McGrail was appointed as Commissioner of the RGP for a four-year term of warrant, on the advice of the GPA. In his letter of appointment, it was requested that the GPA conduct a review process against the objectives set out in the vision statement and action plan he provided to the Governor. This was supposed to take place two years into his term, which means it should be taking place now. In his letter, the Governor at the time, His Excellency General Edward Davis, said he looked forward to working closely with Mr. McGrail "as we all do our utmost to protect, progress and promote the Rule of Law in Gibraltar".

54. Since he took up the post of Commissioner, one of the first things he did was present to the Gibraltar Police Authority all the force policies for the Authority to ratify as required in law, something which had not been done previously. This is characteristic of his qualities of openness, transparency and accountability.

55. More recently he has been instrumental in the development of the Force Intelligence Unit, taking it from being a unit of limited capability to professional and proactive unit properly servicing the organisation. Mr McGrail's networking skills have enabled him to draw upon contacts in the U.S., Spain and the U.K. to enhance the RGP's intelligence exchange and law enforcement co-operation mechanisms with all these territories. Very significant cross border operations have been carried under his leadership attracting extensive positive media coverage. These efforts have also been recognised by the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General as it no doubt aids the building of relationships with the Kingdom of Spain in the post-Brexit era. Mr. McGrail is part of the Gibraltar law enforcement delegation to work on delivering the Brexit MOU on law enforcement co-operation with Spain. All these mentioned points have brought improvements to the quality of service delivered by the RGP.

56. In the organisational context Mr. McGrail has pushed for procedural and policy advancements. The RGP's total complement of officers results in officers such as Mr. McGrail having to embark on the tasks described on their own, without the benefit of a supporting team as would be the case in a UK mainland force. Further complicating the task is the distance between the RGP and mainland forces makes it impractical to regularly meet and consult colleagues engaged in similar projects to share experience and knowledge.

57. The year 2019 saw unprecedented levels of demand imposed on the RGP including a total of 85 major events, which included 13 Assemblies/demonstrations, 10 international football matches (including a top 3 with the most ultra-fan base in Europe, who were at the matches in numbers), European Elections, General Elections, Small Island Games that run for a full week, Grace 1 (the first time a vessel had been boarded for contravening EU sanctions), eight large scale music events, major social events such National Day, New Year's Eve Celebrations, the Festival of lights and 14 Public Military Events. Mr McGrail oversaw the planning and execution of all of these events all of which met with the operational aims and objectives. Public security and safety was successfully upheld.

58. He has also been responsible for, in just two years in post:

a. Adopting the UK Home Office counting rules for the recording of crime. The RGP's previous methods had been subject of criticism by HMIC for presenting overly favourable detection rates.;

b. Project Servator which is a community orientated counter-terrorism initiative;

c. Restructuring of the force to release police officers to core policing duties;

d. Restructuring and uplifting of the Economic Crime Unit ('ECU'), to incorporate a fraud and Anti Money Laundering Unit;

e. The creation of the RGP's first ever Wellbeing Strategy 2019-2022;

f. The creation of 16 Wellbeing Champions, spread throughout the force;

g. The creation of a bespoke Mental Health referral procedure with Ocean Views medical facility for all police officers and support staff. No other HMGOG department has this system in place;

h. Significant strides with PSN connectivity – this is connectivity with the UK police service;

i. Partnership building and resources obtained through National Police Co-ordination Centre for Brexit contingency planning, Small Island Games & International football matches;

j. COVID-19 policing – which has seen restrictions in freedom of movement as never seen before in modern history.

59. Additionally, under Mr McGrail's leadership, the RGP has developed and implemented the following new policies and reviewed a further number of them. All of these have met the approval of the GPA:

a. 2018: Response Team Leader Policy (new), Gifts and Hospitality Policy (new), Alcohol and Substance Abuse Policy (new), Taser Policy (New)

b. 2019: Transfer Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Management of Exhibits (Reviewed & Amended); Domestic Violence (Reviewed & Amended); Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Mobile Device Policy (New).

c. 2020: Caution policy (Reviewed & Amended), Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Bullying Policy (New); Grievance policy and Procedure (New); Compromised Persons Policy (New); Mental Wellbeing Policy - New (No police service in the UK has this).

60. During Mr. McGrail's tenure, there has been an 8.3% reduction in crime, a 33% reduction in repeat victimisation, a 33% reduction in repeat offending and a 54% detection rate. These statistics are enviable to any UK police service. Additionally, during his tenure, a good level of public satisfaction has been maintained and in certain areas improved, according to your own public consultation surveys. He has, most recently, appeared on live television delivering public information bulletins for COVID-19 crisis on four occasions: on 9th April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 21st April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 3rd May and Minister of Justice and on the 10th May with the Minister of Justice again. If the Government or Chief Minister had lost confidence in his abilities you might reasonably ask why he was allowed to give these important briefings to the whole of Gibraltar.

61. Further, and for the sake of completeness, we remind you of Mr. McGrail's success in promoting international law enforcement cooperation, in an area which has been fraught with difficulties in the past, has been recognised by both the Spanish National Police and the Guardia Civil who have nominated Mr. McGrail for the "La Cruz de la Orden del Mérito Policial con distinctivo Blanco" and "La Orden del Mérito de la Guardia Civil con distinctivo" medals respectively. This is of course unprecedented and underscores the high esteem with which Mr. McGrail is held by his international colleagues in Spain.

62. On 8th March 2020 at around 03:38 an incident occurred involving a collision at sea between an RGP patrol craft and a smuggling vessel. Two people on the smuggling vessel, Dris Mohamed and Abdeselam Ahmed, reportedly both Spanish nationals, died in the incident and two were injured. The incident occurred outside of British Gibraltar Territorial Waters ('BGTW').

63. The March 2020 incident is raised by the 22 May letters in two ways: in itself ("the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction"); and in respect of communication (the Governor "expressed the view that he

64. As regards the unfortunate incident itself, there is no explanation as to why it is suggested that the actions of individual officers reflect on Mr. McGrail or are indicative of a systemic pattern of acting beyond the remit and jurisdiction of the RGP. There is no particularity at all, meaning it is impossible to respond in any detail save to say that at Mr. McGrail responded to the incident with his usual integrity and transparency. It is simply bizarre to claim that the Governor and Chief Minister have lost confidence in Mr. McGrail because they blame him for the incident itself when (a) at the time of the meeting with the Chair and the 22 May letters the Chief Minister had requested, but had not received, a response to the detailed request for information which was sent to him on 21 May this was the first such request Mr. McGrail has received, and (b) at that time they had not received (and still have not received) the independent report which is being carried out by the Metropolitan Police and was commissioned within days by Mr. McGrail himself or the conclusive report of the independent marine accident expert.

65. A further example is given relating to the RGP being without the use of a vessel, and thus being, "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload". Again, there is no indication as to why this would justify the exceptional step of inviting the Commissioner to retire, and, indeed, this would not address the issue regarding the vessel. In any event, the proposition that the effectiveness of the marine section has been compromised is nonsense. The RGP's Marine Section has resilience. It has other vessels and the fact that one of them has been out of service because of the collision has not hampered capabilities.

66. In any event, it is for the GPA to reach an independent decision in respect of this issue. We submit that it would be highly unfair and contrary to the principles of natural justice for the GPA to pre-emptively blame Mr McGrail for this incident, prior to a detailed consideration of the independent report from the Metropolitan Police. However, and in any event, the fact that the alleged 'loss of confidence' it is so obviously premature and pre-emptive further proves the point we make above that the real motives behind the action by the Governor and Chief Minister are not this incident. Rather, this incident is serving as a pretext, although on any analysis not a convincing one.

67. As regards communication, we understand that the Section 15 reply (sent shortly before these submissions) comprehensively debunks the suggestion that there was inadequate communication. Mr. McGrail messaged the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General within two hours of the emergency response group being convened and kept them fully informed throughout, promptly responding to all requests for information. He subsequently met with the Attorney General on 17th March to develop a working strategy to deal with the consequences of the incident, which the AG agreed to. He further briefed the AG on 18 March on the progress of the Metropolitan Police investigation. The Metropolitan Police team was also in direct contact with the Governor. On 22nd March Mr. McGrail again met with the Attorney General and DPP to discuss the potential civil legal action arising from the incident. The AG did not want to consider further strategy until the Metropolitan Police's report findings had been received. This has still not been received despite many requests to expedite it the Covid 19 Crisis in the UK has taken its toll on policing as in many other areas of business. A marine investigator's report has also been commissioned and is currently being finalised. The simple point here is that it is premature to reach any conclusions in relation to this incident and it would be highly unfair to dismiss Mr. McGrail on the basis of a wholly unparticularised and vague accusation such as this.

68. In relation to the suggestion that Mr. McGrail has misled the Governor, this is not particularised; it is a vague slur, without explanation. We do not know what it refers to. If it relates to the incident taking place in Spanish waters, it is not possible to follow the rationale. In any event, the Governor was promptly and fully briefed by Mr McGrail on that issue and Mr. McGrail understands that the Metropolitan Police team, who were conducting an independent investigation, also briefed the Governor's office.

69. A further slur is included in relation to Mr. McGrail's "probity and integrity," phrased in a hopelessly vague way, without specificity: "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point..." Reference is made to the Attorney General, but as we have submitted above this could only refer to the criminal investigation, as the Chair also informed Mr. McGrail.

The HMICFRS Report

70. The claim that confidence in Mr. McGrail's ability to do his job has been lost to a lack of efficiency on the part of the RGP, based on the findings of the HMICFRS, does not stack up. As can be seen from the above, Mr. McGrail has a long and distinguished career. His term as Commissioner has been busy and successful. It is simply absurd to accuse him of failing to take proactive steps to address systemic issues which were identified in the 2016 report, two years before he commenced in office.

71. As regards efficiency, the inspection report is clear that there are long-standing problems, which were identified in the previous (2016) inspection report, have not been fully addressed by the time of the October 2019 inspection. Mr. McGrail had by that time only been in post for a little over a year, and it is simply not credible to suggest that these flaws can and should be laid at his door. Further, during his short period in office prior to the inspection he had to address the July 2019 arrest and investigation of the Iranian Oil Tanker "Grace 1" which was an extraordinary incident, managed by the RGP and supported by the Royal Marines, and which attracted widespread acclaim (see the brief reference at p. 13 of the report).

72. In addition, the report makes clear in respect of efficiency that the RGP is in need of additional resources, from the Government/ FCO.

73. Insofar as it is suggested that Mr. McGrail did not set up a working group, his response is that as a result of the unprecedented demand placed on the RGP during 2019, the RGP has been addressing the issues raised in the Report by merging them in daily work practices. This can be seen by the initiatives referred to above and the results achieved. In addition, as you know Mr. McGrail has provided the Authority and the Minister of Justice with a comprehensive road map for implementing the 2020 report. These have both been agreed to be the proper procedure and no concerns have been raised. Indeed, some of the recommendations in the Report have since been met and the others are in progress. It would simply be irrational to conclude that this approach would justify forcing him to take early retirement.

74. It is of note that the 22nd May letter was the first Mr. McGrail has heard that either the Chief Minister or Governor – or indeed any member of the Government – lays blame for any of the issues identified in the report with him. None of the conversations he has had around the report have reflected the 22nd May letter which again raises the strong inference that this issue is being used as a pretence to mask the real reason for attempting to remove Mr. McGrail. For example, the Minister for Justice, Samantha Sacramento MP, messaged him on 29 April to say the report "is shocking reading on the face of it, but if you analyse it deeper it's not that bad, and it's has easy solutions" and "it can all be fixed don't worry". This message reflected the tone and content of the communications around the report. There have also been a number of very recent articles in the press which highlight the exceptional nature of the RGP given the unusually wide range of issues it has to deal with – from drug smuggling and international fraud to world diplomatic incidents involving maritime vessels – and the potential unfairness of applying the same standards as apply to other forces to such an unusual jurisdiction.

75. In addition, we note that an article in the Gibraltar Chronicle of the 28th May 2020 by an independent journalist, Mr. James Neish, who is intimately aware of the work of the RGP, suggests that the Report may have unfairly minimised the unique demands made of the RGP and which it responds to successfully for the most part. The article is titled "It's always easier to judge from a distance".

76. As stated above, the GPA must reach an independent conclusion in respect of this issue. It has not carried out the 2-year performance review requested by the Governor at the time of Mr. McGrail's appointment. We submit that there is a complete lack of evidence of Mr. McGrail's culpability for any of the issues highlighted by the inspection report. He has, in any event, taken extensive steps to improve and modernise the RGP. It would therefore be grossly unfair to conclude that, having been in post just over a year before the inspection,

Mr. McGrail is sufficiently blameworthy for the conclusions of the inspection report such that he should be forced to retire "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar". However, and in any event, in order to reach such a conclusion it would be necessary for the GPA to carry out a full and fair review into Mr. McGrail's record during his time in post.

Conclusion

77. For the reasons stated above there is no possible, valid reason for the GPA to exercise its s.34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from office. The only rational decision for the GPA to reach is to dismiss the request of the Governor and Chief Minister. In any event, the defects in this process are already so flagrant that it would not be possible to reach a just result unless it is to allow Mr. McGrail to remain in post.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Mr. Chairman

Re: Invitation to Retire – section 34 Police Act.

I would like to thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29 May 2020 sent to you by Mr Charles Gomez, acting on behalf of the Commissioner of Police ("CoP"), on the above-captioned matter (the "Letter").

A number of matters and allegations in the Letter concern me, either directly or indirectly. My position within the GPA (paras 1-4 of the Letter) is one which I assume you will be addressing yourself in the GPA's reply to Mr Gomez. In any event, as you are aware, I wrote to you on 19 February 2020 explaining how I thought we could proceed during such time as I was acting as Governor. For clarity, all my communications with you since 19 February 2020 have been as Governor and NOT as a member of the GPA.

With regard to the remaining contents of the Letter, I would like to address only two specific points at this stage. What I say is without prejudice to further information that I would be happy and able to provide if it were considered necessary to do so. Silence on any point made in Letter is not be interpreted as my acquiescence to any of them.

1. The relevance of the ongoing criminal investigation and its timing.

The first issue is the offensive assertion that my lack of confidence in the CoP, and therefore my conviction that he lacks both probity and integrity, is based on the RGP's handling of the so-called ongoing criminal investigation.

My deep concerns with the CoP's leadership qualities have absolutely nothing to do with that investigation. The already-existing concerns that I have had with the CoP were confirmed by the incident at sea (March 2020) and the HMIC Report (published in May 2020).

In relation to the former, the seriousness of the incident of 8 March 2020 does not require explanation. By its own, it has raised grave concerns with wide-reaching political, financial, reputational and sovereignty implications. They raise very serious concerns about the leadership at the RGP.

Furthermore, I suspected at the time of the immediate aftermath of the incident that the CoP's disclosure of information to me was evasive in particular in relation to the critical issue of whether or not the incident had occurred within BGTW. I know that when the CoP was telling me that it was not clear where the incident had occurred, he was informing the Chief Minister that the incident had indeed occurred outside BGTW. Indeed, it occurred some 7.5 nautical miles beyond Gibraltar's baseline and therefore well outside BGTW. I find this evasiveness on a key issue to demonstrate a total lack of respect to the office of Governor particularly since the CoP knew that this was the drucial issue for me and for both the UK and Gibraltar Governments as far as diplomatic relations with Spain were concerned.

In relation to the latter, on 30 April 2020, after having seen a draft of the Report, I wrote to the Chief Minister saying that I found the Report to be "quite damning". Indeed, the day before, I had written to you saying that I did not think that the Report should be published.

I was informed, for the first time, of the very existence of the criminal investigation referred to in the Letter on 15 May 2020 (when the matter was raised with me for information by the Chief Minister, as he thought it right to disclose this to me as we considered matters related to the RGP and CoP).

I want to be clear, therefore, that my lack of confidence in the CoP's probity and integrity, and my conviction that the rule of law is compromised by the fact that I have lost confidence in him, therefore clearly arose well before I was aware of that criminal investigation. It is incorrect and untrue for anyone to suggest otherwise.

For Mr Gomez to therefore suggest, through conjecture and assumption, that the incident at sea and the HMIC Report were "fig leaves for the real reason Mr McGrail is being pressured to retire" (para 39) is an outrageous accusation which I bitterly resent and strongly object to. It is clearly not borne out by the facts and chronology as expressed above. In addition, for Mr Gomez to suggest that I had been aware of the incident at sea and the HMIC Report "for months" (para 34) is a wholly inaccurate statement which may mislead the GPA.

As a final point on this issue, I would also like to reiterate that these two incidents occurred on the back of a growing unease that I had been feeling over the months, in particular with the numerous allegations of bullying and mismanagement that I had picked up on. I have also been gravely concerned by the potential for corruption identified in the HMIC Report which has, tellingly, remained unaddressed by the CoP, despite his lawyer's response casting aspersions and allegations of corruption against others.

The CoP is the person who is ultimately responsible and accountable for all the actions and behaviour of the RGP, including those stated above.

2. The contents and allegations made in the Letter.

The second issue I must address is the tone and content of the Letter. I must place on record that the allegations made in the Letter that I am (or may be) interfering with the independence of the GPA, that I am (or may be) compromising the rule of law in Gibraltar and participating in a plot to discredit the CoP or influence the ongoing criminal investigation are entirely untrue and nothing short of a most scurrilous attack on my integrity. I find such allegations to be malicious and entirely misplaced. I strenuously refute them and hold each one up as a further demonstration of good reason for my lack of confidence in the CoP and my concerns about his probity and integrity.

To conclude, I communicate to you as Governor that, for all the above stated reasons, the content, tone and style of the Letter have done nothing but cement my lack of confidence in the CoP and my concerns about the integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar in addition to the matters I have already communicated to you as Governor.

Yours sincerely

Your Excellency

Re: Complaints made by you and the Chief Minister against the Commissioner of Police

I refer to the complaints made verbally to me as Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority on 18th May 2020 by you and the Chief Minister against the Commissioner of Police.

The Authority commenced a process under section 34 of the Police Act in accordance with a decision taken at a meeting of the Authority held on 21st May 2020. The decision was taken by five members of the Authority personally present at the meeting and four others by telephone after the meeting. The only member who did not participate was you, who as Governor, was one of the complainants. Pursuant to this decision on 22nd May, 2020 I, on behalf of the Authority, invited the Commissioner to retire. I did this at a meeting with him held on 22nd May, 2020 at the Commissioner's office followed up by two letters to him that same day. In my second letter I stated the grounds advanced to me by you and the Chief Minister for your respective loss of confidence in him. I also invited him to make representations which we would consider before taking a final decision.

On 29th May 2020 Charles Gomez & Company wrote to the Authority attacking the process on the grounds of fundamental unfairness, abuse of process and procedural flaws. Bias was not expressly alleged but it was impliedly so given that the Authority was accused of effectively doing what the you and the Chief Minister wanted and reaching a decision without considering representations by the Commissioner.

We have taken independent legal advice and have been advised that the process which we have adopted under section 34 of the Police Act is fundamentally flawed and should be withdrawn. However, we are also advised that the complaints by you and the Chief Minister remain live and have to be determined. We have also been advised that the Authority, as presently constituted, is vulnerable to challenge on the grounds of bias. The Authority considers that as presently constituted it is unable to process the complaints without being vulnerable to legal challenge and is not therefore prepared to do so.

Yours faithfully

Dear Joey,

Re: Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company, on behalf of the Commissioner of Police to the Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority ("the Letter').

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the Letter. Your having done so serves two purposes. Firstly, it fairly provides me with an opportunity to respond to the very serious and vile allegations made against me by the Commissioner of Police ("COP"). Secondly, it gives the Authority the opportunity to have whatever regard it considers appropriate to my response when it makes its further decisions (if any) in relation to its invitation to the COP to retire.

Let me say at the very outset that serious as they are, the COP's allegations against me are completely untrue. Like any other person who values the rule of law (of which the independence of operational policing is a key element), I would be the first to admire the courage of a COP who fearlessly makes a stand in defence of the independence of policing and its freedom from political interference. It would be a relief to know that our police force was under such leadership.

However, this does not provide the COP with licence to elevate the product of his apparently fertile imagination, and the consequent speculative inferences which it leads him to make, to the status of fact, as he does. Still less does it entitle the COP to make (on the basis of such speculation as to the motives of each of them), the very grave allegations that he makes against all of His Excellency the Governor, the Chief Minister, the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions. It seems to me that such allegations could only properly be made and justified if supported by credible evidence. They are not, as they cannot be because they are untrue. For that reason, they are a fanciful nonsense which self evidently serves to vividly illustrate why the COP is undeserving of my confidence.

I wish to make clear that I stand by and ratify everything that I have previously said to you about my loss of confidence in the COP, and the reasons for it. To those reasons I would now add the extraordinary nature and content of the Letter, on the basis of which my loss of confidence in the COP is further increased and cemented. Furthermore, it is not immediately clear to me how the COP can preside over the efficiency and effectiveness of the RGP in the light of the obvious breakdown of his relationship with each of the Governor, the Government (myself and all other members of my Cabinet), the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions that necessarily results from the contents of the Letter.

You will have seen in this regard the letter dated 3 June 2020 addressed to you by His Excellency the Governor which His Excellency has shared with me. Of further significance arising from this letter is the entirely unjustified and reckless nature of the allegation against the Governor, who was not at the material time even aware of the criminal investigation interference which is alleged to justify the COP's allegations against him. Yet, such is the nature of the Letter. I made His Excellency aware of that investigation at the same time as I referred the matter to you. I did so in a spirit of complete transparency.

I am, of course, not accountable to the Authority for my conduct as Chief Minister. Nevertheless, from a position of institutional respect for the GPA as the statutory body responsible for ensuring the independence of policing in Gibraltar, your role in respect of section 34 of the Police Act, and indeed deference to its members, I set out below my response to the COP's allegations in so far as they concern me.

The allegations levelled against me by the COP could not be more serious in nature. He accuses me of corruptly (see para 16- 22) interfering with the conduct by the RGP of a criminal investigation, in an unprecedented "abuse of power", motivated by a wish to retaliate against him (see paras 23 and 24) and a "personal connection with the outcome of the investigation" (para 38). He further accuses me of lying to the Authority about the "real reasons" for "pressuring" the COP to retire which he describes as a "a pretence" (para 48), "a pretext" (para 66) and "fig leaves" for the real reason which he declares to be a desire on my part to impede the COP's proper and reasonable handling of a live criminal investigation (para 39) and, which latter (asserted by him) reason is (as candidly stated by Mr Gomez at para 33) "the real and central reason for the request". In other words, I stand accused by the COP of all of outright dishonesty, wholly improper (indeed potentially unlawful) interference with the RGP and corruption.

Not content to level these grave allegations against me without a shred of evidence to support them, the COP has the temerity to declare that it is unnecessary for him "merely to rely on any inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point" because (according to the COP) during your meeting on 22 May you confirmed to him that I had told you that his handling of "the criminal investigation" was "spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had lost confidence in Mr McGrail." This is relied on as some sort of "smoking gun" that puts his grave accusations beyond doubt or somehow justify his making them (para 40).

In the context of all the above, that he also accuses me of undermining the rule of law, that my conduct is 'an affront to the rule of law' and of seeking to "direct you" in your decisions (second para on page 2), serious as they are in themselves, pale into relative insignificance.

The COP's allegations are entirely untrue, and the manner in which he describes such interaction as there has been between us is so distorted as to be obvious that it would mislead the Authority.

Let me be absolutely clear, I have at no time or in any manner sought to interfere with the RGP's conduct of the criminal investigation in question in any manner of for any purpose, including (but not limited to) my alleged "personal connection with the outcome of the investigation". That personal connection is, presumably, the fact that Mr James Levy QC, whose conduct is apparently under investigation, is the senior partner of Hassans, a law firm of which I am also a partner although presently on a sabbatical.

At no time have I sought to intervene in or interfere to prevent Mr Levy being investigated or to prevent a search warrant being obtained and executed against him at the offices of Hassans, facts which I first learned about as they were already happening, that is, as the search warrant was being enforced at the offices of Hassans and at Mr Levy's home. This can be best illustrated by reference to the fact that at 12:25 pm on the 12th May 2020 I received a "Whats App" from the COP in which he said to me "CM- before you hear it from anyone else I want to inform you that detectives are executing a search warrant at Hassan for (JL) in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez".

I responded at 12.34 in the following terms:
"Ian, Thank you for the courtesy of this information. I think that is a bad decision. A search should only have been sought if you believed that the person in question was not going to cooperate and will try to destroy evidence. If, as you say, you are hoping for cooperation, especially in a case involving a senior Silk and head of Gibraltar's largest legal firm, you should, in my view, first have sought to contact that person and obtain cooperation. Given my close personal relationship with JL, I won't comment further."

The COP replied at 12:35 as follows: "Noted CM".

I repeated that view to the COP during a meeting at my office in No 6 later on the same on day, coinciding with his presence in No 6 in connection with a Covid planning meeting in the basement of No 6. I also made it abundantly clear to him that my reaction would have been identical had he taken the same action against any other senior member of the Gibraltar Bar, all of whom, like him, are officers of the court with the legal and ethical obligations consequent to that status. These are the messages and the meeting to which the COP refers, in terms that I do not recognise, in paragraph 36 of the Letter.

The above is the full extent of my communications with the COP or the RGP in relation to the "criminal investigation" since then.

In so far as concerned my alleged motives for doing so, i.e. my personal connection with the outcome of the investigation, the accusation made against me is not sustainable even on the COP's case. In his Whats App at 12:25 (as the events were occurring) he told me that the warrant obtained and executed against Mr Levy was "in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez". So, when I expressed the view that I did 9 minutes later at 12:34, I had no reason to believe that the investigation was of Mr Levy.

In fact, I am clearly entitled to express the views that I did in the above manner. That does not constitute interfering with the investigation in the grave manner of the allegations made, or at all. I am entitled to express my views to the COP on matters of policing policy in Gibraltar. I did not prevent the obtaining or the execution of the search warrant, both of which had already occurred. I have made no attempt to secure an end to those investigations, against Mr Levy or anyone else. Indeed, when I discovered that one of the persons under investigation was a civil servant, I directed the Chief Secretary that HMGOG should be a complainant to the police in the investigation, which duly occurred. Therefore, the notion that I was motivated by concern for the outcome of the investigation in so far as concerned my alleged personal connection with it is therefore simply unsustainable, as the COP well knows. This was an investigation in which I had insisted my Government should be a complainant (ie the entity whose interests may have been criminally damaged) and in respect of a National Security facility which I had been instrumental in creating in the public interest of Gibraltar. It is remarkable that the COP could even believe, less still suggest to others, that I might want to interfere with such an investigation.

In my opinion, the obtaining and execution of a search warrant which the COP referred me to in his Whats App in such circumstances (such as I described in my own Whats App response to the COP) is of dubious legality, abusive, unprecedented in policing in Gibraltar, incompatible with public confidence in policing and the good name and reputation of Gibraltar as a business and finance centre. It is noteworthy in this regard that these are policy matters in which, as Chief Minister, I have a legitimate interest, and that in the event of the RGP being sued for the unlawful obtaining and execution of a search warrant, it is HMGOG that has to bear the financial consequences.

Be all the above as it may, serious as they are, and as the COP also well knows, those are not the reasons why I have further lost confidence in him by virtue of this criminal investigation. I have not lost confidence in him because he obtained and executed a search warrant in circumstances in which I believe it was inappropriate to do so. Nor is the reason "how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled" (para 35, and elsewhere in the Letter). The primary reason is that the COP has clearly lied to me.

During the meeting to which I refer above, the COP stated to me in explicit terms, in response to my concerns about the propriety of the warrant, that he had obtained and executed the search warrant against Mr Levy in reliance on legal advice from the Director of Public Prosecutions who had confirmed that it was appropriate to seek such a warrant and proceed in that way. I have since determined that this categorical statement from the COP, clearly designed to suggest to me that my views as to the law were wrong and he / his officers had acted properly (and not compromised the investigation or exposed HMGOG to potential claims for civil damages) was wholly untrue. In fact, it is now clearly established that at no time did the COP or the RGP obtain legal advice from the DPP to that effect, a fact which the COP has now acknowledged in writing to Hassans (and has been separately confirmed to me by the DPP). This is unacceptable to me and goes to the COP's probity and integrity in his dealings with me, and to my ability to have confidence in him. This is unrelated to the nature, direction or conclusion which the investigation might take or reach (which I have been supportive of from the beginning, continue to be and have caused my Government to be a complainant for), as that continues to take its course. The COP has understood that, as evident from the fact that the investigation in question has not been affected in any way and has, rightly, continued unabated.

Additionally, I cannot accept the COP's statements in relation to his briefings to me about the "incident at sea". This was an incident with extremely serious external political consequences and very material potential financial consequences to the Government. I have, since our original discussion, already had to answer questions in the Parliament on this matter and there has been additional media reporting related to it both before and arising from my answer (including on the Spanish national broadcaster, RTVE). It has been the established practice for at least 50 years that Commissioners of Police keep the Chief Minister of the day fully, timeously and spontaneously informed, in detail about incidents of that kind. Had COP properly done so in this case it would not have been necessary for me to exercise the Chief Minister's powers under section 15 of the Police Act for the first ever time, as I confirmed to the Parliament. His Excellency the Governor has complained of the very same thing.

I have already taken you through my deep concerns in relation to the report from HM Inspectorate of Constabulary, which are also deeply concerning to me and relate to the efficacy and effectiveness of the RGP, both of which are the direct, legal responsibility of the COP under the Police Act.

Nothing in the Letter from the COP raises any real issue of interference with the independence of policing in Gibraltar, and the COP cannot raise imaginary

allegations to escape the fact that he has lost the confidence of every relevant authority in Gibraltar, and the proper consequences thereof. His allegations are untrue and are based entirely on speculation on his part as to everyone's motives for forming the views of him that they have. It is in itself wholly improper that he should make such spurious and damaging allegations without evidence commensurate with their gravity (or indeed any evidence). This now also goes to my further lack of confidence in the COP.

Please do not hesitate to ask me to clarify any matter that it would be of assistance to the Authority that I explain further.

With very best wishes,

Dear Joey,

Re: Commissioner of Police - Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29th May 2020 that you have received from Charles Gomez and Co representing the Commissioner of Police ("COP"), Ian McGrail ("the letter").

I have no formal role under the Police Act in relation to the matters currently before the Authority for consideration. Therefore, whilst my views about the COP are relevant only in so far as the Authority wishes to have regard to them, I cannot allow the Authority's record to stand unrebutted on the basis of the untrue and scurrilous allegations made by the COP. Thank for giving me the opportunity to do so.

The letter makes important and very serious allegations against me, namely, that I have improperly, corruptly and in abuse of my powers "interfered" with an ongoing criminal investigation by:

(i) privately subjecting the COP to "significant and at times intemperate private criticism" about how the criminal investigation has been handled; and

(ii) trying "for many months" to persuade COP to "change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted".

In support of those statements it is said that I have feigned loss of confidence in the COP as a means of disguising my alleged real objective which is said to be, effectively, to "nobble" the investigation and prosecution to which the investigation relates, and that in some way, this should be deduced from

t +350 20051731 e michael.llamas_QC@gibraltar.gov.gi w gibraltar.gov.gi

issues relating to "timing" of actions by others and the allegation (also denied by me) that I have reacted with "startling" emotion and consequential insinuation that this is apt to sustain the fantastic allegations made against me by the COP. I hasten to say that each of them is untrue and without merit or justification.

Part of the narrative of the COP's allegations against me is that I apparently gave him "the strong impression that I was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and 'Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words)". I am not aware that the Chief Minister is a person in need of protection in the context of the criminal investigation in question. In so far as concerns the fact that I was primarily concerned with protecting "Gibraltar PLC' (which is vernacular for the public interest of Gibraltar) that is absolutely correct. That is my constitutional role and my job (a fact that the COP, and those advising him appear to overlook).

At a personal level, I deeply regret (because I have always enjoyed excellent working and personal relations with him) to have to say that I cannot recognise the truth in the statements and allegations that COP now makes in the letter. They are untrue.

I have a constitutional role both in relation to prosecutions (I have ultimate responsibility and control over them) and for the rule of law (I am the guardian of the laws of Gibraltar and compliance with them). This is important because it renders proper interventions by me which may not be proper if engaged in by others. What the COP is effectively doing, on the basis of pure speculation and assumption on his part, is to cast the gravest aspersions on my motives for my statements, views and actions.

I should comment also that, in any event, the COP is not (as he appears to believe) immune to having his actions "strongly disapproved of" or being "severely criticised for them". Yet he equates both to the improper interference with the conduct of a criminal investigation and a violation of police independence. This, worryingly, shows lack of understanding and judgment by the COP.

Because of my roles described above, and also the fact that I am the Crown's (in all its facets, including the RGP) principal legal adviser in Gibraltar, it has always been customary for the COP and the RGP to seek the Attorney General's advice and to discuss ongoing investigations with him, whenever that is required. Mr McGrail has done so, both before and after becoming COP.

Contrary to what the letter says, I have never said that the COP lied to me. What I have told him is that he has incurred in a serious breach of my trust (which I explain below) as a result of which I have lost confidence in him.

I turn now to what has actually occurred. I first became aware of this criminal investigation on the 11 May 2019, when I received an email from the COP (sent also to the Chief Minister, Minister of Justice, the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the DPP) asking to meet with us urgently to brief us in relation to certain information that they had obtained in that criminal investigation. That meeting took place on Monday 13 May 2019. At that meeting, or shortly thereafter, I became aware that James Levy QC had shares in one of the companies involved in that dispute and that he was mentioned in communications with the three suspects and was potentially a person of interest to the investigation.

Far from seeking to intervene or interfere for that reason, I had no further involvement with the criminal investigation until over 11 months later when, in early-April 2020, the DPP called me to discuss the Government's position in relation to the ongoing issues about the ownership of a computer platform and its software that HMGOG uses, to which the criminal investigation related.

During that discussion the DPP explained to me that the RGP had drawn up a list of 76 charges (some of which could be impacted by the question of ownership of the platform) and that the RGP were thinking of issuing search warrants against Mr James Levy QC. I was alarmed, both by the number of charges (which would be quite inappropriate in any prosecution) and also by the proposal to obtain and issue a search warrant against a senior lawyer without first seeking voluntary co-operation or voluntary production of evidence. My concern was not because of any sense that lawyers should be exempt from this mechanism, rather it was (as would be the case of any person) that such warrants should reflect the reality of the risk of destruction of evidence unless the person is taken by surprise, or the refusal of the person to provide the evidence voluntarily. Not only can that not be assumed against any person, still less a practising lawyer, but Mr Levy had been aware of the RGP's interest in him for many months, and had had plenty of opportunity to destroy evidence if he were minded or inclined to do so. I have a legitimate public interest role and function (indeed, a responsibility) in respect of both these matters.

I asked to meet with the COP in relation to these two matters, and we did so on 7th April 2019. In that meeting I advised him of my concern about the need to obtain clarity on the issue of ownership of the computer platform since it was clear that that issue would likely have an impact on at least some of the proposed charges, and I also told him that I was worried about the overall number (76) charges, which seemed wholly excessive, not to say absurd. I reminded him of the general wisdom of focusing the

The outcome of that discussion was that we reached a clear understanding that the the RGP would not take any further action until they had considered my advice about the rationalisation of the charges, and then the COP would come back to see me again. It was clear beyond peradventure that nothing would happen until we met again. The next I hear (from COP himself, as it was happening) was that RGP officers were in the process of executing search warrants against Mr Levy at the offices of Hassans and at his home.

I have never said anything to the COP which can be interpreted as anything other than advice and assistance, as has always been the practice. The COP is of course free to take whatever action he considers lawful and appropriate regardless of any advice that I may give him on the matter, and he did so. He unquestionably has that right. What the COP cannot do, and also expect to retain my personal confidence, is to act contrary to an understanding reached between us, as he has done. This, and not my disapproval of his actions (even though I think that they were ill advised), is the reason for my loss of confidence in him.

I have made it explicitly clear to the COP throughout that the conduct of the investigation (including the seeking and execution of search warrants) are, whatever I may advise him, operational matters entirely for him. Nothing that I have ever said to the COP or any other member of the RGP has been even remotely open to the possible (mis)interpretation that I have advised or encouraged, still less that I have interfered to bring about or try to bring about, the curtailment of the investigation, how it is carried out by the RGP or to prevent any person from being charged. It is outrageously wrong and unfair for the COP to allege that I have (let alone that I have done so repeatedly over an extended period of time) and I am shocked and deeply resent that he has done so. This necessarily deepens my loss of confidence in him going forward.

I remain at the Authority's disposal for anything with which I may be able to assist it further by way of clarification or further explanation.

Yours Sincerely,

Michael Llamas QC
Attorney General

Subject: RE: Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act

Importance: High

Dear Sir,

We refer to your letter of today's date received after close of business at 16:26. This brief response has been prepared at speed given the timing of receipt of your letter.

We note the withdrawal of the flawed Section 34 process, and the recognition that there have been procedural flaws in the process.

Our client denies "lying" to the Chief Minister or the Attorney General in relation to the "on-going police investigation", or over any other matter.

Your clients are well aware that no particulars have been given to our client of any alleged lies. Our client has therefore had no opportunity to address the allegations which at the moment can only be classified as vague slurs.

An accusation of lying against the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar is a matter of the highest gravity. Mr. McGrail's service has been recognised by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II herself.

We note that your client's Chair now admits to having been informed by the Chief Minister and Attorney General that Mr. McGrail "lied" to them about a police investigation. We also note that your client (we assume deliberately) omitted this allegation, which was plainly central to the Chief Minister's decision-making, from the second letter of 12 May purportedly setting out the detail of the complaint against him. We suggest that the strong inference is that your client knew the matter was constitutionally improper and for that reason left it out.

An allegation of lying in any circumstances is one of the utmost gravity yet our client has no understanding of the specifics of the allegation and has not had the chance to address it. We remain entirely unclear what your clients, the Authority, propose to now do.

Our client is gravely concerned by how he has been treated during this process, and I welcome your frank acknowledgment that there have been procedural flaws. He is an officer of the highest standing, with an impeccable record over the past 36 years. In these circumstances, given how unfairly he has been treated and the improper pressure put upon him to alter the course of a live criminal investigation, our client feels he must apply for early retirement from the Royal Gibraltar Police.

All of Mr. McGrail's rights are reserved.

Yours faithfully,

Charles Gomez.

Dear Commissioner

Thank you for coming to see me yesterday.

During our discussion you handed to me a copy of an email dated 5 June from Charles Gomez to James Neish under the subject "Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act." I have now read that email and note the final 14 words which state "our client feels he must apply for early retirement from the Royal Gibraltar Police."

This matter is of course directly relevant to me as it is the Governor who, under S 32.(1) of the Police Act 2006 and acting on the advice of the Authority, appoints the Commissioner.

Before I review all the papers I have on this matter in advance of our meeting on Monday, can you please confirm to me, by no later than midday tomorrow, whether that is indeed your decision, and, if so, whether you will be tendering your letter of resignation on Monday with immediate effect.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely

Dear Commissioner

Thank you for coming to see me today.

We discussed your intention to retire and I agreed that this was the best course of action, adding that I would need a letter to that effect. I asked that your retirement be with effect from 18.00 on the 9th of June, and suggested that you may wish to make an announcement accordingly. Please do let me know if you intend to do so and perhaps we can discuss timing. I will then follow up with the following press release:

"His Excellency the Governor, Nick Pyle OBE, has accepted a request from the Commissioner of Police to retire with effect from 18.00 hrs on Tuesday 09 June.
Recognising the Commissioner's 36 years of service to the Royal Gibraltar Police, and cognisant of him being awarded the Overseas Territories Police Medal for meritous service in 2015, the Governor wishes the Commissioner all the very best for his retirement.
The Assistant Commissioner will perform the duties of the Commissioner until further notice, as set out in the Police Act 2006."

You agreed to retire as set out above subject to financial terms being agreed which I believe you have done so with the Chief Secretary. I therefore look forward to receiving your letter.

I would like to reaffirm my commitment, notwithstanding the above, to ensure you are treated fairly and with respect at all times.

Yours sincerely

Subject: COMMAND GPF RELATIONSHIP

Dear Joey,

I trust that you are well.

I thought I should give you an update as to the present relationship between the interim Commissioner and the Gibraltar Police Federation.

Last week after the resignation of Mr McGrail, Federation convenors have met up on two occasions with Mr Ullger. One was a meeting we had scheduled with him and the second was a meeting we had scheduled with the Commissioner with regards to some pending issues, which Mr Ullger sat in as interim Commissioner.

In those meetings, it was mooted that there was a possibility of a Commissioner from the UK to take over for a short period of time.

It is no secret that we have had numerous issues with Mr McGrail due to his management style and the lack of respect which he demonstrated towards the Gibraltar Police Federation, and especially towards the Secretary, Leif Simpson and myself as Chairman. As a result, the relationship between Command and the Federation was strained at best, over these last two years.

Everything we proposed in the last year was thrown back at us with little or no consideration, so we had to revert to legal advice on several issues we were requesting to be looked into by Command.

I have known Mr Ullger for a very long time, and have worked under him on Shift and in Special Branch. Having worked with Mr Ullger for over 20 years I can assure you that his management style is completely different to that of Mr McGrail.

He is always fair, and more assertive when this is required, but he always treats people with the utmost respect.

And this is exactly what the officers are calling out for. They want to be treated with respect as individuals, not treated as numbers, and for their work to go recognised.

We have achieved more in two meetings with Mr Ullger in a week than we did in a whole year with Mr McGrail. This is not about management giving in to Federation demands, or requests, but a real willingness to work alongside the Federation for the benefit of the officers. There will be occasions where Federation requests will not be taken on board, but I can accept this, when a reasonable explanation is given.

During April and May this year, we have worked tirelessly together on the revamped Grievance Policy and Procedures and the Bullying at Work Policy, where we went through both policies line by line. Mr Ullger agreed to numerous suggestions the Federation had in respect of both policies, and these were included, some of which are still on the draft version of HMGoG's revised Bullying at Work Policy, and still not approved.

I do not believe that bringing over a Commissioner from the UK for a short period of time is the answer. He may bring some fresh ideas, but policing in Gibraltar is not the same as in the UK. Federation reps carry out their training at Leatherhead in the UK and I can assure you that we do not want to operate like a UK force. What may work in the UK may not necessarily work in Gibraltar. Any good policies and procedures they may have could be implemented but always tweaking this to suit our policing.

It would also be difficult for someone coming over from the UK to understand the people, the culture and the way we operate in a short period of time. The organisation requires an understanding, empathetic Commissioner at the helm, with local knowledge and understanding. I believe we have the right officer for this role in our ranks.

Happy to discuss this further.

Kind Regards

Subject: HMIC 2019 REPORT ON THE RGP

Dear CM

As you may know, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, Fire and Rescue Services, inspected the RGP in October 2019. This was at the request of the Gibraltar Police Authority which asked HMIC to assess progress the RGP had made in implementing the recommendations of their 2016 report.

Having studied the report, I find it to be quite damning and it will need careful handling. In essence, HMIC found the RGP to have only met two out of the eight areas for improvement identified in 2016. My own sense is that HMIC were very disappointed indeed to find so little progress had been made since their last inspection. This is a shame and their willingness to help the RGP in the future may have diminished as a result. This is something we must help correct.

But I don't think the issue is as bad as the headline suggests and believe it is an issue of culture and leadership more than anything else. Most of the issues should be relatively easy to fix though it will take a collective effort, driven bottom up from within the RGP as much as from its leadership which needs to be both more strategic and directive. Quite simply, as I see it, the RGP needs to "modernise" in all senses of the word.

But the inspection report will undoubtedly become public at some stage. It is important therefore that we (Commissioner, GPA, CM, Governor) are all ready to respond collectively and as one when it does. This means being upfront and honest about the issues and challenges as well as displaying a commitment to put things right. If we do not, I think the credibility of the RGP is at risk.

Given your pre-occupations, I'm happy to discuss how best to take this forward with the Chair of the GPA and perhaps the Chief Secretary, in the first instance. My initial thought is to suggest the Commissioner makes the report public at the same time he publishes his roadmap on the way forward. So being proactive rather than reactive.

Happy to discuss when we next catch up on Business as Usual issues.

Annex A – an assessment of demand (12 month period – 2014/15) 31

1. Introduction

Our commission

1.1. HMIC independently assesses police forces in the public interest and examines policing activity from neighbourhood teams to serious crime and the fight against terrorism.

1.2. In preparing our reports, we ask the questions which citizens would ask, and publish the answers in accessible form, using our expertise to interpret the evidence.

1.3. HMIC is independent of government and the police. HM Inspectors of Constabulary are appointed by the Crown; they are not employees of the police service or government.

Background

1.4. Gibraltar is a British Overseas Territory on the southern end of the Iberian Peninsula. It is home to over 30,000 people. Thousands more commute daily across the land border with Spain.

1.5. Gibraltar has one of the fastest growing economies in the world. Gibraltar's gross domestic product increased by 12.3 percent in 2014 and 10.3 percent in 2015. This growth has been driven by expansion of the online gaming and financial services industries as well as by significant investment in construction of new buildings.

1.6. Located at the entrance to the Mediterranean Sea, Gibraltar is a major tourism and leisure destination, which receives approximately 10.5 million visitors a year, many of whom arrive on cruise ships.

1.7. These factors create a unique policing challenge for the Royal Gibraltar Police (also referred to in this report as 'the force'), which is responsible for:

(a) the preservation of the peace;

(b) the maintenance of law and order;

(c) the prevention and detection of crime;

(d) the apprehension and guarding of offenders; and

(e) the protection of property.[1]

[1] Section 29, Police Act 2006.

1.8. In order to enable the Royal Gibraltar Police to assemble the resources needed to discharge these responsibilities, the force has a budget of £15.127m (in 2015/16). This provides for 238 officers and 36 members of support staff.

1.9. The Royal Gibraltar Police is led by a commissioner of police and is overseen by the Gibraltar Police Authority (also referred to in this report as 'the Authority'). The Gibraltar Police Authority is an independent body that is responsible for ensuring that the force operates as efficiently and effectively as possible.[2]

1.10. The Police Act 2006 requires that the priorities for the force concerning crime prevention and investigation are contained in a policing plan published by the Authority.

1.11. The priorities in the policing plan for 2015/16 include:

- "security throughout Gibraltar;
- tackling crime;
- community at the centre of policing;
- roads policing;
- professional service delivery;
- public protection; and
- communication".[3]

1.12. Each of these priorities has a separate plan which describes the actions the police need to take to meet the priorities.

Our terms of reference

1.13. HMIC was invited by the Gibraltar Police Authority to inspect the Royal Gibraltar Police. Our terms of reference were to conduct:

(a) a review of leadership and associated human resources working practices including the complaints procedure, provision for the wellbeing of staff and an ethical culture;

[3] Gibraltar Policing Plan 2015.

(b) a review of crime prevention and investigation performance, an audit of crime recording, and an assessment of victim care and support; and

(c) an assessment of demand, of resource capacity and capability, and how resource is matched to meet demand.

1.14. This inspection supports the policy of HM Government to assist the development of policing in British Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies.[4]

Methodology

1.15. We visited Gibraltar in June 2015 to familiarise the inspection team with the environment and receive a briefing on the structure and role of the force.

1.16. Following this we examined a series of documents supplied to us by the force and we reviewed information we found on the internet concerning Gibraltar and the force. This aspect of our inspection included a review of the results of a recent staff survey.

1.17. We returned to Gibraltar in October 2015, when we conducted interviews with various senior leaders and focus groups with junior personnel.

1.18. We examined the content of various case files, conducted an audit of crime reports and undertook other checks on the information provided to us such as attending meetings and engaging with police officers and members of public.

1.19. Because of the unique policing challenge faced by the Royal Gibraltar Police, a direct comparison with police forces in England and Wales is not appropriate. However, that is not to say that lessons cannot be learned from elsewhere. Consequently, at the various stages in this inspection where it was relevant and appropriate to do so, we evaluated the work of the Royal Gibraltar Police against the standards that are commonly applied to policing in England and Wales. We did so using the Home Office's 'crime counting rules' and 'authorised professional practice', which are provided by the College of Policing.[5]

2. Leadership, vision, values and culture

Introduction

2.1. We examined the quality of the Royal Gibraltar Police leadership and looked for a clear vision that was well understood and shared by the workforce. We examined the extent to which the conduct of personnel reflected the standards and values that leaders sought to imbue in them and that the public would expect. We also assessed how well the force promoted an ethical culture in how it treats its staff.

2.2. In order to help us form a view on these matters, we looked closely at: how senior officers led the organisation; how they communicated their expectations; how they cared for personnel; how they dealt with officers and staff whose conduct fell short of expectations; and how they ensured that working practices and procedures were fair.

Findings

2.3. We found that the Royal Gibraltar Police was generally well led. Senior officers were visible and had good oversight of policing activity. There was a committed workforce, actively engaged with the public, with a strong sense of pride, a clear direction and, as it was described to us, a 'one team' culture.

Leadership

2.4. Through our observations and interviews, it quickly became clear to us that the commissioner adopted an open, transparent and constructive approach, and that he actively promoted such an approach by other leaders.

2.5. We found that senior officers were readily available to the workforce. They were visible in police buildings and mingled with personnel in communal areas such as canteens.

2.6. Senior officers demonstrated good levels of staff engagement across all levels of the force. Documents we read showed that they used events such as regular meetings, the staff survey, surgeries and workshops to involve as many of the workforce as possible in discussions concerning issues of significance, such as changes to the response team shift system (discussed at paragraph 4.23).

2.7. A benefit of their approach was that senior officers had good oversight of policing activity, ensuring that resources were aligned to tackling the policing plan priorities. Furthermore, our interviews and observations revealed that these priorities were strongly supported; officers we spoke with knew the priorities as well as the locations where incidents of crime and anti-social behaviour were occurring regularly and the areas in which they were expected to patrol. We also found evidence of good efforts to trace and arrest people wanted for criminal offences.

2.8. Senior officers also promoted an 'open door' policy. We saw professional and formal, yet supportive and open, engagement between senior officers and other staff which confirmed that this was a reality, rather than a mere aspiration. This was further evidenced in the staff survey, where the majority of respondents felt confident that their ideas and suggestions would be listened to.

2.9. Staff we spoke with expressed the view that, when mistakes were made, the emphasis was on putting the matter right and learning from the experience rather than finding blame. We saw evidence of this in an incident report where initial enquiries had been insufficient. The officer was appropriately guided and the enquiries were properly completed. This approach enables supervisors to make decisions in appropriate circumstances without the fear of unwarranted criticism. We saw the results of this in many enthusiastic staff who felt trusted and empowered. This is evidence of an ethical culture within the force.

2.10. The force has invested in a leadership training programme for all ranks. Such a scheme is to be welcomed, particularly because, at the time of our inspection, there was a significant number of new officers and staff. This included new supervisors, who were generally inexperienced and needed to be trained.

Vision

2.11. The commissioner's vision is to prevent crime and divert potential offenders in the longer term by educating and influencing young people through early intervention. When we spoke with officers and support staff we found that they had a clear sense of the future direction of the force. This was supported by the findings of the 2015 staff survey, where the majority of respondents were aware of the commissioner's vision, and by the documents we saw which had been circulated to staff. These described the role of the force and reinforced the vision of the commissioner. (The policing activity to achieve the vision is discussed at paragraph 3.4)

2.12. We found, through observation and reading documents, that as part of the vision, the force tended to operate as one team. Officers assisted each other when called upon, and were ready to undertake different roles when this was necessary; for example, in addition to their main role, some officers were trained to deal with firearms, public disorder, specialist search or forensic examination. Such an approach is necessary in Gibraltar. This is because the Royal Gibraltar Police is a small force that, unlike most police forces in the United Kingdom, cannot rely on police forces in neighbouring areas for assistance.

Code of professional standards and values

2.13. The commissioner has defined a code of professional standards for officers. These are laid out in a policy document, a summary of which was on posters we saw displayed prominently in offices.

2.14. The code of professional standards includes expectations of behaviour concerning:

- responsibility and accountability;
- honesty and integrity;
- lawful orders;
- use of force;
- authority, respect and courtesy;
- equality;
- confidentiality;
- fitness for duty;
- general conduct; and
- challenging and reporting improper conduct.

2.15. This code is based, in part, on standards for forces in England and Wales. We found that officers knew and understood these standards and, by observation, that senior officers reinforced these standards in their own conduct.

2.16. We also saw posters and documents describing the values that the commissioner of police promotes. These are intended to underpin the code of professional standards and further highlight to officers how they should behave. These values were being introduced gradually in order to prompt awareness and debate among the workforce.

2.17. We found strong evidence that senior officers were committed to improving how the force operates concerning values and standards. The force was awarded an Investors in People bronze award in 2012 and senior officers were, at the time of our inspection, seeking the gold award (an application for which was to be submitted before the end of 2015). We examined documents to support this application and it included evidence of policies and procedures that ensured the fairness of systems and the way that staff are treated, such as selection for posts and promotion.

2.18. As a consequence of the focus on values and standards, we found that personnel were treated fairly and equitably in terms of the skills development and career opportunities made available to them. In particular, female staff we interviewed and spoke with all considered this was the case and they saw the force to be a place to work where their skills and abilities were acknowledged and valued. This is further evidence of an ethical culture within the force.

2.19. The commissioner had, prior to our inspection, publically announced his ambition to appoint Gibraltar's first female police inspector before 2017.

2.20. We also found that diversity within the workforce had increased since our last inspection; the force has recruited a number of officers of Moroccan and UK descent.

2.21. While in Gibraltar we also sought the views of the public about the Royal Gibraltar Police. Those we spoke with reported a high level of confidence in the force in general. In particular, there was a high level of satisfaction in how the force interacts with the public.

2.22. Those we spoke with told us that the force is responsive to calls for assistance and regularly communicates with the public about crime and other problems. This appears to have generated a high degree of trust. It was clear to us that the public felt the force was committed to protecting and helping the community. (We explore the high public expectations of Royal Gibraltar Police, and the challenges this creates, in paragraph 4.12.)

Wellbeing of staff

2.23. We learned that senior officers had, through the staff survey, asked the workforce about issues of concern to them. This has provided the leadership team members with a good understanding of such issues and has enabled them to respond. In addition to the response team shift pattern discussed earlier, the poor fabric of police buildings and insufficient refresher courses for officer safety training were highlighted as issues of concern; personnel reported that these matters had a detrimental impact on their wellbeing. We found that plans were in place to build a new police headquarters and to provide additional training.

2.24. We found that, in an effort to improve engagement and wellbeing, senior officers had implemented two new policies: the welfare policy that defines the role of the welfare officer; and the rewards policy that defines how commendations and other awards can be made. These new policies were considered to be positive improvements by officers and staff.

2.25. In addition, we found that the welfare of personnel was clearly a priority for the commissioner; he was in personal contact with sick and injured colleagues on a regular basis. This was another aspect of his leadership that was recognised and welcomed by the workforce.

2.26. The welfare of personnel absent through illness, and especially those injured on duty, was a topic of discussion at daily management meetings. Finally, a dedicated welfare officer manages the needs of staff such as regular contact, access to occupational health support and advice concerning return to work.

Complaints, misconduct and unprofessional behaviour

2.27. We conducted a review of documents and found that complaints and other allegations were investigated appropriately and fairly. A Police Complaints Board (also referred to in this report as "the board") was established under the Gibraltar Police Authority in accordance with the provisions of the Police Act 2006. The procedures under which the board operates are set out in the Police Complaints Board Regulations 2008 (the Regulations). The board is independent of the force and oversees the investigation of complaints and allegations of misconduct against police officers. Under the board's supervision, complaints are investigated by the Royal Gibraltar Police professional standards department. It is our view that police officers are held to account in a proper manner.

2.28. We found that, during 2014, there were 28 recorded complaints which had been investigated formally, with a further two awaiting investigation once court cases had been heard. There were also four complaints of a minor nature. These were informally resolved at meetings held between the respective complainants, members of the board and representatives of the professional standards department. The number of complaints recorded compares favourably with police forces in England and Wales. During 2013/14 there was one complaint for every three officers in England and Wales but one for every seven officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police.[6]

2.29. Of the 28 recorded complaints, 15 were allegations of discreditable conduct, 10 were allegations of abuse of authority, and three were allegations of neglect of duty.

2.30. Of these 28 complaints, 20 had been found to have no substance. However, three complaints were substantiated and the officers concerned were disciplined. The remaining five complaints were (at the time of our inspection) still under investigation by the professional standards department.

[6] The Independent Police Complaints Commission Annual Report 2014 and The National Statistics Police Complaints Report 2014.

2.31. Officers we spoke with were clear about the professional standards expected of them and of the behaviour they expected of each other. This is evidenced in the relatively low number of complaints compared to police forces in England and Wales.

2.32. Finally, across all of our fieldwork we did not encounter any suggestion of bullying or harassment. Instead, there was a general view that the force had an ethical culture and was a good place to work. This positive view is supported by the evidence mentioned above.

3. Crime prevention, investigation and victim care

Introduction

3.1. For this aspect of our inspection, we examined how effectively the Royal Gibraltar Police managed crime.

3.2. The public expects the force to prevent crime and when it is not able to do so, to: record crimes accurately; investigate them diligently; bring offenders to justice; and, with other services and agencies, provide care for victims. Consequently we looked closely at the quality of the force's work in: crime prevention; crime recording; crime investigation; and victim care.

Findings

3.3. We found that, generally, the prevention and investigation of crime and care for victims was effective. However there were five areas where we found scope for the force to make improvements. These areas were the:

- auditing of crime records;
- recording practice for detected crime;
- supervision of investigations;
- identification of vulnerable and repeat victims; and
- extent of partnership working.

Crime prevention

3.4. The commissioner's vision is to prevent crime and divert potential offenders in the long term by educating and influencing young people through early intervention. We saw examples of regular police involvement with schools and youth clubs as well as the development of a 'Mini Olympiad', a sporting event for young people. These activities had the support of the members of public we spoke with, partly because they were seen to develop a respect for the rule of law among young people.

3.5. In addition, we found evidence that the force's priority of preventing crime was being carried out on the ground by officers. Activities such as 'Operation Gibwatch' have developed as a brand over time, which we saw in the media and displayed across Gibraltar. Examples we were shown included a programme of crime prevention projects in the summer and at Christmas. We also learned of a drugs awareness campaign, during which 200 community meetings took place in 2014.[7]

3.6. We also found that the force used a broad range of effective tactics to prevent crime; for example, 'hotspot' patrols at times of high risk to deter criminality and reassure the public took place 1465 times over the last 12 months.[8] In addition, organised crime was prevented through a number of high-profile patrol operations involving both police resources and those from other organisations, for example HM Customs Gibraltar.

3.7. Officers we spoke with working in neighbourhood policing were aware of crime activity within their areas such as drug dealing. They had good knowledge of relevant intelligence and were assigned tasks to disrupt the activities of groups and individuals. An example of the tasks was the targeted use of stop and search powers.

3.8. We found that the force also conducted assessments of risks to communities following serious incidents, and made use of resources to provide public reassurance and prevent further occurrences. An example was seen on national television where officers were given the task of reassuring the public following a multiple murder and associated suicide.

Crime recording

3.9. In 2014/15, there were 3,603 crimes recorded by Royal Gibraltar Police.[9]

3.10. Through our review of documents we found that the force sought to promote accurate and consistent crime recording and a victim-oriented approach.

3.11. Crime recording standards were defined in a crime counting rules policy document. This policy is based in part on standards for forces in England and Wales.

3.12. We also found that the counting rules policy was comprehensive and (at the time of our inspection) up-to-date. The policy linked its purpose with policing values. It was clear on the standards required for accuracy and timeliness of crime recording, and was detailed concerning disposals of crime and relevant links to annual crime statistics.

3.13. We conducted a crime audit that comprised an examination of a pre-determined number of crime reports chosen from a broad selection that we requested from the force.

[9] ibid

3.14. We found that there was a paper-based system in use, supported by a database which only suitably authorised officers in the records department can update with a result or outcome of an investigation.

3.15. We did not find any pressure on officers to under-record crime in order to show a reduction.

3.16. We also found that, prior to being filed as 'no crime'[10] (in circumstances where it was appropriate to do so), previously recorded crimes were scrutinised by the records department sergeant, who reviewed each one.

3.17. We saw records of an audit of crime reports that is held every few months by the records department sergeant. This audit was not specific, such as a review of high-risk crime types, but was a general overview of outstanding crimes compared to incidents logged.

3.18. During our crime audit we found various administrative errors: some records had the wrong crime classification; the outcome of an investigation was not updated; certain crimes were filed as detected when they were marked undetected and vice versa. In addition, there were other shortcomings: some crime records were submitted later than the counting rules policy allowed; some records did not include important information concerning the needs of victims; and in certain other instances, the matter should not have been recorded as a crime.

Area for improvement 1

By July 2016, the commissioner should augment the existing arrangements for crime recording by establishing and beginning operation of a comprehensive system for auditing crime records. Audits should be conducted regularly and led by a senior officer.

3.19. We also found that the force's usual practice was to record the end results of crime investigations in such a way that would maximise the detection rate. For example, where an offender committed affray, assaulting four people in the process, the force recorded five crimes (one for each assault and a further crime for affray). This meant that five crimes rather than one would be detected. Another example we saw involved seven people being arrested for serious assault and violent disorder against two victims. In this instance, 22 separate crimes were recorded and shown as detected.

3.20. Although this practice was allowed by the counting rules policy, it runs the risk of creating an inaccurate impression of the force's performance on crime detection (it is also not the usual practice of police forces in the England and Wales).

Area for improvement 2

By July 2016, the commissioner should align the counting rules policy more closely with Home Office standards, in particular those concerning the recording of detected crimes where multiple offences have taken place in single incidents.

Crime investigation

3.21. Of the 3603 recorded crimes in 2014/15, the force detected 57percent.[11] In particular, there were 1007 serious crimes recorded and 55 percent detected and 391 drug-related crimes reported with 81 percent detected. This detection rate (which exceeds that of any force in England and Wales) is, in part, a consequence of the problematic recording practices we describe in paragraph 3.19.

3.22. Despite these practices, we found through our audit that, in common with other police forces, some serious offences had far lower detection rates such as rape (29 percent), as did some of the most frequent crimes such as theft (21 percent), damage (19 percent) and burglary (24 percent).

3.23. We noted an acknowledgement among senior leaders of the high workloads carried by individual units and their timeliness. In management documents we found, for example: the crime investigation department had 34 live investigations, of which seven were urgent; the serious crime unit had 71 live investigations, of which 24 were urgent; the safeguarding unit had 17 live investigations, of which three were urgent; and the public protection unit had four live investigations, none of which were urgent.

3.24. We also found evidence of high workloads in more complex investigations. For example, the force was dealing with 14 high-tech crime cases, some of which had more than 100 computer exhibits awaiting forensic examination. There were 16 counter-terrorism investigations, 17 organised crime investigations, 20 investigations involving international Letters of Request,[12] and 284 financial disclosures that could lead to asset confiscation. In addition, the public protection unit was managing 17 registered sex offenders and monitoring a further 70 people of interest.

3.25. We conducted a case file review of a number of investigations of our choice. We reviewed the outcome of 36 crimes and we particularly examined the investigation surrounding a further seven serious crimes concerning assaults and sex offences.

3.26. The case file review revealed various examples of good police work and appropriate decision-making. These examples included two allegations of rapes that were investigated very thoroughly and professionally.

3.27. However, in spite of the good work we found there were examples of inadequate investigations. For example, we found one case where a complaint of harassment was not fully investigated and a counter-allegation of assault, which was admitted by the offender, had been closed as it was decided there was insufficient evidence to prosecute.

3.28. In some instances we found no investigation plan and insufficient supervisory checks. These are important as in some of the cases we reviewed, more could have been done to investigate the crime, care for the victim and secure a prosecution.

3.29. We consider that, without more effective supervision, the force will not be as effective as it needs to be to assure the quality of all investigations. This is a further area in which improvements should be made, in order to bring offenders to justice as promptly as possible and secure higher levels of victim care.

By October 2016, the commissioner should ensure that robust arrangements for the supervisory oversight of investigations are introduced. These arrangements should include the creation of investigation plans, regular supervisory checks and constructive challenge to decisions by officers concerning investigations.

[12] Mutual Legal Assistance (MLA) is a method of co-operation between States for obtaining assistance in the investigation or prosecution of criminal offences. MLA is generally used to obtain material that cannot be obtained on a law enforcement (police-to-police) basis, particularly enquiries that require coercive means. Requests are made by a formal international Letter of Request.

Victim care

3.30. We found that the force has a strong and improving focus on the needs of victims. It is a feature of the policing plan and was evident in some of the policies and procedures we reviewed.

3.31. We also found evidence that the force used a wide range of techniques to communicate with victims (as well as to obtain feedback from the public). These included Facebook, email, web forums, telephone and face-to-face contact through neighbourhood policing teams. We examined these techniques and found them to be up-to-date and used extensively. The force was (at the time our inspection) about to use a new method to gauge user satisfaction.

3.32. Also, the force has made a commitment to visit all victims. We learned that in 2014/15, neighbourhood teams made 802 such visits and a further 514 visits to vulnerable adults.[13] Officers we spoke with showed an understanding of the importance of victim care and their responsibilities in meeting victims' needs.

3.33. Victim contact was largely co-ordinated by one officer, who we found to be maintaining good oversight of victims and their needs, and arranging visits to them when required. This arrangement was generally effective but, when neighbourhood officers had to perform response team duties, visits to victims often had to be postponed.

3.34. Some of the members of the public with whom we spoke had been victims of crime. Most were satisfied with the service they received from the Royal Gibraltar Police.

3.35. However, we found that there was not any specific training for officers or support staff to identify vulnerable victims or a clear arrangement for the identification of vulnerable or repeat victims. In addition, during our case file review, we did not find evidence that the vulnerability of victims was considered consistently by officers. In particular, some of the cases of assault and sex offences we reviewed were related to domestic abuse. In these, identification of vulnerability, risk assessments and support was lacking.

3.36. It is our view that knowing who is a repeat and/or vulnerable victim is important as it influences the investigation and the type of victim support that the force and partner agencies need to give, and it can help to prevent future victimisation.

3.37. The Royal Gibraltar Police's approach to the identification of repeat and vulnerable victims is a further area in which improvements should be made:

Area for improvement 4

By July 2016, the commissioner should define in policy and procedures how vulnerable and repeat victims will be identified, how risks to them will be assessed and how appropriate support will be provided. Operation of the policy and procedures should begin as soon as possible thereafter.

Partnership working

3.38. In common with other police forces, the Royal Gibraltar Police acknowledges that it cannot work alone; other agencies have a part to play in the prevention and detection of crime. When the police and these agencies work together, their combined efforts lead to improved services.

3.39. We found that the force had joint working arrangements with some partner agencies and was seeking new agreements with others.

3.40. For example, there was a formal agreement in operation with the Youth Service to ensure the joint safeguarding unit dealt with all child and domestic abuse incidents. The force also had a formal agreement with the Care Agency (and Youth Service) to provide support to victims.

3.41. In addition, we saw evidence that 36 meetings of the Gibraltar Public Protection Panel had taken place to deal jointly with the 17 registered sex offenders and the 70 persons of interest. This has enabled good oversight by the responsible agencies and effective management of the risks presented by these individuals.

3.42. We found that new agreements were under discussion with the Financial Services Commission, the Borders & Coastguard Agency and the South East [of England] Counter Terrorism Unit.

3.43. Where partnership working was already happening, we found that there were good working relationships between the force and its partners, as evidenced above. However, we confirmed that information about victims and crimes was not always shared in a consistent manner. We learned of examples where vulnerable people and repeat victims, who were known to partners, only came to the attention of the police when a crime was reported. Sometimes, crimes were reported to the police long after the partner agency became aware that they had been committed.

3.44. We consider that this is another area for improvement. The force should seek to extend its partnership approach. More effective arrangements would help to identify people vulnerable to crime, or repeat victims, in order to minimise the likelihood of further crime. They may also improve reporting of hidden crime such as child sexual exploitation.

3.45. We recognise the challenges faced by the Royal Gibraltar Police in securing commitment from other agencies in Gibraltar where, unlike England and Wales, there is not any legislation to compel agencies to create a partnership to deal with crime and disorder.[14]

3.46. We suggest that the three bodies charged with the oversight of the force under the Police Act 2006 – HM Governor of Gibraltar, the Chief Minister, and the Gibraltar Police Authority – work together to secure the extension to Royal Gibraltar Police's partnership approach.

[14] Partnership approaches to tackling crime are now strongly embedded in the way in which local areas in England and Wales approach community safety. The Crime and Disorder Act (1998) defines the core group of agencies involved in these partnerships as well as their functions and role at the local level.

4. Demand and resources

Introduction

4.1. This chapter examines the extent to which the Royal Gibraltar Police understands the demands it faces. We considered the demands upon the force at the time of the inspection - and those it may face in the future. We then explored the manner in which the force assembles and deploys the resources it has been allocated in order to meet that demand.

4.2. This balance between demand and resources gives an indication of police efficiency.

4.3. In order to examine demand we looked at how the police respond to those incidents and investigations that are reported on a daily basis. In this report, we refer to this demand as 'daily demand'.

4.4. We also examined how well the force understands the types of crime and problems found within local communities. As some crimes and problems are less likely to be reported, the police should work with local communities to identify and understand this demand. Finally, we explored the force's understanding of how the demands it faces may change in the future. Such an understanding is necessary in order for the force to plan ahead, shaping its workforce and budget accordingly.

4.5. In order to explain what we found, we have focussed on the three types of demand described above:

- daily demand;
- types of crimes and problems; and
- future demand.

Findings

4.6. We found that the Royal Gibraltar Police was committed to meeting all demands, which led to high levels of public confidence and satisfaction but placed major pressures on the workforce.

4.7. The force was not well placed to understand the demands it faced due to the limitations created by paper-based systems and computer databases that were not integrated. Also, while the Gibraltar economy continues to grow – which brings a commensurate increase in demands on the police – constraints in the police funding arrangements became apparent. In this part of the inspection we identified various areas in which there is scope for the force (and in one instance the Authority and the Government of Gibraltar) to make improvements. These areas were the:

- assessment and prioritisation of daily demand;
- prediction of future demand: and
- police funding arrangements.

Daily demand

4.8. We reviewed police documents, interviewed officers and support staff and spoke to members of the public to gain an understanding of daily demand.

4.9. Police documents showed that some of the daily demand for policing involved calls for assistance from the public, dealing with crime and attending road traffic collisions. Examples of daily demand and the total volume of each type for the 12 months of 2014/15 are listed below.

Type of Demand	Volume per year
Enquiry calls from the public	8392
Recording and dealing with crime	3603
Arrests	2676
Persons searched	1639
Attending non-crime incidents	1064
Emergency calls for assistance	606
Road Traffic Collision	572

4.10. We learned that, in addition, the force deals with a wide variety of other daily functions such as public and military events (for example Freedom of the City, National Day, Ceremony of the Keys), court duty, school crossing patrols, frontier queues, music festivals, football matches and the arrival of cruise liners.

4.11. We used information we gathered in the course of the inspection to help us to analyse the demands faced by the force. Because of the limitations in the information systems we described earlier (paragraph 4.7) our analysis is incomplete. Nonetheless, it provides a useful starting point for the comprehensive assessment of future demand. As a result, we have included our analysis at: Annex A – an assessment of demand.

4.12. When we spoke with the public we found that the force had a strong connection with the local community, and that the community had very high expectations of the police. There was a strong sense among the public that the police should do everything asked of them, but equally there was an understanding by some that this is sometimes difficult to achieve.

4.13. The members of the public we spoke to, who included victims and others who were involved in incidents attended by police officers, were mainly positive about how well the force responded to their needs.

4.14. During our inspection we found that the use of police resources to respond to daily demand was not prioritised according to an assessment of the threat and risk of harm to individuals. This meant that the police attended nearly every call, and that calls were attended mainly in the order they were received rather than prioritised according to the threat of risk of harm. Furthermore, we found that, while much of this daily demand related to policing matters, a significant proportion did not.

4.15. This was difficult to quantify as the force's systems did not hold sufficient details to make a thorough analysis possible. However, officers we spoke with gave us examples of some of the non-crime calls that they had been required to attend. These included: dissatisfaction in the way a spill on a communal floor of a block of apartments had been mopped; response to personal panic alarms reporting leaking pipes; lost keys; and late meals. In addition, we were told there were many calls about parking and tobacco smuggling that were suitable for others to deal with, such as traffic enforcement officers and customs officers. This was confirmed by observation and audit work by the inspection team in the force control room.

4.16. We found that this daily demand is stretching the capacity of the force, particularly the response teams, to the point where officer welfare is adversely affected through sickness and stress. To support this, we found that the rate of uncertified sickness among response police officers in Gibraltar was approximately double the rate for support staff.

4.17. Work had been done by senior officers to identify some police responsibilities that could be dealt with by other agencies, such as enforcement work concerning unlawful feeding of the Barbary macaques and illegal fishing. In addition, we found that risk assessments were being used to reduce the policing commitment to some public events, beach patrols and minor traffic collisions.

4.18. This work was welcomed by personnel, who saw it as a positive start to a much-needed process of prioritising the demands to which the force would respond.

4.19. However, by prioritising demand on a more formal basis, being clear with the public and with officers about the types of calls that must be dealt with first (and those calls that would better be dealt with by other public bodies) demand can be better managed and even reduced.

4.20. We understand that officers and staff will want to provide the best service possible, and that responding to the public when they call for assistance is an important priority for the commissioner and for the Authority. However it is our view that the Royal Gibraltar Police's approach, that is, trying to meet all daily demands without prioritisation, is a further area in which improvements should be made.

Area for improvement 5

By October 2016, the commissioner should agree with the Authority a policy and procedure to prioritise – and in so doing match – resources to demand, particularly for response teams.

4.21. When we assessed the number of officers available to respond to daily demand, we found that there were 110 officers available. This included 60 officers working on response teams that operate on shifts covering the 24-hour period, 20 neighbourhood officers that work in specific geographical areas of Gibraltar and 30 officers providing specialist support for example in marine, firearms and traffic duties

4.22. However, we did not find that the number available to be deployed to deal with daily demand was based on an assessment of the likely volume and types of incidents during a particular period of time. This meant that the response team shift system provided the same number of officers across the 24-hour period irrespective of demand. There was also an impact on neighbourhood policing as officers from neighbourhood teams were often used to fill gaps in response teams owing to leave, training and sickness.

4.23. In addition, when speaking with response team officers we were told how unpopular the shift system was. We examined the shift pattern and found that it allowed for few weekends off, less than eight hours rest from the end of one shift to the start of another shift and long periods of night duty. With cancelled rest days, unexpected shift changes and overtime some officers told us that their shifts often became 16 hours long, and that they worked up to nine shifts before a day off.

4.24. We learned that senior officers were already aware of these issues and that in 2014, they commissioned an external review of the response team shift system. This was done by a company of human resources experts who proposed a number of shift patterns. However, the company concluded that there were insufficient officers on response teams to cope with the high level of demand.[15] If no prioritisation or reduction of demand is made then we tend to agree with this conclusion.

4.25. We also examined other internal human resource reviews and proposals to the Authority for additional resources. However, we understand that these proposals were not supported by the government and the number of police officers has not been increased.

4.26. As a consequence of our findings in relation to daily demand and the response shift pattern, we consider this to be an area for improvement.

Area for improvement 6

By October 2016, the commissioner should establish an effective way to assess how busy the force is likely to be, by using a range of tools to understand daily calls for service and patterns in their demand. This should include: analysing calls for service and recorded crime figures; identifying peak or seasonal demand; and understanding factors affecting demand such as major events. Once this information is available, judgments should be made about the optimum shift patterns and the numbers of officers required for the shift patterns.

Types of crimes and problems

4.27. While recorded crime levels have remained relatively stable in Gibraltar, we found that the complexity involved in tackling crime had increased. This was because of factors such as the internet and mobile communications, which are exploited by criminals. Also, those crime reports and case files we reviewed revealed new and more complex – yet often less visible – problems. These included: cyber-crime; fraud and financial crime; management of high-risk sex offenders; and calls requiring protracted enquiries such as children missing from care.

4.28. We found that the force recognised that its understanding of the demand from less visible or more complex crime was less developed. We understand that this demand is harder to analyse as it may be less likely to be reported to the force for a variety of reasons, for example because of the nature of the offending or the victims involved, or because victims can report the incident to a different organisation.

4.29. However, neighbourhood officers were aware of the difficulties in understanding this demand and we found that they were working closely with communities to develop relationships so less visible and more complex crimes, such as sexual abuse, are more likely to be reported. In addition, crime prevention schemes we were shown involving school and community groups were raising awareness of certain types of issues and crimes, for example how children can protect themselves from exploitation through cyber-crime.

4.30. With regard to the capacity (numbers of officers and staff) and capability (their skills and equipment) needed to deal with crime and problems, we examined a number of documents. These included strategic threat and risk assessments that went some way to describing police activity in response to types of crimes and problems, but all the documents we examined stopped short of assessing the capacity and capability needed by the force to match those demands. This is important as without an understanding of what resources and skills are needed to deal with crime and problems it is difficult to ensure that all crimes and problems are being dealt with effectively and efficiently.

4.31. We found that, from its existing resources, the force was able to develop new capabilities such as public protection, high-tech crime investigation and financial investigation. These capabilities were helping the force to better understand and respond to these less visible and more complex crimes.

4.32. However, from our document review we found that there was limited capacity and backlogs of work in these units. Consequently, insufficient training and insufficient numbers of staff were the main concerns of those we spoke with. This was reflected across other functions of policing such as response team and neighbourhood officers. The lack of training opportunities also featured highly on the 2015 staff survey.

4.33. While training for staff was seen as a priority by senior officers, the force had only £100,000 allocated to its training budget.

4.34. While training opportunities are available, the most specialised courses can only be found outside Gibraltar, which creates additional travel costs and time for those attending. Therefore it is our view that the training budget may not be sufficient to fund the training needs of the force.

Future demand

4.35. Understanding likely future demand is important because this should help to determine what capacity and capability the force needs to have in the future. The gap between current and likely future demand should inform planning regarding money, recruitment, skills, information and communication technology, and organisational structures. These capabilities can take time to build, therefore the force needs to plan well in advance on the basis of the demand they are likely to face in the future.

4.36. We recognise that understanding future demand is not straightforward. Data and threat assessments cannot predict the future with certainty. Assumptions need constant refreshing if they are not to mislead. The unexpected will often happen, and the pressure of responding to current problems can dominate.

4.37. We found that, within the strategic threat and risk assessment, there were indications of likely trends in serious and organised crime and references to emerging crime types, such as cyber-crime and child sexual exploitation, as well as likely demographic changes. This provided useful insight into future demands but it did not amount to a comprehensive understanding. As a consequence, we did not see a plan to respond to future demand in terms of money, recruitment and structures, apart from a proposal for a new police headquarters.

4.38. Similarly, future training plans that we examined were based on filling skill gaps brought about by retirements over a five-year period, rather than on what capabilities and capacity the force will need in the future.

4.39. We also found that the force used 14 separate databases, none of which were linked to each other. Functions such as crime recording and custody were paper based. It was difficult to collect information from these systems to help assess demand.

4.40. There was good evidence that the force was seeking to overcome this, through investment in some of the infrastructure that will be required for the future. We examined plans for a new computer database (Cyclops) that manages calls, crime, cases, intelligence and incidents.

4.41. Cyclops is a system that spans the criminal justice network and so the project requires government support.

4.42. It is our view that without a comprehensive understanding of likely future demand the force cannot be certain it is able to build the capacity and capability needed. We consider that this is a further area for improvement in the Royal Gibraltar Police.

Area for improvement 7

By October 2016, the commissioner should compile a comprehensive prediction of future demand. This should be used to define the capacity and capability the force will need, which will enable the creation of plans for funding, skills, structure, estates, information and communication technology and other equipment.

Resources

4.43. The 2015/16 budget for the force is £15.127m, an increase of £0.634m on the budget for 2014/15; nearly £11m is taken up in police salaries, with another £1.3m allocated for police overtime, the equivalent of 30 full-time officers' salaries.

4.44. The Authority determines, in consultation with the commissioner of police, the number and rank structure of the personnel employed by the force then the Authority submits to the Minister for public finance an annual budget bid for the force.[16]

4.45. The Royal Gibraltar Police has 238 officers and 36 members of support staff, a decrease of five staff from 2014. The number of officers has remained relatively stable since 1946 when there were 232 officers; however, policing demands have changed significantly since then.

4.46. While the numbers of staff have changed little, the budget for the force has increased year on year. However, we found a number of constraints on how the budget can be used and on how resources can be increased to match demand.

4.47. The commissioner of police is given a budget for all aspects of policing but we found that it is not a fully devolved budget. There is no flexibility in how the force can use the funds to improve its service to the public or move money from one police function to another to better manage demand.

4.48. We found through our document review that the force relied on a significant overtime budget to manage peaks of demand and fill gaps when officers were on leave, sick or training. However, we believe this could be reduced if the force was better able to match resource to demand, or it could be converted into police officer posts if demand outstrips available resources.

4.49. Also, we found that there were limited opportunities for the force to generate income from policing activity to better manage demand. For example, where commercial enterprises required policing support such as escorting cranes, management of queues at music festivals or crowd control at football matches, any income generated from policing was paid to the government. In addition, because legislation concerning the proceeds of crime was not (at the time of our inspection) enacted, the force was unable to benefit from its work in seizing criminal assets.

4.50. We saw evidence that senior officers and the senior finance manager had effective ways to review and control overall expenditure. These often involved regular senior-level discussions between the finance department and other departments involved in human resources, corporate development and operational matters. Control of overtime spend was devolved to senior officers so that the risk of overspend was minimised and that it was used only for appropriate reasons.

4.51. We consider that, in an environment where the economy is growing rapidly and where it can reasonably be expected that demand for policing will also grow, the Royal Gibraltar Police needs guidance that sets out the funding formula, including the associated criteria, thresholds and conditions that need to be met for the resources it needs.

Area for improvement 8

By July 2016, the Minister for Finance should set out the funding formula, including the associated criteria, thresholds and conditions that need to be met for resources required to police Gibraltar.

5. Conclusion

Leadership, vision, values and culture

5.1. This inspection revealed strengths in the Royal Gibraltar Police, in particular the clarity of vision from the commissioner and the conduct of senior officers; it was clear they had won the support and respect of their personnel by investing time in building relationships and involving people in decision-making.

5.2. The quality of leadership was also evident in other ways: the 'one team' culture; professional behaviours with a strong set of values; a keen focus on welfare and a robust complaints process; and the manner in which the force, at all levels, clearly set out to meet the high expectations of the public.

5.3. We conclude that, in general, Royal Gibraltar Police is well led and this leads to a good standard of policing for the public.

Crime management

5.4. The good awareness among officers of crime activity and intelligence relevant to their areas, and their application of effective tactics to prevent crime, revealed further strengths in the force.

5.5. These strengths were reinforced by the evidence of reassurance activity and early intervention work with young people in particular, which also attracted the support of the public, as did Operation Gibwatch.

5.6. Overall, the evidence in this part of our inspection revealed a force that is working with the public in an effective way to prevent crime. The various examples of good practice to prevent and investigate crime were all reassuring.

5.7. However, this reassuring evidence was offset by our findings in five respects: the limited evidence of crime auditing (which had allowed errors to go un-noticed); the recording practice for detected crime (which may lead to a false impression of detection rates); the insufficient levels of supervision of crime investigations; the force's approach to the identification of vulnerable and repeat victims; and the extent of partnership working.

5.8. The evidence in this part of our inspection led us to conclude that, although the Royal Gibraltar Police clearly takes crime seriously, there is scope for the force to improve its effectiveness on crime auditing, crime recording, supervision of investigations, the identification of vulnerable and repeat victims and the extent of partnership working. Consequently, we highlight a number of areas for improvement which are intended to assist the force to become more effective in these areas.

5.9. We also conclude that there is further scope to improve effectiveness by building upon the already strong partnership working. For this, the force needs the help of the Gibraltar Police Authority, the Chief Minister and HM Governor where appropriate.

Demand and resources

5.10. We found that the Royal Gibraltar Police was committed to meeting all public expectations, which led to high levels of public confidence and satisfaction but placed major pressures on the workforce.

5.11. There was a strong sense among the public that the police should do everything asked of them, but equally there was an understanding by some that this is sometimes difficult to achieve.

5.12. During our inspection we found that the use of police resources to respond to daily demand was not prioritised according to an assessment of the threat and risk of harm to individuals and that this daily demand is stretching the capacity and capability of the force, particularly the response teams, to the point where officer wellbeing is adversely affected through sickness and stress. This is an area in which improvements should be made.

5.13. We found that the complexity involved in tackling crime had increased and there was limited capacity and capability as well as backlogs of work in some units. Consequently, officers and support staff were concerned about insufficient training and insufficient numbers of staff.

5.14. While training for staff was seen as a priority by senior officers, the force had only £100,000 allocated to its training budget. Therefore, it is our view that the training budget may not be sufficient to fund the training needs of the force.

5.15. Understanding likely future demand is important because this should help to determine what capacity and capability the force needs to have in the future.

5.16. We conclude that, while the force could provide useful insight into future demands, it did not amount to a comprehensive understanding. As a consequence we did not see a plan to respond to future demand in terms of money, recruitment and structures, apart from a proposal for a new police headquarters.

Annex A – an assessment of demand (12-month period – 2014/15)

Demand/Activity/Risk	Capacity & capability	Comment
Counter terrorism	On-going protective security reviews, counter-terrorist patrols, 16 operations &/or investigations, crisis-handling exercise (August), counter-terrorism exercise (November), and a review of policies, procedures and training for joint working.[17]	Gibraltar is at alert state 'substantial', however the significant effort invested by the force to meet the demands of this threat level has not been assessed in terms of time. The capacity and capability needed to manage future demands has also yet to be assessed.
Organised crime	Ranges from drug and tobacco smuggling to financial and cyber-crime. Currently 284 financial disclosures, 71 live investigations and 20 International Letters of Request, are being dealt with, as well as preventive and intelligence-led patrols.	A strategic threat and risk assessment sets out the threats in broad terms but the capacity and capability needed to manage future demands has yet to be assessed.
Public & Child Protection	The safeguarding unit deals with all child and domestic abuse. Formal agreements with Care Agency and Youth Services ensure joint working.	As above, assessments of capacity and capability to manage future demands have yet to be made.
Management of sex offenders	Currently, 17 registered sex offenders are being managed and over 70	So far, 36 meetings of the Gibraltar public protection panel have persons of interest are being monitored.	taken place. As above, assessments of capacity and capability to manage future demands have yet to be made.

Crime recorded by the force (2014/15)	3902 (3603 confirmed)[18] The force record over 150 different offence/crime types, the most serious include child abduction (1 reported – nil detected), child cruelty (2 reported – 1 detected), Class A drug offences (49 reported – 42 detected), importing firearms (6 reported – 6 detected) wounding (33 reported – 52 percent detected), rape (7 reported – 29 percent detected) child sex crimes (9 reported – 40 percent detected) The most frequent include theft (398 reported – 21 percent detected), criminal damage (302 reported – 19 percent detected), possession of class B drugs (271 reported – 82 percent detected), common assault (165 reported – 52 percent detected) being drunk and disorderly (134 reported – 93 percent	Attending crimes, conducting initial and ongoing enquiries or pursuing complex and lengthy investigations, leading to trial takes considerable time, however we did not find an accurate means of recording this. Proactive policing and preventive patrols working on intelligence targeted hotspots of crime activity on 1406 occasions, and neighbourhood policing teams visited 802 victims of crime and visited 514 vulnerable adults. In addition 200 drug awareness campaign meetings and presentations took place (2014/15). We did find that the crime investigation department had 34 live investigations of which 7 were now urgent, the serious crime unit had 71 live investigations of which 24 were now detected) and burglary (104 reported – 24 percent detected). 16 offences types concern tobacco alone, the most prevalent is possession of commercial quantities (122 reported – 62 percent detected)[19]. However, the force searched 979 people, seized 75 vehicles and 188 boxes of cigarettes.	urgent, the child protection unit had 17 live investigations of which 3 were now urgent, and the public protection unit had 4 live investigations but none needed immediate work.

Crime shown as detected by the force	57 percent[20]	We conducted a crime audit and case file review. The findings are discussed in Chapter 2
Enquiry calls recorded by the force (2014/15)	8392[21] In 12 months, the force dealt with 1064 incidents that did not amount to a crime and executed 2540 warrants.[22]	The types of calls received is discussed in Chapter 3
Emergency calls attended by the force (2014/15)	606[23]	Prioritisation of calls is discussed in Chapter 3 The police response teams operate 24 hours a day on a shift system. Work was done with Working-time-solutions

		Ltd to assess demand and the number of officers needed to meet that demand. It relied on call/task data by hour, day and week. The conclusion was that for the preferred shift system, there were insufficient resources to meet demand.
Road traffic collisions (2014/15)	572[24]	There has been an overall decrease in road traffic collisions year on year by 28 percent. As above, assessments of capacity and capability to manage future demands have yet to be made.
Operation Roadwatch activity	50 offences reported in one week and 125 parking tickets[25]. Year on year the force has seen increases reported for drink-driving (38 percent), speeding (180 percent), using a phone (40 percent) and no seat belt (31 percent).[26]	Operation Roadwatch is a roads policing scheme to prevent injury and to enforce the law. Officers are deployed on the basis of intelligence and statistics; however, it has been difficult for us to determine the amount of time spent on this work.
Searches carried under Section 5 (2014/15)	Total number of stops – 944, total number of persons searched - 1639, total of arrests -	These range from tobacco smuggling to theft, drugs and offensive weapons

Persons arrested (2014/15)	2676[27]	The processing of detained persons to the point of release and the resultant paperwork has not been assessed. As above, assessments of capacity and capability to manage future demands have yet to be made.
Persons charged	1482[28]	As above
Persons released	450[29]	As above
Persons cautioned	278[30]	As above
Drugs work (2014/15)	361 serious drug offences reported or discovered by police, with 83 percent detected[31].	Offences mainly committed by local British men aged 18-25 in possession of cannabis resin mainly on Fridays and Saturdays. Use and price of drugs has remained stable for the last five years.[32]
Public events and daily tasks.	Freedom of the City, National Day, Ceremony of the Keys, Court duty, School Crossing Patrols, Frontier queues, Mini Olympiad, music	Ceremonial duty takes up a proportion of police time, however, the force has negotiated and reduced the number of officers required for

Initial Training demand	20 weeks for each entrant[34]
Succession planning and current training	The force has assessed that the training required to replace the capability lost and to maintain current training needs would involve over one hundred different courses, sixty of which would be in the UK. The estimated cost is £537,866.	Three superintendents, three chief inspectors, six inspectors, 9 sergeants and 35 constables are eligible to retire in the next five years.[35] Annual training bids are assessed by the training prioritisation board made up of senior officers. In the recent staff survey, only 44 percent of the workforce was satisfied with their current level of training and development.[36]

The first part of this report is about the progress the Royal Gibraltar Police has made since our 2016 inspection. When we revisited the force in 2019, we found that it had met two out of eight areas for improvement. We expected the force to have done more to assess and understand demand, risk and vulnerability. We also expected it to be better at supervising investigations and managing capacity. We have made five new recommendations relating to those issues.

The second part of the report is a new inspection of the force's legitimacy. It includes eight areas for improvement and makes five recommendations intended to help the force better promote ethics, fairness and transparency.

We have summarised our findings on how the force has addressed the 2016 areas for improvement, along with the legitimacy-related themes we inspected in 2019, in the list below.

Progress on the 2016 areas for improvement

1. Auditing of crime and incident recording

- Auditing of crime and incident reporting is still an area for improvement.
- The force should perform more detailed crime record audits and (continue to) train officers and staff.
- The force should increase resilience in this area by appointing a deputy crime desk manager – this is a new area for improvement.

2. Counting rules

- The force met this area for improvement by aligning its counting rules more closely to Home Office standards.
- The force should make sure that all calls for service are recorded on CAD, its computer aided dispatch system – this is a new recommendation.

3. Supervisory oversight of investigations

- Supervisory oversight of investigations is still an area for improvement.
- Insufficient supervision can mean that cases aren't allocated to those with the most investigative capacity, and delay cases coming to court.
- The force should create a policy that states the frequency and depth of supervision needed, including dip-sampling of files – this is a new recommendation.

- The force's senior leadership team should adopt the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime (the victims' code) and conduct victim surveys – this is also a new recommendation.

4. Policy and procedure around vulnerable and repeat victims

- The treatment of vulnerable and repeat victims is still an area for improvement.
- The force should develop a corporate definition of vulnerability (and related processes) to ensure that officers can identify it and intervene – this is a new recommendation.
- The force should evaluate all domestic violence incidents and use the data to establish whether domestic violence prevention orders or notices (DVPOs or DVPNs) would have provided additional protection for victims. If yes, the Government should consider incorporating them into Gibraltar law. This is also a new recommendation.

5. Assessing risk and prioritising response

- Assessing risk and prioritising response is still an area for improvement.
- It is good that the force is using THRIVE, a risk assessment process used by forces in England and Wales, to assess risk and prioritise its response to calls. However, it could be better at assessing risk.
- The force should be firmer about managing partner and public expectations – it is doing a lot of work that (arguably) other organisations should be doing, as well as a lot of work that is expected of it but not within its remit.

6. Understanding the full range of demand

- Understanding the full range of demand is still an area for improvement.
- It is good that the force knows when it receives most calls for service and has amended shift patterns accordingly. However, it still doesn't fully understand other demand and therefore cannot know if it is resourcing effectively.

7. Predicting future demand

- Predicting future demand is still an area for improvement (it wasn't met because the force hasn't compiled a comprehensive prediction of future demand).
- The force should update its strategic threat and risk assessment to more effectively plan for the skills / structure/ ICT it will need in future.

8. Budgeting

- Budgeting is still an area for improvement.
- The force has tried to address this area for improvement, but it isn't one it can do alone – it needs input and a funding formula from the Minister for Finance.
- Budgets should be devolved and allow the force to generate income.

How the police promote and reinforce integrity

Ethics, value and culture

- Code of ethics: The force has adopted the College of Policing Code of Ethics as its new code of ethics policy. But it hasn't fully integrated the code into its policies and processes. We make three recommendations to help the force apply the code to its operational environment and promote and make sure people understand it throughout the organisation.
- Abuse of position for a sexual purpose: The force has not briefed or trained its workforce on the risks posed by abuse of position for a sexual purpose. Our recommendation is that it give officers and staff more guidance on appropriate behaviour – that is, what to watch out for in themselves and others.
- Business interests and notifiable associations: This is an area for improvement. The force is not doing enough to counter the risk of corruption. The senior leadership team should produce business interests and notifiable associations policies that mandate recording of such issues and regular review of registers.
- Role models: We were told of a "firm leadership style" in the force. And some of the workforce perceive that some managers seek too readily to blame and reprimand. We didn't encounter any evidence of bullying, although looking for it didn't fall within our terms of reference. Leadership development is an area of improvement for the force and it might benefit from exchanges with officers in England and Wales about these subjects. Our additional recommendation is that the senior leadership team produce an anti-bullying statement and improve processes to prevent bullying.
- Gifts and hospitality: This is an area for improvement. The senior leadership team should make sure that gifts and hospitality registers are monitored more regularly to ensure the workforce is complying with policy.

Ethical and lawful behaviour

- Vetting: The Royal Gibraltar Police doesn't have a consistent vetting process. Our recommendation is that the senior leadership team review vetting procedures and consider adopting the College of Policing's authorised professional practice (APP) on vetting.
- Tackling misconduct and corruption: This is an area for improvement. The force doesn't fully understand its exposure to the risk of corruption. Its professional standards unit lacks the resource and expertise to develop a full understanding of the risk, or to monitor and mitigate the threat. Our recommendation is that the senior leadership team determine the best model for providing counter-corruption capability, to identify and pursue corrupt employees, or employees who are susceptible to corruption.

Also, under the heading Tackling misconduct and corruption:

- Confidential reporting is an area for improvement. The force doesn't have confidential reporting mechanisms in place. The senior leadership team should develop such a mechanism, perhaps managed independently to avoid scepticism or distrust.

- Understanding the risk of corruption is an area for improvement. The senior leadership team should create a workforce briefing based on the College of Policing's APP on counter corruption.

Introduction

Our commission

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and Fire & Rescue Services (HMICFRS) is an independent inspectorate. We conduct statutory inspections of police forces and other law enforcement agencies in England and Wales. We also inspect law enforcement arrangements in British Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies on invitation from the relevant government.

In early 2019, the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA), an independent body appointed by HM Government of Gibraltar, invited us to inspect the Royal Gibraltar Police. We agreed terms of reference and a methodology before conducting the fieldwork between 14 and 18 October 2019.

Our terms of reference were:

- how well the Royal Gibraltar Police had implemented the areas for improvement highlighted in our 2016 report; and
- how well it promotes and ensures ethical behaviour.

About the Royal Gibraltar Police

The Royal Gibraltar Police is the oldest Commonwealth police force outside the UK. It was formed in 1830. There are 248 police officers in the force, supported by a small number of police staff who are directly employed by the Gibraltar Government.

It is not the only policing body in Gibraltar. The Gibraltar Defence Police is a force that guards and enforces law on Ministry of Defence installations in Gibraltar. There is also a Joint Provost and Security Unit, which includes officers from Royal Navy Police, Royal Military Police, and RAF Police.

The Royal Gibraltar Police is a relatively small force and its capacity and capability have limitations. So, we don't compare it directly with other forces, or grade it.

This is our third inspection. We previously inspected the force in 2016 and 2011.

Methodology

We conducted the fieldwork for this inspection in October 2019. We:

- interviewed staff at all levels of the force;
- attended management meetings and staff briefings;
- consulted other law enforcement and criminal justice organisations;

- spoke with partner agencies and community representatives; and
- met with the GPA and the Gibraltar Police Federation.

We also analysed data and documents, including a self-assessment provided by the force. And we audited a series of its crime investigation files and reviewed calls from the control room.

In reaching our judgments we have, where appropriate, made comparisons with police practices in other British Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies, and in England and Wales. We have also drawn on the College of Policing's guidance to police forces (known as APPs) as well as referring to findings from other inspection reports.

This report

This report has two sections:

1. The first describes the overall progress the force has made since our last inspection and then reviews each of the eight areas for improvement, including background information, our 2019 findings and judgments, and any new or revised recommendations.
2. The second includes our findings on the force's legitimacy, including its ethical behaviour. This part of the inspection closely resembles other PEEL inspections, but reflects the size of the Royal Gibraltar Police and the context in which it operates.

The Royal Gibraltar Police's progress on the 2016 areas for improvement

Overview

Gibraltar is a relatively safe place and the Royal Gibraltar Police offers a good level of service to the public. But there are areas where it could improve. It has made some progress in meeting the areas for improvement we highlighted in 2016. Limited resources and poor-quality technology and infrastructure have delayed progress, as have competing demands. However, we expected to see that rather more had been achieved when we revisited in 2019.

The force isn't as effective or efficient as it could be. We found that some areas for improvement had progressed as a result of other events rather than through deliberate action. A more structured approach – including plans with accountable, responsible officers – would have helped the force achieve more, more quickly.

The force's senior leadership team states its commitment to identifying and implementing best practice; and developing effective policy and process for the organisation. However, we found that poor and outdated practice often curtails officers' effectiveness. Policing in Gibraltar has changed relatively slowly in recent years and this influences the force culture. There is, we believe, limited appetite to challenge this culture or modernise.

The force underestimated the challenge of getting the workforce to adapt to changes in ways of working when it introduced its new ICT platform in 2017. And the platform presented further challenges, such as slow operating speed, use of dual systems and duplication.

The force must invest more energy in getting the workforce to understand and use the new platform. It has the potential to make the force more efficient and effective, as well as help complete the areas for improvement.

We found little incentive for the force to become more efficient and effective. The Government meets additional expenditure if it overspends. And the Government receives any savings or income the force generates; for example, from policing events.

Area for improvement 1

By July 2016, the commissioner should augment the existing arrangements for crime recording by establishing and beginning operation of a comprehensive system for auditing crime records. Audits should be conducted regularly and led by a senior officer.

Background

During our 2016 inspection, we saw the records of an audit of crime reports. The records department sergeant performed the audit every few months to give an overview of outstanding crimes compared to incidents logged. Their audit didn't review specific areas, such as high-risk crime.

We found several administrative errors:

- some records had the wrong crime classification;
- the outcome of an investigation was not always updated; and
- certain crimes were filed as detected when they were marked undetected, and vice versa.

In addition:

- some records were submitted later than the counting rules policy allowed;
- some records did not include important information concerning the needs of victims; and
- in some instances, the matter should not have been recorded as a crime.

Our findings in 2019

The assistant commissioner performed an audit in 2019 that highlighted similar problems to those we found in 2016. For example, there was incorrect classification of some crimes and the wrong status shown on others.

The Royal Gibraltar Police audit also revealed that not all officers were including all the necessary information in crime reports or checking comments from their supervisors. In some cases, it was apparent that supervisors hadn't checked the crime reports well enough before filing them as complete.

The force had taken corrective action and established a steering group to improve crime recording. Minutes from the group's 2019 meeting identified, among other things, the need for more detailed audits as well as additional training for police officers and their supervisors. This training has taken place.

The steering group provides guidance to the recently appointed crime desk manager, who is an experienced investigator and supervisor. They are responsible for checking the validity and correctness of crime reports, as well as performing regular audits. But they hadn't had the relevant College of Policing training to be able to perform robust crime recording audits when we met. (Their training is scheduled for March 2020.)

Each day, the crime desk manager reviews all crimes recorded, cancelled and closed in the previous 24 hours. As the force receives a relatively small number of crime reports, they should be able to audit all the crimes in the system on a regular basis.

The force doesn't dip-sample reported incidents, such as disturbances, to check if they should be recorded as a crime. It would be good practice for the crime desk manager to do this.

The crime desk manager also performs other duties. When they are absent, no audits or checks take place. Instead, the checks must be done on their return. We recognise the force's limited resources, but the commissioner should consider appointing a deputy crime desk manager to cover periods when the crime desk manager is absent or required to fulfil other duties.

New area for improvement 1

The lack of resilience for the Royal Gibraltar Police crime desk manager position is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should appoint a deputy crime desk manager to conduct audits and checks during long-term abstractions.

Judgment

The Royal Gibraltar Police's auditing of crime and incident recording is still an area for improvement.

Area for improvement 2

By July 2016, the commissioner should align the counting rules policy more closely with Home Office standards, in particular those concerning recording detected crimes where multiple offences have taken place in single incidents.

Background

During our 2016 inspection, we found that the force's usual practice was to record the end results of crime investigations in a way that would maximise the detection rate. For example, where an offender committed affray, assaulting four people in the process, the force recorded five crimes (one for each assault and a further crime for affray). This meant that five crimes rather than one would be detected.

Another example involved seven people being arrested for serious assault and violent disorder against two victims. In this instance, 22 separate crimes were recorded and shown as detected.

Although this practice was allowed by the counting rules policy, it risked creating an inaccurate – and overly optimistic – impression of the force's performance on crime detection. It is also not the usual practice among police forces in England and Wales.

Our findings in 2019

The Royal Gibraltar Police's counting rules now align more closely with the Home Office counting rules for recorded crime. The section of the force's rules that outlines the one-crime-per-victim rule is an almost verbatim copy of the Home Office rules.

We performed an audit of crime reports for a variety of offences, using methodology that we apply to policing in England and Wales. We found greater similarity in how crimes are recorded than in our 2016 inspection. This includes classifying crimes according to certain types, even where the local legislation and definition of offences differ slightly from UK laws.

We also examined crime reports for single incidents that contained multiple offences. In our sample audit, all crimes were correctly recorded and the ICT system, Cyclops, accurately linked them. This demonstrates more ethical crime recording as well as greater accessibility and consistency of information.

Our audit only highlighted one problem. This related to recording incidents on the Computer Aided Dispatch (CAD) system.

CAD is an ICT system that records calls from the public, incident reports by police officers, and other demands for police services. During our analysis of the system and observations of its use, we weren't convinced that all calls for service were recorded, although we couldn't estimate the number missing. We witnessed calls being received that were recorded on paper and which didn't later appear on CAD. These included calls where officers were dispatched.

A failure to accurately record incidents undermines the force's ability to understand demand. There is also the potential that incidents that should be recorded as crimes will go unrecorded. This could lead to crimes being recorded inaccurately and victims of crime not receiving the appropriate level of service.

While the force has a clear policy on this matter, it is inconsistently followed by staff and supervisors in the control room.

See also area for improvement 5, which is about demand and resources.

Judgment

The Royal Gibraltar Police has aligned its counting rules policy more closely with Home Office standards. This means the force has addressed the area for improvement we highlighted in 2016.

However, it should make sure that officers record all calls for service recorded on CAD.

New recommendation 1

With immediate effect, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should make sure that all calls for service are recorded on the force's Computer Aided Dispatch system.

Area for improvement 3

By October 2016, the commissioner should make sure that robust arrangements for the supervisory oversight of investigations are introduced. These arrangements should include the creation of investigation plans, regular supervisory checks and constructive challenge to decisions by officers concerning investigations.

Background

Our 2016 inspection examined how the Royal Gibraltar Police investigates crime. This included a case file review.

The review revealed examples of good police work and high-quality decision making, such as two allegations of rapes that were investigated very thoroughly and professionally. But we also found examples of inadequate investigation work.

Sergeants were not conducting robust supervision of all investigations. The review revealed many cases where not enough supervisory checks had been conducted and investigation plans hadn't been created.

We concluded that without more effective supervision, the force wouldn't be able to assure the quality of all investigations. Improvements should be made to bring offenders to justice as promptly as possible and provide higher levels of victim care.

Our findings in 2019

We went beyond the wording of the 2016 area for improvement when we revisited the force in 2019. We wanted to see if the quality of investigation had improved, as well as supervision. We inspected supervision; case allocation and investigative capacity; investigative support; the force's relationship with Crown Counsel; and victim support.

Supervisory oversight

When we reviewed crime reports and investigation case files, we found greater supervisory involvement at sergeant and inspector level than was evident in our 2016 inspection.

Officers supervise response teams by providing signed notes that include guidance for the investigator. But in most cases, these notes were a list of tasks rather than an investigation plan.

While welcome, these enhanced supervisory checks could delay case files being submitted to the state prosecutor, known as Crown Counsel in Gibraltar. We found that, in some circumstances, investigators could wait for up to three weeks for the sergeant and then the inspector to check a file before returning it. These delays worsened when the Crown Counsel returned files with points of correction that supervisors should have identified.

Delays and omissions were more evident in case files prepared by officers from response teams than officers from specialist units. When we spoke with the criminal investigation department (CID), public protection, fraud and economic crime units, we found that supervisors had a more detailed understanding of the cases under investigation. Specialist officers had more investigative experience and generally more time to complete case files. In contrast, officers from response teams were generally less experienced as investigating crime was one of many priorities they had to manage.

Such problems are not uncommon in other forces. But they may be more acute in low crime environments such as Gibraltar, where investigators have less opportunity to build investigative skills and experience. This makes effective supervision even more important.

Response officers usually conducted effective early evidence collection when initially attending crime scenes. But when officers were allocated a case to investigate further, time, ability and supervisory support were often lacking.

The force has not provided all officers who investigate or supervise criminal investigations with enough training or continuous professional development. This is a cause for concern.

New recommendation 2

By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should set clear expectations in policy for supervisors about the frequency and depth of supervision needed. In addition, supervisors should be trained where necessary. Inspectors should carry out monthly dip-sampling of investigations to provide assurance that these expectations are met.

Case allocation and investigative capacity

The Royal Gibraltar Police doesn't have a consistent approach to make sure that officers with the right skills and experience are allocated crimes for investigation.

The force didn't have a crime allocation policy at the time of our inspection, although an officer was writing one. There was limited evidence of the force matching demand with investigative capacity. Current practice differs from the aspirations of the draft policy. This meant some inexperienced officers had been investigating serious crimes, creating risk for the investigation and the force.

We also found that some specialist units are stretched to capacity due to high levels of demand, volume and complexity. This was a problem for the safeguarding team and economic crime unit (ECU).

Gibraltar faces difficulties in maintaining compliance with MONEYVAL and FATF. MONEYVAL is a monitoring body of the Council of Europe. It assesses compliance with the principal international standards to counter money laundering and the financing of terrorism. FATF is the Financial Action Task Force, a G7 initiative with similar aims to MONEYVAL.

In its 2019 report on Gibraltar, MONEYVAL stated:

> The law enforcement and prosecuting authorities responsible for the detection, investigation and prosecution of money laundering are highly motivated to investigate and prosecute domestic proceed generating crime but have insufficient resources to conduct major money laundering investigations.

We concur that ECU doesn't have the resources to conduct investigations that are commensurate with Gibraltar's risk profile. Roles such as forensic accountant and lawyer, which we would expect to see in the economic crime departments of national agencies, were absent. Should this situation continue, it could damage the reputation of Gibraltar's financial sector. This is a matter for HM Government of Gibraltar to resolve.

CID doesn't have the same capacity problems as ECU and the safeguarding team. But officers are regularly unable to progress their investigations as they are required to perform other duties. In the weeks prior to our inspection, the whole unit had been investigating an Iranian oil tanker suspected of carrying oil bound for Syria.

Investigative support

Scenes of crime officers provide a good forensic service. But the force often has to wait a long time to receive the results of forensic submissions it makes to the UK. This frequently prolongs investigations.

The force's hi-tech crime unit, which examines digital devices, also provides a good service although it lacks capacity to do so quickly.

We found officers using their personal devices to examine offenders' phones. This isn't good practice and doesn't meet best evidence standards.

Crown Counsel

There is an effective, professional working relationship between the Royal Gibraltar Police and Crown Counsel, particularly in feeding back common themes of omissions of evidence found in case files. But it isn't always efficient.

For example, Crown Counsel asks for paper copies of case files, which sees officers photocopying and taking them to court in police cars. This is inefficient, considering that the force's Cyclops case management system was designed to be used by the police and Crown Counsel to avoid paper-based prosecution files. The force should negotiate a return to Cyclops.

Victims

The Royal Gibraltar Police should do more to make sure that victims of crime get the service they need.

Some officers on response teams and in specialist posts told us of their concerns that victims weren't at the heart of investigations. This is most acute for response officers, many of whom struggle to find time to regularly update victims about the progress of investigations. Senior officers are aware of the problem and acknowledged that officers don't contact victims regularly enough.

Officers also lack guidance on what service should they should provide. Gibraltar's Victims in Criminal Proceedings Regulations 2015 sets out a range of victim entitlements but isn't specific enough to guide officers and omits important elements of the victims' code.

The victims' code, formally known as the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime, was introduced in the UK in 2016. It outlines a range of victim entitlements, including updates on police investigation. Police and other bodies should provide an enhanced service to victims of serious crime, persistently targeted victims, and vulnerable or intimidated victims. These enhanced entitlements include special measures to help vulnerable or intimidated witnesses give their best evidence in court.

The force would improve the quality of victim contact with increased supervision and oversight. Officers should record details of victim contact on the Cyclops case management system, but this rarely happens.

We found no evidence that the Royal Gibraltar Police monitors the quality of service it provides to victims. In other police forces, regular victim surveys and more comprehensive victim contact provide an overall assessment of victim care.

New recommendation 3

By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should adopt the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime and conduct victim surveys.

Judgment

Supervisory oversight of investigations is still an area of improvement for the Royal Gibraltar Police.

The force should improve supervisory oversight of investigations and case files to make sure victims receive appropriate care. Its staff need ongoing training; time to properly complete files; and clearer and more efficient policies and procedures, including a local version of the victims' code.

Area for improvement 4

By July 2016, the commissioner should define in policy and procedures how vulnerable and repeat victims will be identified, how risks to them will be assessed and how appropriate support will be provided. Operation of the policy and procedures should begin as soon as possible thereafter.

Background

Our 2016 inspection examined how the Royal Gibraltar Police dealt with vulnerable and repeat victims. The way it identifies, assesses and supports them was an area for improvement.

There wasn't specific training for officers or support staff to identify vulnerable victims, or a clear arrangement for identifying vulnerable or repeat victims. During our case file review, we didn't find evidence that the vulnerability of victims was considered consistently by officers.

Some of the assault and sex offence cases we reviewed were related to domestic abuse. Knowing who is a repeat and/or vulnerable victim is important as it influences the investigation and the type of victim support that the force and partner agencies need to give. It can also help prevent future victimisation.

Our findings in 2019: Identification and assessment

The Royal Gibraltar Police doesn't have its own definition of vulnerability. Forces in England, Wales and British Crown Dependencies use several different definitions. Many adopt the College of Policing's definition:

> A person is vulnerable if, as a result of their situation or circumstances, they are unable to take care of or protect themselves or others from harm or exploitation.

Although many officers knew of the range of factors that could cause a person to be vulnerable, the force should adopt this definition of vulnerability or create its own. Its definition should form the basis of a strategy to enable all force staff to more easily identify and respond to vulnerable people.

The force introduced THRIVE, a formal risk assessment process, in the control room in 2019. THRIVE, which stands for Threat, Harm, Risk, Investigation Opportunity, Vulnerability and opportunity to Engage, is commonly used in police forces across England and Wales. It helps make sure the police response is proportionate to the risk in every case. It considers whether the victim is vulnerable and whether there are realistic opportunities to investigate a crime or engage with the community.

Officers we spoke with appeared to use THRIVE appropriately to prioritise calls for a more immediate response where necessary. However, the force lacks comprehensive processes to routinely risk assess all potentially vulnerable victims at initial response.

The force has adopted the DASH risk assessment form that frontline officers in the UK use to help identify high risk cases of domestic abuse, stalking, harassment and so-called honour-based violence. But officers are not required to conduct similar risk assessments when they attend other incidents. So officers aren't identifying all the vulnerabilities of the victims, witnesses, and suspects they encounter. As a result, these people are unlikely to receive the appropriate response, whether it be referral for multi-agency intervention or other safeguarding measures.

Forces in England and Wales follow processes to try and ensure they identify and assess such vulnerabilities at an early stage to maximise early intervention opportunities and help prevent victimisation. For example, the Metropolitan Police Service expects its staff to conduct a vulnerability assessment when attending incidents. Officers measure vulnerability across five areas and the assessment suggests action(s) if the score meets certain thresholds.

The Royal Gibraltar Police records the number of repeat victims and compares it year on year. But operational information for officers isn't consistent. For example, the command aided despatch ICT doesn't flag or highlight if a caller is a repeat or vulnerable victim. In addition, the system doesn't allow searches against names and addresses to establish if a repeat or vulnerable victim is involved.

New recommendation 4

By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should develop a corporate definition of vulnerability and develop processes to make sure officers identify any vulnerabilities of the victims, witnesses, and suspects they encounter, and make appropriate interventions.

Immediate safeguarding

Officers understand their safeguarding responsibilities to victims of domestic abuse. They regularly take positive action when attending domestic abuse incidents, to help and protect victims and any other vulnerable people present. This is encouraging. Our crime file review showed that officers routinely safeguard domestic abuse victims by arresting and removing offenders when they have the opportunity. The public protection unit (PPU) reviews all immediate safeguarding actions and agrees any further actions needed. All PPU officers are trained in Achieving Best Evidence (ABE).[1]

The force's response to reports of children absent from care homes wasn't as good, although it has a clear and accessible policy on recording such cases.

A new report should be raised every time a child goes missing. Some children absent themselves repeatedly. For example, we found many more than the 14 instances recorded since January 2019. This was because the repeat instances were being added as notes to the initial report of the child going missing, rather than prompting new reports.

We spoke to officers who knew who the children were and largely relied on them returning to their care homes voluntarily. But we found at least one case where a child had crossed the border to deal drugs.

The force should supervise this problem much more closely as the risk of becoming involved in criminality is high for such vulnerable children. And the risk of becoming a victim of sexual exploitation is even higher.

The Royal Gibraltar Police uses body-worn video cameras to record injuries to victims and the behaviour of perpetrators, when appropriate. The force has a policy that says when officers should use body-worn video. But not all of them understood it. We were also told that much of the body-worn video equipment was unusable.

Domestic violence prevention orders and notices

Since 2010, police officers in England and Wales have had additional powers to protect victims of domestic abuse.

[1] The visually recorded statement of young victims and witnesses with the police is usually described as the ABE DVD. It is usually played as their evidence-in-chief at trial. Tier 2 is a level of interview expertise that means that an officer is competent to conduct interviews in serious and complex cases (PIP level 2).

DVPOs and DVPNs give similar powers to emergency banning orders, which are used in many European jurisdictions and recommended by the Council of Europe. But there is no equivalent in Gibraltar. This means the Royal Gibraltar Police and the courts are unable to give victims of domestic violence in Gibraltar the level of protection given to victims of domestic violence elsewhere.[2]

New recommendation 5

By 1 November 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should evaluate all reported domestic violence incidents in Gibraltar. Based on this data, the most appropriate agency should establish whether DVPOs and DVPNs would have provided valuable additional protection for victims. If the evaluation shows they would have done so, the Government of Gibraltar should consider pursuing changes to legislation to enable their introduction as soon as possible thereafter.

Working in partnership

The Royal Gibraltar Police works well with several partner organisations to protect vulnerable people. The partner organisations told us that the force does its best to safeguard vulnerable people through partnership work. We found evidence that multi-agency risk assessment conferences (MARACs) were well established to manage high-risk domestic abuse offenders.

We appreciate that other partnership functions commonly found in England and Wales such as multi-agency safeguarding hubs (MASHs), sexual assault referral clinics (SARCs)[3] and independent domestic violence advisors (IDVAs)[4] aren't yet established in Gibraltar. But there is a foundation for the force and its partner organisations to build on as their work together increases.

There were two notable absences in the multi-agency arrangements:

1. There is no youth offending team (YOT) with trained youth case managers to identify a child's vulnerabilities and needs: for example, mental health, victimisation, and speech and language therapy. This limits opportunities for the force to offer out-of-court disposals to divert young people from offending.
2. There is no victim support scheme. So police officers are responsible for victim support from the initial report through to the court case, which is not a sustainable or efficient use of their time (see area for improvement 3, above). A witness care or victim support service would improve victim satisfaction and free officers from this commitment.

[3] SARCs provide victims of sexual offences with a range of services, including conducting forensics examinations and retaining this evidence.

[4] IDVAs handle the safety of domestic abuse victims at risk of harm from partners and family. They regularly review the risk assessments that officers attending medium and high-risk domestic abuse incidents have made. They refer appropriate cases to the MARAC.

Judgment

The way the Royal Gibraltar Police identifies, risk-assesses and supports repeat and vulnerable victims is still an area for improvement. While some progress has been made, much more should be done.

Area for improvement 5

By October 2016, the commissioner should agree with the Gibraltar Police Authority a policy and procedure to prioritise – and in so doing, match – resources to demand, particularly for response teams.

Background

Our 2016 inspection examined demand management. We found the force wanted to give the best service possible yet tried to meet its daily demands without prioritising. We concluded that this was an area for improvement.

The force didn't prioritise its response to daily demand based on an assessment of threat and risk of harm to individuals. This meant that police attended nearly every call, mainly in the order they were received. We also found that a significant proportion of work that the force undertook was not a policing matter.

Officers gave us examples of the non-crime calls they had been told to attend. These included dissatisfaction in the way a spill on a communal floor of a block of apartments had been mopped; response to personal panic alarms; reporting leaking pipes; lost keys; and late meals.

In addition, we were told there were many calls about parking and tobacco smuggling that were suitable for others to deal with, such as traffic enforcement and customs officers. The inspection team confirmed this with observation and audit work in the force control room.

Daily demand was stretching capacity, particularly in the force's response teams. Senior officers had done some work to identify police responsibilities that could be dealt with by other agencies, such as unlawful feeding of the Barbary macaques and illegal fishing. In addition, we found that risk assessments were being used to reduce the policing commitment to some public events, beach patrols and minor traffic collisions.

We advised that prioritising demand on a more formal basis, being clear with the public and with officers about the types of calls that must be dealt with first (and those calls that would better be dealt with by other public bodies) would help the force better manage and maybe even reduce demand.

Our findings in 2019

We were encouraged to see that the Royal Gibraltar Police had taken steps to better match resources to demand and prioritise how it responds to the public. The force has made progress by trying to make sure that incidents are assessed fully and attended to in order of priority. But it should do more to systematically apply these principles and make best use of its resources.

Assessing risk

THRIVE has given the force a procedure for prioritising the response team's response to demand. It is a good step forward that helps call takers more accurately assess calls for service. It also makes sure each caller either receives the right level and speed of police response or is referred to another agency when a police officer isn't needed.

We found most calls were appropriately graded and responded to in order of priority. There were far fewer examples of the police attending non-crime and very minor incidents than in 2016.

Another benefit of a systematic risk assessment such as THRIVE is that it gives the police an opportunity to record important factors such as vulnerability and repeat victimisation. It also gives a fuller picture if future incidents involve the same victims or offenders. This is important because vulnerability and repeat victimisation present increased risk and need a higher priority response.

It was disappointing that the procedures for recording THRIVE assessments weren't consistently applied in the control room. Staff didn't always record their reasons for grading calls, which means the force can't assure itself that calls are being properly assessed and appropriately dealt with.

Additionally, the force can't be confident that every call for service is being recorded on the system, which means it may not have a full picture of all the demands on its time.

Working with others

Police resources can be significantly enhanced by working with other agencies, both within Government and other law enforcement bodies. Unlike in England and Wales, there is no statutory duty for law enforcement bodies to work together in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar.

The Royal Gibraltar Police has nevertheless established collaborative working arrangements to provide joined-up services and add resilience to its capabilities. We found constructive working arrangements with a range of partner agencies including the Spanish national police, Guardia Civil, the National Crime Agency and the Gibraltar Defence Police, as well as government bodies including the Care Agency, Health Board and the Gibraltar sports and leisure authority.

However, a sizeable portion of police officer resources were still being used to support work that could be done by others. For example:

- routinely directing traffic at the border;
- taking calls from the public in the control room;
- marine call-outs for other agencies with marine capabilities;
- guarding remand prisoners at court on behalf of the prison service, in certain circumstances; and
- escorting vehicles with abnormal loads.

The Royal Gibraltar Police should examine the potential for allowing civilian staff to undertake some posts or handing some responsibilities to other government bodies.

Managing expectations

The public has high expectations of the Royal Gibraltar Police. There is a culture in Gibraltar where police attend incidents that forces in England and Wales would not. But the force has started to take difficult decisions about how it responds to calls for service, and which calls it can no longer allocate resources to. For example, it won't send a police officer to attend a minor traffic collision where there are no injuries. And it is exploring the use of fixed penalty notices (rather than court proceedings) for minor offences.

The force has some unique demands. One example is managing traffic queues at the frontier with Spain. Officers are often deployed to the frontier after a full day's work, which affects officer wellbeing and the overtime budget. As this traffic management role doesn't need warranted officers, the commissioner has tried negotiating with the Government of Gibraltar and partner agencies to find a more appropriate agency to take it on.

The Royal Gibraltar Police should do further work on demand management, supported by the Government of Gibraltar, HM Governor and the GPA.

Judgment

THRIVE has given the force a procedure to prioritise response team resources. But the force should do more to manage demand. This includes better assessment of risk, greater partnership working and continually managing public expectations.

Area for improvement 6

> By October 2016, the commissioner should establish an effective way to assess how busy the force is likely to be, by using a range of tools to understand daily calls for service and patterns in their demand. This should include: analysing calls for service and recorded crime figures; identifying peak or seasonal demand; and understanding factors affecting demand such as major events. Once this information is available, judgments should be made about optimum shift patterns and the number of officers needed for those shift patterns.

Background

Our 2016 inspection examined the force's shift system. We concluded that it was an area for improvement as it wasn't based on an assessment of daily demand.

We found that the number of response officers available for deployment (to deal with daily demand) wasn't based on an assessment of the likely volume and types of incident during a particular period. Instead, the response team shift system provided the same number of officers across a 24-hour period, irrespective of demand.

Senior officers were already aware of these issues as they had commissioned an external review of the response team shift system in 2014. This review proposed several shift patterns, and concluded that there were insufficient officers on response teams to cope with the high level of demand.

Our findings in 2019: Understanding current demand

Shortcomings in the force's ICT systems limit its ability to comprehensively understand demand (that is, all demand from all sources).

In 2016, the force analysed demand through a labour-intensive, manual exercise designed to give it a picture of the typical demands facing the police. This gave it evidence for making a business case to the Government for additional resources. The exercise found an additional 50 police officers were needed to meet demand at that time and identified what roles they should fulfil.

The force has made limited efforts to monitor and review demand, and map hotspots. It periodically measures:

- the volume of calls from the public;
- crimes; and
- time spent on policing events.

However, it hasn't updated its 2016 analysis and doesn't have a comprehensive understanding of all its demands, which include:

- specialist investigations;
- safeguarding;
- hidden and under-reported crimes;
- internal demand;
- bureaucracy; and
- demands that others should deal with.

The force has considered engaging experts to help capture and analyse data and map demand more precisely. Unfortunately, this is currently cost prohibitive. A recent review of the force's resource management unit by an independent consultancy praised its efforts in forward planning and demand management.

Matching resource to demand

The force has made progress in matching resource to the demand it is aware of. It changed officers' shift patterns to achieve more capacity at peak times and give them a more manageable working arrangement while providing a sustainable 24/7 police response capability.

The new shift pattern has succeeded in making more officers available to respond when demand is greatest. But that has been done at a cost to the neighbourhood policing function, which has been reduced from 20 to two police officers serving an area. This enables the response team to better meet demand. But it also means some tasks formerly done by neighbourhood officers – for example, victim contact and safeguarding – have become the responsibility of response officers. And some proactive neighbourhood functions aren't being carried out at all.

It is relatively straightforward to measure the benefits of having greater capacity to respond to incidents. But it is less easy to evaluate the effect of losing proactive neighbourhood policing capability on the force's ability to:

- prevent crime and anti-social behaviour;
- engage with local communities; and
- gather local intelligence and problem solve.

Officers are still stretched and carrying heavy workloads, despite the force's new shift system and improved approach to prioritisation. Some supervisory officers struggle to respond effectively to or manage demand. We found that:

- some non-police calls were still being attended, even with THRIVE to help prioritise;
- officers' deployments lacked enough flexibility to allow them to manage their time and workload and investigate crime; this is because they are responding to so many calls that they don't have time to investigate crime; and
- case files were returned from Crown Counsel with pending enquiries or omissions that should have been spotted on first submission.

The force was using a high level of overtime – more than an extra 10 percent of salaries – to fill gaps in capacity. We found that officers regularly work overtime at the end of their shift to in excess of 12-hour days. This isn't restricted to response staff.

Officers and supervisors from every department are taken away from their routine work to cover additional duties. For example, football match policing, dealing with traffic queues at the border, and Servator patrols.[5] This is because of the small size of the force. The strain is felt throughout and important work, such as preventing and detecting crime, is suffering.

Judgment

The Royal Gibraltar Police's understanding of the full range of its demand is still an area for improvement.

The force has evaluated when it receives most calls for service and amended shift patterns and officer numbers accordingly. But until it has a complete understanding of the full range of demands it faces, it can't assure itself that it has the right staff with the right skills in the right place to meet those demands.

Area for improvement 7

By October 2016, the commissioner should compile a comprehensive prediction of future demand. This should be used to define the capacity and capability the force will need, which will enable the creation of plans for funding, skills, structure, estates, ICT and other equipment.

[5] Project Servator patrols are unpredictable, highly visible police deployments, designed to disrupt a range of criminal activity, including terrorism.

Background

In 2016, we inspected how the Royal Gibraltar Police maps future demand for its services. We considered it to be an area for improvement.

The force's strategic threat and risk assessment indicated likely trends in serious and organised crime (SOC). It referenced emerging crime types such as cyber crime and child sexual exploitation, as well as likely demographic changes. It provided a useful insight but not a comprehensive understanding of likely future demand.

Consequently, we didn't see a plan to respond to future demand in terms of money, recruitment and structures, apart from a proposal for a new police headquarters. We also found that future training plans were based on filling skill gaps brought about by retirements over a five-year period, rather than on the capabilities and capacity the force would need in future.

Our findings in 2019: Future growth

The force recently secured funding to increase police officer numbers to cope with growing demand. It received approval to recruit 25 new police officers and to reassign the duties conducted by 25 police officers to civilian members of staff. Posts which have been civilianised include call handlers and despatchers in the control room, and detention officers. Although the force's establishment of police officers is only set to grow by 25, it has effectively increased its strength by 50 posts, as the police officers from the civilianised posts will be released into the pool for reallocation to frontline policing duties.

The increase in police officer numbers gives the force a significant opportunity to change the way it polices Gibraltar, better address demand and fulfil its priorities.

It is vital that the force manages and leads this change effectively. It will be critical for the force to refresh its understanding of demand, as it last conducted a strategic assessment of the threats and risks facing its communities in 2016.

The force hasn't analysed likely future demand, or how it will shape the skills and capabilities it needs in its workforce. As it doesn't have a comprehensive understanding of its current workforce skills, it isn't able to plan to fill any future gaps.

The force's training plans are limited by the budget available. They are based on an annual assessment of operational and tactical skills needs. There are no plans to develop leadership and management skills. Officers do not have formal or regular performance and development assessments. Without them, the Royal Gibraltar Police won't be able to understand the skills it has, and which staff need training for the future.

Understanding skills and training requirements is of critical importance as the force is about to recruit and train its largest increase in police officer numbers in decades. It should design simple, effective processes to help structure and measure its training and training needs. It should also develop overarching plans to give leadership and direction at this critical period of change so that senior leaders and the GPA can oversee and manage the change effectively.

ICT infrastructure and support

ICT problems lessen the force's ability to effectively meet demand. Software runs slowly, and access to servers and the internet is also slow and unstable.

The force relies on centralised government ICT staff to provide support when requested. It is now in the third year of a phased implementation of a new ICT system, which has been slower than anticipated and hasn't yet achieved the expected benefits.

The Royal Gibraltar Police has no ICT strategy to guide future planning and investment. Decisions on IT procurement tend to be ad-hoc and based on the funding available in the coming year, rather than part of a wider strategy to future-proof policing. For example, many body-worn video cameras were purchased because video evidence can be crucial in bringing offenders to justice. However, a large number are now broken because insufficient thought was given to how they would be used or maintained.

Judgment

The Royal Gibraltar Police's understanding of future demand is still an area for improvement.

The force has yet to compile a comprehensive prediction of future demand (part of the 2016 area for improvement). It should update its strategic threat and risk assessment to more effectively plan for the skills, structures and ICT it will need in future.

Area for improvement 8

> By July 2016, the Minister for Finance should set out the funding formula, including the associated criteria, thresholds and conditions that need to be met for resources needed to police Gibraltar.

Background

Our 2016 inspection examined the force's funding arrangements.

We found that the GPA determines, in consultation with the commissioner of police, the number and rank structure of personnel employed by the force. The Authority then submits an annual budget for the force to the Minister for public finance.

The Government gives the commissioner of police a budget for all aspects of policing. But this was not a fully devolved budget in 2016. There was no flexibility in how the force could use the funds; for example to improve its service or move money from one police function to another to better manage demand.

The force relied on a significant overtime budget to manage peaks of demand and fill gaps when officers were on leave, sick or training. We believed this could be reduced if the force were better able to match resource to demand, or the funds could be converted to police officer posts if demand outstripped available resource.

There were limited opportunities for the force to generate income from policing activity. For example, when commercial enterprises needed policing support, such as escorting cranes, managing queues at music festivals or crowd control at football matches, any income generated from policing was paid to the Government. In addition, because legislation concerning the proceeds of crime was not (at the time of our inspection) enacted, the force was unable to benefit from its work in seizing criminal assets.

We concluded that in an environment where the economy was growing rapidly and it could reasonably be expected that demand for policing would grow, the Royal Gibraltar Police needed guidance that set out the funding formula (including the associated criteria, thresholds and conditions) for the resources it needed.

Our findings in 2019: Funding

The Government sets the budget annually after a bidding process. Annual allocations tend to be based on the previous years' budget and there are limited freedoms and flexibilities to manage the budget in-year as the Government does the financial planning and budget monitoring.

The GPA has little influence over the funding available but it retains responsibility for policing. And the commissioner of police has little ability to influence how resources are allocated yet is accountable for managing the budget. The commissioner doesn't have a senior financial manager on his leadership team.

As a result, the Royal Gibraltar Police can only conduct short-term financial planning as it doesn't know what resources may be available in future. There is no medium-term financial planning that might enable a more strategic approach to ensure the force can adapt to changing demand and be fit for purpose.

This situation makes it very difficult for the GPA and the force to develop longer term change plans and align financial plans with other key strategies, such as workforce and ICT. It also means that capital investment in infrastructure is hampered. This includes the long overdue plans to build a fit-for-purpose police station.

There is no incentive for the force to reduce spending or use its resources more efficiently. The police budget is monitored, and the Government routinely considers its financial reports. But any overspends are covered by central government funds at the end of each year and any underspent budgets are returned to central funds.

Judgment

The Minister for Finance hasn't set out a funding formula. This limits the Royal Gibraltar Police's ability to conduct the type of financial planning we would expect from English and Welsh forces.

How the Royal Gibraltar Police promotes the right ethics, values and culture

Research by the College of Policing shows the best way to make sure that police workforces behave ethically and lawfully is to promote the right behaviour to officers and staff. It recommends taking a preventative approach to misconduct and corruption, rather than focusing on apprehending and disciplining those responsible.

Police leaders need to promote ethical principles and behaviour and act as role models, in line with the Code of Ethics.[6] Officers and staff should feel confident about applying these principles to their decision making.

Code of Ethics

In 2019, the Royal Gibraltar Police replaced its code and values document with a new policy. Its code of ethics policy is a verbatim copy of the College of Policing Code of Ethics that includes a statement that the code has been adopted as best practice.

The force hasn't adopted large sections of the Code of Ethics. It hasn't reviewed and updated its procedures and policies to reflect the new policy. For example, it isn't integrated into the appraisal system, recruitment or promotion processes. We found force policies that contradict it.[7] And the senior leadership team told us that some aspects of it cannot be implemented in Gibraltar despite it now being enshrined in force policy.

New recommendation 6

By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should amend the Royal Gibraltar Police's code of ethics policy to reflect the force's operational environment and make sure that the revised policy is incorporated into other policies and processes.

[6] This code is used by forces across England and Wales to promote the highest standards of behaviour amongst its police officers and police staff. It is a benchmark for what is expected of those who work in the police service. It compliments other policies, processes and legislation relating to standards and discipline of police officers and staff. The ethos of the Code of Ethics is to encourage positive behaviours so that police officers and staff do not find themselves subject to poor performance or disciplinary proceedings.

Promoting the Code of Ethics

The force's senior leadership team promoted the old code and values, which were incorporated into a range of training courses and referenced in corporate policies and procedures, before creating the new code of ethics policy.

The senior leadership team had started to promote the new policy at the time of our inspection:

- the assistant commissioner had started a series of presentations that the force planned all officers would have attended by the end of Autumn 2019;
- posters summarising the code were displayed across the force's headquarters;
- force orders were being used to remind officers of their responsibility to comply with the Code of Ethics; and
- the force's officer promotion process had been redesigned to follow the College of Policing's competencies and values framework, which is based on the code.

However, the new code wasn't yet fully integrated across the force. Many officers knew about it but didn't understand how to apply it to their work. They felt they would benefit from a clearer explanation how to link police practice with accepted behaviour.

Staff working for Royal Gibraltar Police who are not police officers are civil servants, employed by the Government rather than the force. They told us they didn't see the relevance of the Code of Ethics and that it hadn't been promoted to them. Senior force leaders told us that, in principle, the code applies to these staff members but that, in practice, it can't discipline them and has no way of making them comply.

This is a misunderstanding. The College of Policing's Code of Ethics, and therefore the force's own new policy, states:

> The Code of Ethics (…) applies to every individual who works in policing, whether a warranted officer, member of police staff, volunteer or someone contracted to work in a police force.

The force should consider establishing a network of ethics champions, representing officers and staff across all departments, who would meet to share learning. This has worked well in the UK. It should also consider making the Code of Ethics an agenda item in senior management meetings and form a committee focused exclusively on ethics and equality.

New area for improvement 2

The Royal Gibraltar Police workforce's understanding of the Code of Ethics is an area for improvement. Its senior management team should make sure that the code of ethics policy is embedded across the entire workforce.

New area for improvement 3

Embedding the Code of Ethics in the Royal Gibraltar Police's activity is an area for improvement. The force's senior leadership team should consider establishing a network of ethics champions, representing officers and staff across departments, who would meet to share learning. Additionally, the force should consider having the Code of Ethics as an agenda item in senior management meetings and form a committee that focuses exclusively on ethics and equality.

Abuse of position for a sexual purpose

In 2012, the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) published The abuse of police powers to perpetrate sexual violence. This report states that "the abuse of police powers for purposes of sexual exploitation, or even violence, is something that fundamentally betrays the trust that communities and individuals place in the police".

The College of Policing's Code of Ethics, which has been adopted by the Royal Gibraltar Police, states that policing professionals must "not establish or pursue an improper sexual or emotional relationship with a person with whom [they] come into contact in the course of [their] work who may be vulnerable to an abuse of trust or power".

The force hasn't recognised the potential for its employees to abuse their position in this way. Unlike most forces across the UK, the Royal Gibraltar Police hasn't briefed or trained its workforce to raise awareness of the issue.

When we explained to officers and staff what abuse of position for a sexual purpose meant, they understood that such behaviour would be unethical. However, the force hadn't told them the signs to look for that could:

- affect their ability to recognise matters of concern that should be reported; or
- understand the boundaries for their own behaviour.

New area for improvement 4

The Royal Gibraltar Police workforce's understanding of abuse of position for a sexual purpose is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should provide more guidance to its workforce to increase understanding of the risks posed by abuse of position for a sexual purpose.

Business interests and reportable associations

The code of ethics policy states that: "people working (…) can have business interests as long as those interests are authorised and there is no conflict with an individual's police work and responsibilities".[8]

[8] Code of Ethics Policy, Royal Gibraltar Police, 2019, page 10. Unpublished.

It is common practice to record, monitor and review business interests in police forces across England and Wales. This isn't routine practice in the Royal Gibraltar Police. We think it should be and see this as an area for improvement.

The code of ethics policy also states that: "Membership of groups or societies, or associations with groups or individuals, mustn't create an actual or apparent conflict of interest with police work and responsibilities."[9]

Policies in forces across England and Wales require officers and staff to submit details of associations – often referred to as notifiable associations – that fall within certain criteria. For example, if an officer became aware that a relative was in a relationship with a known criminal, they would be expected to inform the force. Any potential risks would then be considered and managed accordingly.

Some senior managers and officers told us it would be impractical to tell officers and staff to notify the force and register their notifiable associations. It was said that Gibraltar's small and close-knit population meant that everyone knows everyone else. So attempting to apply such a policy would be unworkable, bureaucratic and ineffective.

We were told that this operational environment mitigates the threat of corruption, as any corrupt activity would quickly be reported by the public. We have strong reservations about this analysis.

Corruption takes many forms and can include unconscious bias towards or against others. Gibraltar's small size creates an environment where the potential for corruption can exist, particularly in a subconscious way. We acknowledge that many people know each other in a personal as well as professional context.

The first step in mitigating the potential for corruption and protecting officers and staff from allegations of corruption is to have a clear and well applied policy on reporting notifiable associations. Officers in UK forces are required to highlight these associations. By doing so, they demonstrate ethics and integrity and it allows the force to consider the level of risk and what, if any, mitigating action to take. Officers in Gibraltar are not required to do this. The force's current position is that individuals should recognise and assess any risk and manage it themselves. This position isn't appropriate and increases officers' personal exposure to allegations of corruption.

We are concerned that the Royal Gibraltar Police is not doing enough to counter the risk of corruption. It should do more to protect the public, its organisation and staff from corruption and allegations of corruption.

New area for improvement 5

The Royal Gibraltar Police's management of business interests and notifiable associations is an area for improvement. The force's senior leadership team should produce business interests and notifiable associations policies that mandate recording of such issues and regular review of the registers on which they are recorded.

Role models

The force's senior leaders have signed up to a command team leadership contract, which sets the principles they will adhere to. These include:

- being consultative, trustworthy, accessible and cohesive; and
- embodying the Code of Ethics.

Their signed contract is prominently displayed in the police station. It is a positive step to promoting ethical behaviours. We encourage the Royal Gibraltar Police to extend the contract to sergeants and inspectors.

We were told by some, less senior staff that the phrase "firm leadership" is occasionally used to describe management behaviours that, in a small number of cases, may have amounted to bullying.

We examined the last two staff surveys conducted by the Gibraltar Police Federation. A perception exists among an apparently large number of officers that some senior officers sometimes behave in an unacceptable manner when dealing with their staff. Whether true or not, this perception is a cause for concern.

We understand that the commissioner of police and the chair of the federation have met to develop a plan to deal with this. The force has established several workstreams to better understand the problem. Shortly before our inspection, an external review concluded that there wasn't systematic bullying in the force. But it did find some evidence of bullying and harassment by a minority of managers, supervisors and peers that was not being reported and consequently not addressed. It made recommendations for the commissioner to:

- acknowledge that the force takes the federation's concerns about bullying seriously;
- improve processes to prevent bullying;
- implement an effective grievance procedure; and
- work more closely with the Gibraltar Police Federation to investigate claims of bullying.

HM Governor and the GPA should support the commissioner and the force in resolving this problem to ensure that any unacceptable behaviour is dealt with.

New recommendation 7

With immediate effect, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should produce an anti-bullying statement and improve the force's processes to prevent bullying.

Leadership style and culture

The daily management meeting considers any lessons to be learnt from the previous 24 hours. We found encouraging evidence of lessons learnt following operational incidents when the force changed procedures and adopted new ways of working.

However, many junior officers perceived that some senior officers were sometimes too ready to apportion blame when something goes wrong. We were unable to determine whether, or to what extent, there is a 'blame culture' within the force. However, staff perceptions are important. We are pleased that the force's leadership recognises this and has invited the Police Federation to raise any instances of the perceived blame culture with it.

We also saw elements of a culture where change happens slowly, sometimes with resistance. Staff said, "We've no time to change" and, "We've always done it this way." And, "We tried that and failed, so no point repeating." They also described an environment where they were so busy with their duties that they were too busy to change.

That said, on the whole we found a workforce that was professional, committed and enthusiastic about their work and the force they worked in.

New area for improvement 6

The leadership development provided to the Royal Gibraltar Police workforce is an area for improvement. Operational exchange at inspector and chief inspector rank should be encouraged with British police forces for up to six months. This will allow managers to experience different management styles in other forces, as well as bring skilled managers into the force from England and Wales.

Gifts and hospitality

The Royal Gibraltar Police has a system for monitoring gifts and hospitality. The policy requires officers and staff to record all gifts and hospitality in a central register. But we found that the register wasn't being used routinely.

New area for improvement 7

The Royal Gibraltar Police's management of gifts and hospitality is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should make sure that its gifts and hospitality registers are monitored regularly to make sure staff are complying with force policy.

How the Royal Gibraltar Police makes sure its officers behave ethically and lawfully

Vetting

The integrity and ethical standards of a police force are underpinned by its ability to recruit, retain and promote a workforce with the right values and behaviours. This starts with vetting policies and practices.

In England and Wales, the approach to vetting is governed by the College of Policing's APP on vetting.

The Royal Gibraltar Police doesn't have a consistent vetting process. We were told that vetting happens at initial entry for police officers but was sometimes disjointed because it was conducted by several units. We were also told that additional vetting takes place for some specialist posts but was not systematic.

Regardless of the special circumstances in Gibraltar, the force must be able to properly vet applicants. It must also be able to vet officers and staff seeking promotion or moving post, where it is necessary to do so.

Vetting is highlighted as a concern on the force's risk register. It has put controls in place to mitigate the risks of it not being done or not being done properly. These controls include:

- raising awareness;
- encouraging officers to report issues that might affect vetting; and
- developing better policy and procedures.

New recommendation 8

By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should review the force's vetting procedures. It should consider adopting the College of Policing's Authorised Professional Practice on vetting.

Tackling misconduct and corruption

The issue of corruption, even at a low or subconscious level, didn't appear to be a concern for the force. This was despite an environment that might permit or even promote corruption.

Gibraltar's small population and recruitment pool, the presence of transnational organised crime, and the links and associations between the population and those serving in the force creates the potential for infiltration, corruption, blurring of ethical lines and inappropriate interventions by senior figures in the community.

The force doesn't fully understand its exposure to the risk of corruption. Its professional standards unit lacks the resource and expertise needed to develop such an understanding or monitor and mitigate the threat.

New area for improvement 8

The Royal Gibraltar Police's understanding of the corruption risks it faces is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should compile a comprehensive, local, counter-corruption threat assessment and control strategy to evaluate and manage the full range of risks to the integrity of its organisation.

The Royal Gibraltar Police was unable to proactively identify individuals who are corrupt or susceptible to corruption. It lacks processes (commonplace in England and Wales) to collect intelligence, analyse workforce data and disciplinary records or carry out integrity testing. This represents a risk to the force.

The force was also unable to effectively audit police systems. IT passwords are frequently shared among employees, thus increasing the risk of computer misuse. In the absence of a system to monitor keystrokes, the force should at least consider:

- periodically auditing the Cyclops system; and
- outlining what is and isn't acceptable use of police systems.

The force's professional standards unit, particularly its counter-corruption capability, should be reviewed to make sure there are enough resources to promote ethical standards; challenge poor behaviours; and monitor and target corruption. This review should set clear expectations for governance and leadership. The force may benefit from external expertise and could identify good practice from forces in England and Wales.

The Royal Gibraltar Police isn't unique among the British Overseas Territories or Crown Dependencies in lacking the capability to conduct proactive counter-corruption operations. Such forces and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office may wish to consider creating a joint or remote capability to fill this gap. In the interim, the force should develop better vetting, business interests and notifiable associations policies. Along with effective use of ICT auditing, these can mitigate some of the risks from corruption.

New recommendation 9

By 1 November 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should determine the best model for providing a counter-corruption capability to proactively identify and pursue employees who are corrupt or susceptible to corruption.

Reporting mechanisms

Confidential reporting mechanisms are common in UK police forces. They give the workforce a way to anonymously report issues of concern, whether related to corruption, poor behaviour, bullying or abuse of power for sexual gain. Such mechanisms also give other forces' professional standards units a useful intelligence-gathering opportunity.

The Royal Gibraltar Police lacks such mechanisms. It should develop a method for staff to anonymously and confidentially report concerns about integrity, by telephone or email or both. There are electronic systems available that protect the identity of an individual making a report.

To avoid scepticism and distrust about the anonymity of reporting mechanisms or systems, it is important to communicate what they are for, how they work and what makes them secure. It may also be beneficial if the reporting system were managed independently. The force may wish to collaborate with a police force(s) in England and Wales, British Overseas Territories or Crown Dependencies if it is not feasible for it to introduce its own system.

New recommendation 10

By 1 November 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should develop a method of anonymously and confidentially reporting integrity issues, either by telephone or email or both. To avoid scepticism and distrust about the anonymity of reporting systems, it would be beneficial if this facility were managed independently.

To report and prevent corruption, staff need to be able to identify risks and signs of corruption. The Royal Gibraltar Police workforce lacked a thorough understanding of these issues.

New area for improvement 9

The Royal Gibraltar Police workforce's understanding of corruption is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should provide a briefing about corruption risks and signs of corruption to the workforce, based on the College of Policing's APP on counter corruption.

Annex A: New areas for improvement

1. The lack of resilience for the Royal Gibraltar Police crime desk manager position is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should appoint a deputy crime desk manager to conduct audits and checks during long-term abstractions.
2. The Royal Gibraltar Police workforce's understanding of the Code of Ethics is an area for improvement. Its senior management team should make sure that the code of ethics policy is embedded across the entire workforce.
3. Embedding the Code of Ethics in the Royal Gibraltar Police's activity is an area for improvement. The force's senior leadership team should consider establishing a network of ethics champions, representing officers and staff across departments, who would meet to share learning. Additionally, the force should consider having the Code of Ethics as an agenda item in senior management meetings and form a committee that focuses exclusively on ethics and equality.
4. Abuse of position for a sexual purpose is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should provide more guidance to its workforce to increase understanding of the risks posed by abuse of position for a sexual purpose.
5. The Royal Gibraltar Police's management of business interests and notifiable associations is an area for improvement. The force's senior leadership team should produce business interests and notifiable associations policies that mandate recording of such issues and regular review of the registers on which they are recorded.
6. The leadership training provided to the Royal Gibraltar Police workforce is an area for improvement. Operational exchange at inspector and chief inspector rank should be encouraged with British police forces for up to six months. This will allow managers to experience different management styles in other forces, as well as bring skilled managers into the force from England and Wales.
7. The Royal Gibraltar Police's management of gifts and hospitality is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should make sure that its gifts and hospitality registers are monitored regularly to make sure that staff are complying with force policy.
8. The Royal Gibraltar Police's understanding of the corruption risks it faces is an area for improvement. 9. The Royal Gibraltar Police workforce's understanding of corruption is an area for improvement. The Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should provide a briefing about corruption risks and signs of corruption to the workforce, based on the College of Policing's APP on counter corruption.

Annex B: New recommendations

1. With immediate effect, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should make sure that all calls for service are recorded on the force's Computer Aided Dispatch system.
2. By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should set clear expectations in policy for supervisors about the frequency and depth of supervision needed. In addition, supervisors should be trained where necessary. Inspectors should carry out monthly dip-sampling of investigations to provide assurance that these expectations are met.
3. By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should adopt the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime and conduct victim surveys.
4. By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should develop a corporate definition of vulnerability and develop processes to make sure officers identify any vulnerabilities of the victims, witnesses, and suspects they encounter, and make appropriate interventions.
5. By 1 November 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should evaluate all reported domestic violence incidents in Gibraltar. Based on this data, the most appropriate agency should establish whether DVPOs and DVPNs would have provided valuable additional protection for victims. If the evaluation shows they would have done so, the Government of Gibraltar should consider pursuing changes to legislation to enable their introduction as soon as possible thereafter.
6. By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should amend the Royal Gibraltar Police's code of ethics policy to reflect the force's operational environment and make sure that the revised policy is incorporated into other policies and processes.
7. With immediate effect, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should produce an anti-bullying statement and improve the force's processes to prevent bullying.
8. By 1 August 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should review the force's vetting procedures. It should consider adopting the College of Policing's Authorised Professional Practice for vetting.
9. By 1 November 2020, the Royal Gibraltar Police's senior leadership team should determine the best model for providing a counter-corruption capability to proactively identify and pursue employees who are corrupt or susceptible to corruption.

Kathy

I've just met with the Commissioner of Police who kindly gave me a briefing on the incident. The facts have yet to be determined and the investigation is ongoing, but initial headlines are as follows:

The incident happened at @ 04.00 hours though it is not yet known whether it took place in BGTW waters or just outside.

Four pax involved - three Spanish from Cueta (Moroccan descent) and one Portuguese.

Two fatalities (one instant). Two others initially hospitalised but are now in police custody. The Spanish nationals are from Ceuta, of Moroccan descent and known to the local Spanish authorities.

Given those involved are not from the area, the incident is not expected to impact on the border as a similar incident did last October.

RGP/Spanish cooperation is good though the Spanish are understandably conducting their own parallel investigation.

Given the loss of life, the RGP are actively approaching UK police authorities to conduct the enquiry. I said they could state in any request that such an approach has our support.

No action for us at this stage.

The Commissioner was grateful for my visit.

Regards

Nick

The AG and I received a further briefing from the Commissioner of Police (CoP) this morning (at my request). Headlines are as follows:

CoP started by saying he had sent two Inspectors to Algeciras to establish face to face contact wth the Guardia Civil. The GC confirmed they had opened up an investigation which they would pursue regardless of where the collision took place. This infers even they are not sure where it happened.

According to the Portuguese person arrested, the 4 pax were a "crew change" for an illegal activity (assume drugs). They were picked up at Atuna beach which is on the outskirts of La Linea.

According to the CoP, there was nothing on board the vessel save fuel.
The Spanish Nationals belonged to the Castinitas (sp?) a powerful OCG.
A "notorious" (CoP's word) Gibraltar legal company Verralls, have been engaged by those detained.
A Pathologist, Coroner and Marine Accident Investigator have all been retained. The intent was to release the bodies of the deceased for burial asap (Muslim culture).
The RGP helmsmen did not for report the start of the chase to Ops Centre as per SoPs. CoP brushed this off to an oversight due to the pressure of the moment. I was less forgiving.
The RGP officers will be interviewed tomorrow or Wednesday.
CoP confirmed that the exact location has still to be determined as were details of the chase which lasted 10 minutes.

I said it was important that before Thursday's meetings in London we had one single and agreed version of the facts. I welcomed the fact that there had been communications between the GC and RGP before and since the collision.

The AG said it was clear, with the entry at some point of the vessel into BGTW, that the law had been broken and that therefore the chase was legitimate. He said it was important we are able to present this to the Spanish as "cooperation". He stressed the need for details of the communication between the GC and RGP and especially who instigated it.

I suspect this is as much as we will get until the investigation, including the interviews of the RGP and the mining of phones and IAS, have been completed.

Nick - we are getting there on establishing exact co-ordinates of where collision took place. We are tying up some loose ends and probing further from WHSS and should be able to confirm soon. It is, highly probable it did occur out BGTW. We are getting it plotted which will provide a better understanding in terms if distance from BGTW.

Best regards

I've just had an update from the Commissioner of Police who confirmed our suspicions that not only did the collision take place in Spanish waters, so did the pursuit. The Commissioner also confirmed that SOPs/Protocols we're not followed. I refrained from saying what was on my mind (no s..t Sherlock) but this is not good news and will complicate matters. The Commissioner added that the Spanish are "not kicking off at the moment and playing it down". I think the Commissioner is worried a touch.

I said that given the imminent arrival of the Met Police Team, we can use the line to any enquiries, official or otherwise, that it would not be right to comment until the investigation has been completed. The Commissioner said he was issuing a press release, agreed with the Met, acknowledging the arrival of the team and saying just that.

The better news is that the autopsies have been completed and the bodies are being repatriated.

We should try to get 5 mins with the AG tomorrow to take his view on this.

BA has landed which has lifted my mood a bit! Not many people in the departure lounge though many who are here of Far Eastern descent are wearing masks.

I'm not sure to what degree if any the issue of Sunday's collision at sea which resulted in two Spanish deaths will come up today.

I asked the Commissioner of Police yesterday if he could, 3 days on, confirm the location of the collision, as per the meeting Michael and I had with him on Monday. He could not and restricted himself to saying more work needed to be done but "it is highly probable it was outside BGTW".

What I can add is that based on a formal request from the RGP, a team of 6 from the Met will be arriving tomorrow to conduct an independent investigation into the incident. This is a positive move.

I have to say I cant quite understand why we still don't definitively know whether the incident took place inside or outside of BGTW. The exact coordinates don't matter that this savage - it's a matter of inside or out. This leaves me worried that it was significantly outside.

As discussed, here is a bullet point record of the rushed initial debrief we had from Acting D/Supt Gary Smith on 20 March:

- His team had examined two incident logs and 25 call logs relating to the incident;
- They had been out on the water on other marine assets during the daylight and dark hours to get a feel for the operating environment;
- The Spanish (not specified) had given intelligence (not specified) on the suspected narco vessel movement to Gibraltar via WHSS – (NB he didn't say whether the Spanish had requested RGP assistance);
- His team had prepared questions for the four officers involved on: the collision, location, who authorised the operation etc. but these had not been answered on legal advice from a UK based lawyer engaged by the officers;
- His initial feeling was that there was at least a conduct/discipline matter to be answered and the next step would be to serve the officers with a formal notice of this so that they could receive police federation and legal advice/support;
- He said there were several stages to this procedure;
- Further interviews would then be conducted and statements taken;
- Given the deaths and serious injury involved there would be a local criminal investigation as well as a Spanish investigation;
- His team had not had a conversation with the Spanish at that stage as they had not yet allocated a magistrate to lead the investigation. He had offered to brief the magistrate at an appropriate time;
- All indications were that the incident had happened in Spanish waters possibly up to 3 miles out of BGTW;
- His investigation had only just begun and there would need to a be a further visit with much more to be done.

When I spoke to Gary again this morning, he said he had completed his update note (NB not an interim report, there would only be a final report) but still needed to run it by his boss. He hoped to share it with us tomorrow or immediately after the bank holiday.

Our Ref: IM169

The Hon Fabian Picardo QC
Chief Minister
No. 6 Convent Place
Gibraltar

Dear Chief Minister,

REQUIREMENT TO PROVIDE A FACTUAL REPORT THE POLICE ACT 2006, Section 15 (1)(a)

1. I refer to your letter of the 21st May 2020 informing me of the requirement to provide a factual report pursuant to S.15(1)(a) Police Act 2006 concerning the death at sea of two Spanish Nationals on the 8th March 2020.

2. I would like to point out that notwithstanding the fact that I have briefed the Hon. Attorney General on several occasions (as suggested by you from the outset), apprised the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority and consulted with the Director of Public Prosecutions, I have not been asked for further details or a factual report until now.

3. For ease of reading, I will address the concerns of the Government and the points listed in part VI (the Factual Report Required) in a chronological order as far as possible.

4. Point (iv): A full report of the facts of the incident, including details of whether the RHIB in question entered BGTW and if so where and when and how long it was in BGTW.
   a. At about 0238Hrs on the 8th March 2020 RGP Marine Section officers received a verbal report from Windmill Hill Signal Station (WHSS) concerning a suspect vessel in the vicinity of BGTW (Appendices 15, 20, 21, 22 and 74 refer). As a result of this report the Police Motor Boat (PMB) crew, deployed on motor vessel Sir John Chapple to the eastern side of Gibraltar.

   b. The RGP crew made direct contact by telephone with the Guardia Civil (GC) Central Operativa de Servicios (COS) and it was confirmed by the latter that they were also monitoring the said vessel. The RGP interceptor positioned itself within the limits of BGTW by Grid A8 (Appendices 2 and 15 refer).

c. There were numerous exchanges of mobile telephone communications between the RGP crew and GC COS which included the positioning and movements of the suspect vessel (Appendices 23 and 24 refer).

d. At about 0329Hrs a chase commenced between the Sir John Chapple and the suspect vessel. The RGP applied its blue lights (Appendices 15, 16, 17 and 74 refer). According to the coxswain (referred to as 'Officer One' in the Post Incident Procedure), the suspect vessel displayed no navigational lights and due to its length and engine capacity was a prohibited import known colloquially as a Narco Launch. The vessel was a RHIB of 14 metres in length with 4x 300 hp outboard engines. Four crew members were aboard.

e. The crewmembers of the suspect RHIB were later identified as:

- [redacted]
- [redacted]
- [redacted]
- [redacted]

f. The coxswain's intention was to identify the suspects and determine whether they were carrying an illegal cargo (Appendices 15 and 16 refer).

g. As the chase ensued, the suspect RHIB performed evasive and dangerous manoeuvres and its crewmembers threw objects at the Police vessel (Appendices 15, 16, 17, 19, 20 and 74 refer).

h. The chase ended in a collision between both vessels (which according to the marine expert, occurred at around 03:38:56, in position 36° 09.96' N 005° 12.51' W (Appendix 19 refers). These coordinates are in Spanish waters. At the relevant time this information was not available to the Command Team as the police interceptor's AIS had not been activated. This is contrary to standing orders. It was assumed that the collision was likely to have taken place outside of BGTW as the radar screen of the suspect vessel displayed coordinates indicating this, but this required technical confirmation.

j. The intelligence picture at that stage was unclear and confusing with the limited facts recounted by the PMB crew being out of sync with other facts. Such confusion is common in the initial stages of a serious investigation and for this reason Post Incident Procedures (PIP's) are initiated and officers do not provide detailed accounts until they have had time to rest and take advice.

k. Following the collision, crew members from the Sir John Chapple boarded the suspect RHIB to assess the situation and found the lifeless body of a male person, later identified as [redacted]. He had an open head wound. There was also a further crewmember, namely [redacted], who appeared seriously injured, with visible open wounds to his back/shoulder, lying on the hull. The RGP crew were not physically harmed but were in shock (Appendices 15 to 17 refer).

l. The coxswain then took the decision of removing his officers from on board the suspect vessel as he feared for their safety (Appendices 15, 25 and 26 refers).

m. A tow-line was connected to the suspect RHIB for it to be towed to land and ensure the injured received medical attention (Appendices 15 to 17 refer).

n. At 0343Hrs the RGP crew contacted WHSS and reported the incident adding that they would be returning to the Gibraltar Government Marine Section (GGMS). (Appendices 15, 20 and 74 refer). As a result of the collision the police vessel had mounted the suspect RHIB and landed on its starboard side causing the police vessel taking in water.

o. No Mayday call was broadcasted by the police marine officers. It is assumed at this stage that this was due to the state of shock that they must have been in.

p. At about 0345hrs, Officer One (coxswain) called the RGP Command and Dispatch Unit at New Mole House (NMH) Police Headquarters, and apprised the Crown Sergeant about the collision and of the need of having the ambulance awaiting their arrival (Appendices 15, 25, 26 and 27 refer).

q. [redacted]

r. The RGP vessel then commenced to tow the suspect RHIB but its towing speed was reported to be reduced as one of its engines had failed following the collision (Appendix 15 refers).

s. Consequently, the assistance of the HMC Marine Section was sought and HMC vessel Seeker met with the Sir John Chapple by which stage was within BGTW. (Appendices 15 and 27 refer).

t. All crewmembers from the suspect RHIB, except for the deceased, were transferred on to the HMC vessel for them to be taken ashore for treatment.

u. First Aid was administered to the crew of the suspect RHIB by the HMC officers (Appendices 10 to 17, 20, and 28 to 31 refer).

v. At about 0355Hrs the on call Gold Commander Detective Chief Inspector Field was contacted and attended the Police Marine Base. As soon as he had assessed the situation he called me at 0425Hrs.

w. I immediately recalled all available senior managers and convened a Gold Command meeting.

x. A command structure was put in place with a number of senior officers being tasked with specific roles. For the purpose of leading the investigation during the 'Golden Hour', DCI Field was provisionally appointed as Senior Investigating Officer.

y. For the purposes of transparency, immediate consideration was given to requesting an independent body to lead the investigation.

z. A critical incident was declared and the following additional persons recalled to duty:

CI	Nolan Romero. Post Incident Procedure Manager (PIP)
DI	Paul Chipolina (Head Special Branch) International liaison with Spain
DI	Alex Enriles – PSD cover
Insp	Thomas Tunbridge – Operational Logistics
Insp	Albert Fernandez - Bronze commander Marine Base
Insp	Paul Barker – Media
PS	Maurice Morello – Chairman Gibraltar Police Federation – welfare.

aa. Steps were then made to secure the Marine Base, the hospital and Police HQ. On a previous recent occasion involving a fatal collision with an HMC vessel and another smuggling craft, the vicinity outside Police Headquarters and hospital were inundated with family members who either belong to or are related to Organised Criminal Groups (OCG).

bb. The following established command protocols were initiated.

Gold Commander	Commissioner Ian McGrail
Deputy Gold	D/Supt Paul Richardson
SIO - provisional	DCI John Field
Coroner's Officer	DI Sean Perera
Family Liaison Officer	Natalie Passano

cc. The following fast track actions were commenced:

1. Critical Incident declared
2. Consider calling UK force to investigate - (Small Islands/Hampshire considered initially)
3. Post Incident Procedure (PIP) procedure to be initiated for:
    a. ECHR considerations
    b. Safeguard ID of officers (retaliation by OCG feared)
4. Welfare of officers
5. Security NMH, PMB Base, SBH
6. Advise:
    a. CM
    b. HE
    c. CBF
    d. GDP CPO
    e. Police Fed
7. Advise Windmill Hill and Port to secure evidence.
8. Commissioner to issue message of reassurance to workforce

9. Intel circular to be published for officer safety reasons.
10. Resilience issues to be considered for Gold command cover and Ops personnel
11. Press statement
12. Provisional SIO to consider ECHR implications and by extension Gibraltar Constitution
13. Need to determine location of incident ASAP.
14. SLOWER TIME ACTIONS:
    a. Extract training records for PMB crew
    b. Extract standing instructions for chase at sea.

dd. At about 0540Hrs and shortly after arrival at the Marine Base, [redacted] was pronounced life extinct by paramedics on scene. The other two crew members were conveyed to St. Bernard's Hospital to be medically examined (Appendices 32 to 36 refer).

ee. HM Coroner Mr PITTO, was apprised and gave instruction for the bodies of the deceased to be placed in the mortuary fridge pending examination by a Forensic Pathologist.

ff. At 0605Hrs I notified HE and yourself and we engaged in an exchange of messages as from 0724hrs.

gg. At 0630Hrs I personally went to speak to the officers involved in the collision and reassured them that their well-being was at the forefront of our concerns.

hh. At 1010Hrs I met with the Attorney General Michael Llamas in my office and briefed him fully as to what was known at that stage. We were joined by the Governor Nick Pyle at 1215Hrs.

ii. Following medical `treatment the two remaining surviving crew members were arrested on suspicion of having committed the offences below:

- Importing a Prohibited Import, contrary to Section 14 (1) (f) and (2) of the Imports and Exports Act 1986.
- Dangerous navigation, contrary to Section 10 of the Seaside Pleasure Boat Rules 1989.
- Obstructing Police, Contrary to Section 177 (2) and (4) of the Crimes Act.

This is because at that time it was believed that the suspect vessel had entered BGTW at some point during or before the police chase ensued and therefore some criminality had occurred within Gibraltar's jurisdiction. (The CAD log records that the incident took place some 3 miles south of Europa Point as reported by the crew – this was later found to be incorrect see Appendix 64, record 5 of 97)

jj. On the 1st April 2020 once it was clear that no criminality had occurred within BGTW, the two remaining survivors were recalled from bail and released without charge. (Appendices 37 and 38 refer).

kk. At 1205Hrs 9th March 2020 I held a briefing in my office with The Governor and Attorney General and updated them with the details I had available.

ll. As part of the Post Incident Procedure (PIP) the RGP crew members provided an initial account on the same day followed by a detailed account some days later. For safety reasons the officers are identified as Officer One (coxswain), Officer Two (2nd qualified crew member) and Officer Three (unqualified crew member). This is to prevent their identities being transmitted to organised crime groups who have been known to take personal vengeance against law enforcement officers.

mm. The HMC crew also took part in the PIP process.

nn. For reasons of independence, transparency and impartiality on the 10th March 2020 arrangements were made with for an independent investigation to be led by the Metropolitan Police Service, Directorate of Professionals Standards. This was after attempts to obtain support from the chiefs of other small jurisdictions failed.

oo. The terms of reference for the independent investigation are as follows:

1) To review what the Royal Gibraltar Police has actioned so far in to the causes and circumstances of the collision at sea in the early hours of 8th March 2020 between RGP interceptor Sir John Chapple and a 14m rigid-hulled inflatable boat, which resulted in the deaths of two of the four men on board and to assume the lead in this investigation from thereon.

2) To investigate the actions and decisions of Royal Gibraltar Police officers and/or staff in relation to the collision at sea on 8th March 2020, and the degree to which, if at all, the actions and decisions caused or contributed to the two deaths and injuries of other parties aboard the rigid-hulled inflatable boat.

3) To assess whether the police officers and staff acted in accordance with police policies, guidance and legislation.

4) To assess whether any police officers or staff have committed criminal offences or behaved in a manner justifying the bringing of disciplinary proceedings.

5) To identify any opportunities for organisational learning, and any good practice that could be highlighted and shared.

pp. At around the same time the services of a maritime collision expert were engaged - Captain Richard Meikle (the same expert who investigated the HMC vessel fatal collision off Eastern Beach).

qq. The Metropolitan Police investigation team arrived in Gibraltar on 13th March 2020 and comprised of an acting detective superintendent, several other police officers and a civilian investigator.

rr. The maritime collision expert arrived on the same flight as the Metropolitan Police team and on arrival they were put in touch with each other.

ss. The Metropolitan Police officers were sworn in as RGP officers in order to grant them constabulary powers. The acting D/Supt assumed conduct of the investigation following a comprehensive briefing and handover of all relevant material. The RGP provisional SIO, DCI Field was appointed as liaison officer to assist the team with their investigation in Gibraltar.

tt. The vessels involved in the collision, as well as the HMC vessel involved in the towing of the suspect vessel, were examined by RGP Crime Scene Officers. They were later brought out of the sea onto the 'hard' and treated as crime scenes for them to be further examined at a later date, by the maritime expert.

uu. From the onset, and is usual in serious cases, the families of the deceased were approached by a Family Liaison Officer (FLO) appointed by the RGP. This role involves providing support and acting as a liaising point between the investigating team and the family. It should be noted, that local counsel representing the families of the deceased (as well as the two persons in custody) insisted on all contact to be done via their chambers. Christopher FINCH from VERRALLS is leading on this, with the assistance of Leigh DEBONO.

vv. Dr David ROUSE, Consultant in Forensic Medicine and Pathology performed post mortem examinations on both deceased on the 11th and 12th March 2020 and has provided his witness statements/post mortem reports (Appendices 40 and 41 refer).

yy. On the 17th March 2020 I met with the Attorney General and discussed the progress of the investigation and its various strands including the Coroner's investigation, possible civil action, professional standards enquiry, Spanish judicial action, law enforcement co-operation angle (Brexit- working group) and the political dimension. The aim was to develop a working strategy to deal with all of this. I proposed to meet face to face with GC to gather more information and try to elicit where they were taking the matter. The Metropolitan Police also wanted to meet them too. Given the obvious political sensitivities I wanted to run this past you. The AG advised me that he would consult with you and revert.

zz. Shortly after this meeting the AG informed me by text to proceed as we had discussed.

aaa. On the 18th March 2020, having been unable to meet with the GC face to face because of the Covid19 crisis, I briefed the AG on the video conference that we had held between the Metropolitan Police team, the RGP and the Guardia Civil. That briefing included reference to the Spanish investigating judge potentially summons the RGP officers to give their accounts, or request their accounts in writing.

bbb. On the 19th March 2020, I forwarded the same information as discussed in the preceding paragraph to the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority. The GPA Chairman asked me whether the Governor was aware of this and I informed him that the Metropolitan Police would brief his office directly given that [redacted] had invited the team round to his house.

ccc. On the 19th March 2020 the Metropolitan Police team left Gibraltar prematurely due to the Covid19 world health emergency. Since then the team lead Supt Ag Gary Smith has been reallocated other duties by their UK commanders and the team has been subject to UK lockdown rules. This has caused significant delays to the investigation.

ddd. On the 22nd April 2020 I met again with the Attorney General and DPP and we discussed a potential civil action by Christopher Finch on behalf of the surviving crew members. The question of crown counsel representation was first discussed at that meeting and I was advised by the DPP that 'we were not at that point yet' – that a claim had not been filed. We discussed the need to have a strategy to deal with all the strands the Coroner's enquiry, Spanish Lawyers, the likelihood that RGP officers would be summoned to Spain to testify and the political implication of the location of the incident. The AG would give thoughts on whether to bring the matter up in the law enforcement co-operation working groups and/or to tactfully engage with his Brexit negotiator counterpart. He undertook to advise you too reassuring me that he had quick direct access to yourself. This was at the height of the Covid 19 crisis locally.

eee. The AG did not want to consider further strategy until we had receipt of the Metropolitan Police's report with their findings. This has still not been received despite many requests to expedite the Covid 19 Crisis in the UK has taken its toll on policing as in many other areas of business. I have received a sit-rep update from the UK team on 27th May 2020 (Appendix -90)

fff. The marine investigator's draft investigation report was submitted for comments to the UK team and the RGP on the 30th April 2020 and is currently being revised following discussion between the interested parties.

ggg. On the 14th of May Robert Fischel of Verrals wrote to me enclosing a letter of claim on behalf of [redacted]. [redacted] was aboard the RHIB involved in the collision with the Sir John Chapple on the 8th of March 2020. On Friday the 15th of May, Supt. Yeats sought to arrange a meeting with the DPP to "discuss how to progress the defence of this claim." The DPP replied on Sunday the 17th saying he was available during the week of the 18th of May, with the meeting being arranged for the 19th of May. At that meeting the DPP was of the view that he would be unable to represent the RGP on the matter as he was likely to be brought into conflict at some future date, he gave three potential reasons:

a. having to prosecute EAWs against the officers if the Kingdom of Spain sought to extradite,
b. prosecuting the officers locally for criminal offences and thirdly,
c. prosecuting in disciplinary proceedings.

We accepted his position. The DPP was of the opinion that the issue of the claim should be briefed out, but he wished to discuss the matter with the Attorney General.

hhh. On Wednesday the 20th of May Supt. Yeats spoke to the DPP and he asked that we write to the AG explaining why there may be conflict and seeking authority to brief out the matter. The AG would then raise the matter with the CM. This was done.

15. Point (i): A statement on the current status of the officers in question (i.e. whether they continue to be on active duty or are suspended or stood down pending finalization of any enquires into this matter).

a. As soon as I became aware of the seriousness of the situation I instructed that a Post Incident Procedure (PIP) commence and appointed Chief Inspector Nolan Romero, a qualified Post Incident Manager (PIM)

b. In accordance with approved practice post incident investigations are instigated when certain criteria are met, one of which includes any non-firearms incident where the Police have been involved and this deployment has resulted in death or serious injury. (Appendix 62 refers).

c. The aim of this approved practice is to detail the management arrangements for such incidents and relate to the safety and security of person(s), property/critical infrastructure and include and are not limited to various instances, including:
   - Pursuits.
   - Accidents during operational activity.
   - Serious collisions. .
   - Any situation where a critical incident has been declared.

d. The objectives of the procedure are to:
   - Look after the welfare of Key Police Witnesses
   - Facilitate the investigation
   - Ensure the integrity of the procedure

e. One of the PIM's responsibilities is to ensure that the officers' wellbeing and safeguards are considered at every stage of the process. The PIM gathers all relevant and available information, make assessments and rationalises his decisions in a log (Appendix 1 refers).

f. In this instance it was decided to afford the officers anonymity to mitigate the risk of their names being disclosed to persons involved in criminality. Accordingly as part of the PIP process the officers were identified as Officers One (coxswain, Officer Two (qualified crew member) and Officer three (3rd crew member). Gibraltar Police Federation (GPF) representatives were also present at the initiation of the PIP process.

g. On the same morning of the incident, the officers provided their initial Stage three accounts (Appendices 2 to 4 refer respectively) and arrangements were made to contact them the following day. They were then sent home. Stage 1 account is the report made to the PIM on appointment and the Stage 2 account is the PIM's initial brief to the SIO (Senior Investigating Officer).

h. The HMC Marine Section Officers who assisted in the tow of the suspect RGIB were also included in the PIP and were also afforded anonymity. They are referred to as HMC Officer Four, Five, Six, Seven and Eight. These officers also provided initial accounts (Appendices 5 to 9 refer respectively).

i. The RGP Marine Section officers involved in the incident, were stood down and allowed to commence their cycle of rest days and a return to work strategy was implemented which included restricting their duties to non-operational and non-public facing duties. All of the officers were offered professional counselling.

j. On the 10th March 2020, RGP Officers One, Two and Three, met with the PIM, his assistant and GPF representatives. The welfare of the officers concerned was discussed and counselling was requested and this was arranged by management. This took place shortly after through the Gibraltar Health Authority (GHA).

k. The officers met with their legal representative appointed by the GPF.

l. On the 11th March 2020, arrangements were made for RGP officers One, Two and Three, to provide their Stage 4 accounts at the office of the GPF. This was scheduled for the 12th March 2020. That same day, Officer Three, stated that he was fit to return to work.

m. On the 12th March 2020 the PIM was advised that the officers' legal representative in Gibraltar had engaged the services of a PIP Specialist from the UK and the Stage four accounts would be delayed until his arrival to Gibraltar.

n. Assistant Commissioner ULLGER met with the officers at the office of the GPF. The officers were provided with reassurance and welfare support with the intentions of them returning to work as quickly as possible.

o. The Stage four accounts of HMC Officers Four, Five, Six, Seven and Eight were subsequently provided on 12th March 2020 (Appendices 10 to 14 refer respectively).

p. On the 12th March 2020, intelligence was received to the effect that threats had been made against the officers involved in the collision. This included damaging a residence in Spain, linked to one of the officers. As a result of this, the Guardia Civil (GC) contact point for the RGP was informed of this and their assistance sought in trying to provide regular patrols of the address in question.

q. On the 16th March 2020, RGP Officers One, Two and Three, provided their Stage four accounts in the presence of their UK counsel and GPF representatives. They declined to allow officers from the Met Police team to be present during the provision of their account and did not cover all of the areas that they had been asked to by the Metropolitan Police interviewing team, including the location of where the collision occurred and question on the operating of the AIS. (Appendices 15 to 17 refer respectively.

r. On the 23rd March 2020, arrangements for the officers to return to work were made on a slow integration basis whilst they continued receiving counselling. They are currently on non-front line duties and their progress is being monitored.

- Officers One and Two were deployed to assist in the RGP stores.
- Officer Three was deployed to Resource Management on the 24th March.

s. The Metropolitan Police Team from the Directorate of Professional Standards is currently investigating the officers' conduct. We are still waiting for their return to Gibraltar and progress this investigation. This has been delayed due to the COVID -19 pandemic and the travel restrictions.

t. At this stage the officers have not been served with formal notices of investigation under the Police (Discipline) Regulations 1991 which is the under consideration of the Metropolitan Police team

5. Point (ii): The exact location where the incident happened; and Point (iii): Confirmation, therefore, of whether the incident happened inside or outside of BGTW.

a. Captain MEIKEL (SOLIS Marine Consultants), have produced a Rapid Replay reconstruction using the data that was recovered from the GPS from the suspect RHIB. Below is a screenshot of the situation around the suspected time of the collision (Appendix 18).

b. As can be seen the collision occurred outside of BGTW the limits of which are demarcated on the chart.

c. The actual point of collision is described as point 'B' this being:
   - Latitude 36°10.10 N
   - Longitude 005°12.50 W

d. Capt. MEIKEL cannot make reference to any positions of the RGP interceptor, Sir John Chapple, as its Automatic Identification System (AIS) was not connected during the incident. This contrary to instructions.

e. In his draft report, Capt. MEIKLE (Appendix 19 refers) states that the Sir John Chapple intercepted the suspect RHIB in position 36° 11.7'N 005° 18.1'W at around 03:29:15. The collision occurred at around 03:38:56, in position 36° 09.96' N 005° 12.51' W (36° 10.0' N 005° 12.5' W when rounded off to one decimal place of a minute). Therefore, this positions the vessels during the intercept, pursuit and collision in Spanish waters.

f. This coincides with the last position displayed on suspect RHIB's chart plotter (see paragraph 4(i). It is suspected that the loss of signal occurred as a result of the collision whereby the radar mast was damaged.

g. Neither the Gibraltar Port Authority nor WHSS could assist in plotting the course of either vessel as they had not been detected through their AIS tracking. WHSS did, however, record the chase through their infra-red thermal cameras. Although they cannot plot the chase, by referencing to vessels anchored out at sea and captured in the footage, they were able to place the chase outside BGTW.
A statement from Mr. MANDELBERG to this effect is currently being prepared.

h. It is important to note that the AIS (Automatic identification System) of the Sir John Chapple was turned on after it returned to BGTW. The officers were asked to account but did not respond to it in the Stage 4 account.

i. The first plotting of the AIS of the suspect RHIB is out at sea in Spanish Waters. There is no previous plotting, accordingly it is not known with any degree of certainty whether the vessel ever entered our jurisdiction prior to that plot.

6. Point (v): Copies of any report or reports provided by the Metropolitan Police in respect of this incident as a result of the investigation sanctioned by the Government in relation to the incident.

a. A brief sit-rep update was received from the Metropolitan Police at 1359hrs on 27.05.20 – Appendix 90 refers. In this situation report reference is made to a previous sit-rep dated 23.03.20. The Met team had not shared this with me – this had only been circulated amongst the investigation team and their superiors. At 2025hrs on 27 May 2020, the Met Police SIO emailed the situation report of the 23.03.20 which briefly captures their enquiries in Gibraltar including "liaison with FCO regarding the political situation." Appendix 91 refers

7. Point (vi): Copies of any internal reports or documentation produced to date in respect of the Incident.

a. A copy of the provisional SIO Policy / Action file, which is issued to manage the investigative response, resources associated with the investigation, strategies and procedures to be adopted is included at Appendix 39.

b. The Post incident Manager's (PIM) log where he recorded information available to him as to the incident, as well as actions, assessments and decisions made by him and the rationale behind them is included at Appendix 1.

c. The custody records of the two survivors, [redacted] and [redacted], who were arrested on the date of the incident are included at Appendices 37 and 38.

d. Marine Collision expert Capt. MEIKLE from SOLIS Marine Consultants has produced a draft report following his examination of both vessels on the 14th March 2020 and subsequent examination of the navigational systems, His draft report was received on the 30th April 2020 and is included at Appendix 19.

e. His provisional conclusions are summarised hereunder, however, they are under having been subjected to comment by MPS and RGP:

I. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' intercepted the 'SUSPECT RHIB' in position 36° 11.7'N 005° 18.1'W at around 03:29:15. The collision occurred at around 03:38:56, in position 36° 10.0' N 005° 12.5' W. The intercept, pursuit and collision took place in Spanish waters.

II. It would have been clear to the officers on board 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', as they were familiar with the waters, even when navigating by eye that they were well outside of BGTW.

III. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's starboard bow collided with the port quarter of 'SUSPECT RHIB'. The speed of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' led it to pass over the top of 'SUSPECT RHIB' during the collision and, once clear, landing on their starboard side at an angle which led to the water ingress into the cabin.

IV. It cannot be stated with any certainty who the coxswain of 'SUSPECT RHIB' was; however, it is likely to have been [redacted]. The crewman in seat two was, by elimination, likely to be [redacted], who died shortly after the collision.

V. It is not known why the two forward jockey seats on 'SUSPECT RHIB', where the two dead crewmen were seated, had very little damage when compared with the heavily damaged aft two seats.

VI. To establish, with greater certainty, the angle of incidence, and the path of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' in relation to 'SUSPECT RHIB' additional modelling of the two vessels would be required. The creation of 3-D models using Rhino software could be utilised to show the relative positions and aspects of the two vessels prior to, during, and after the collision. (This has now taken place).

VII. Officer One did not turn on 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's AIS for the duration of the operation in contravention of Marine Section Instructions.

VIII. The crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', in not using all the available navigation equipment showed a poor standard of navigation.

IX. The Instructions stated that the safety of the crew was the priority; however, the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' in continuing to pursue at very close range, with limited visibility, and unable to respond to a quick turn by the 'SUSPECT RHIB' did not comply with those Instructions.

X. There was no proper training in pursuits of suspect vessels for the coxswains who would be required to take evasive action. (This is not our understanding and is subject to review. We believe that the training provided deals with this area of seamanship).

XI. From the evidence reviewed to date, it appears that Marine Section managers did not have an effective oversight of how their patrols were being carried out. (This is currently being further looked into by Capt Meikle in respect of job descriptions and governance of the unit).

XII. Once Officer One realised that there was immediate risk to life, he should have broadcast a Mayday relay call to all vessels in the area.

XIII. The Instructions and guidance provided to the Response Teams, oversight of operations (patrols and high-speed pursuits) and the management's review processes should be better understood.

XIV. A study of AIS data, over a period of several months would provide an insight into the operating patterns of these vessels and the frequency at which they operate outside BGTW. (This is taking place).

XV. A review of previous incident reports, investigations and actions taken by RGP senior officers would be beneficial to the investigation. (Currently accessing and being looked into).

XVI. Capt. MEIKEL returned to Gibraltar, with 3D scanning specialists, Visual Skies, to obtain 3D scans of both vessels involved in the incident. These were performed on the 18th and 19th May 2020 and will provide images / animation which will assist in giving a clearer picture of the actual collision impact.

f. Witness statements have been obtained from numerous experts, officers and civilians. These include:

- Officers One, Two and Three from the RGP. (Officers were on board the Sir John Chapple, being the vessel involved in the collision, and have provided PIP stages three and four accounts in respect of the incident). (Appendices 2 to 4 and 15 to 17 refer).

- HMC Four, Five, Six, Seven and Eight from HMC. (Officers were on board HMC Seeker and provided assistance to transport the casualties on board the suspect RHIB to the GGMS – PIP stages three and four accounts). (Appendices 5 to 14 refer).

- Paramedics Fabian FERRO, Paul WATSON and Sigurd HAVELAND from the GHA. (Involved in the treatment and triage of the three crewmembers of the suspect RHIB who were transferred to the GGMS by HMC. WATSON and HAVELAND also recognised life extinct on both the deceased). (Appendices 33 to 36 refer).

- GDP Communications Assistant Daniel FERRO GDPC 105 KILPATRICK, from WHSS. (Officers manning WHSS on the night of the incident. They make initial call to RGP informing them of suspect vessel. The movements of the suspect vessel and part of the chase is monitored by them through thermal cameras. Following the collision, they are contacted by the RGP crew and informed of the Incident involving a fatality (Appendices 20 to 22 and 30 and 31 refer respectively).

- Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT) from the GHA, Stuart RYAN, Tanya NOGUERA, Leslie BRUZON and Paul LLANELO, together with Care Assistant Wilson OLVEIRA. (Involved in the triage and treatment of the three crewmembers of the suspect RHIB who were transferred to the GGMS by HMC). (Appendices 42 to 46 refer respectively).

- Damian CHIPOLINA and Jose Luis MOLINA RUS from Tarik Shipping Services Ltd. (They were on board a service vessel in the eastern side on the night of the Incident and witnessed blue flashing lights at a distance. The time of this, was post collision. Nothing else was witnessed by them). (Appendices 47 and 48 refer respectively).

- Robert COLLIS and Dylan SHARP from Tarik Shipping Services Ltd (Did not provide witness statement but gave the same account as Damian CHIPOLINA and Jose Luis MOLINA RUS. COLLIS further provided the RGP with a small video clip he had taken of blue lights being seen at a distance. A file note of this was made). (Appendices 75 and 76 refer).

- Daniel RUDMAN, Chief Metrological Officer. (Provides information on weather and sea conditions on the night of the Incident). (Appendix 49 refers).

- Philip MANDELBERG from the Gibraltar Port Authority. (Produces screenshots showing coordinates supplied by the RGP and explains that the Port Authority could not track the course taken by the RGP or suspect RHIB vessel during the incident). (Appendix 50 refers).

- PC 117 FORTUNATO from the RGP. (Duty controller at CAD who received calls from Officer ONE following the fatal collision at sea). (Appendix 27 refers).

- PS 6 STONE from the RGP. (Duty Crown Sergeant who was apprised of the situation by Officer One, following the fatal collision at sea. He also arranged for assistance to be provided by HMC and the GHA). (Appendix 28 refers).

- PC 167 RISSO from the RGP. (Duty controller at CAD who received a telephone call from Officer One prior to the incident and also witnessed PS STONE and PC FORTUNATO dealing with incoming calls from Officer One). (Appendix 60 refers).

- PC 182 VICTOR from the RGP. (Formed part of the initial RGP investigating team). (Appendix 51 refers).

- Insp John LUTKIN from the RGP. (Duty Officer on the night of the incident). (Appendix 58 refers).

- PCs 71 CANEPA and 100 O'FLAHERTY from the RGP. (Both officers assisted with the casualties upon their arrival at the GGMS. PC CANEPA also recognised life extinct on ABDESELAM AHMED). (Appendices 32 and 52 refer respectively).

- PCs 175 LANE, 216 YEO, 63 MYHILL, 55 CHAPPORY from the RGP. (These officers from the Area Response Team on duty on the night in question, provided assistance as and when requested in respect of the incident, such as covering crime scenes). (Appendices 53, 55, 56 and 57 refer).
- DC 127 GARCIA-WHITE from the RGP. (The officer obtained copies of the CT scans performed on the bodies of both deceased). (Appendix 59 refers).

- DC 169 KINGSLEY from the RGP. (Translated the witness statement from Jose Luis MOLINA RUS from Tarik Shipping Services Ltd, from the Spanish into the English language). (Appendix 54 refers).

- PC 186 PARKER from the RGP. (Obtained audio files from CAD containing the calls made from and to Officer One, following the collision at sea). (Appendix 61 refers).

- Iain UNDERY, VTS Supervisor from the Gibraltar Port Authority. (He receives a report from Tarifa Traffic, informing him that they had received a call from an unknown person reporting that there had been a serious incident off La Atunara). (Appendix 29 refers).

g. Coroner's officer, Insp Sean Perera, has been providing briefing notes/updates on the coroner's investigation to Supt Richardson, since the 21st April 2020 (Appendix 63 refers). This includes and is not limited to:

- Communication between the RGP and the officers of the MPS Directorate of Professional Standards, tasked in investigating this Incident, including requests made by either side, supplying of any material of evidential value to the investigation, etc.

- Communication between the RGP and the legal representatives of both the families of the deceased and the survivors. Amongst other things, this has seen local counsels from VERRALLS, requesting/demanding for information on this investigation, requesting the return of property and for their own experts to be allowed to carry out examinations of both vessels involved in the collision.

- Communication with HM Coroner and the Coroner's Officer. This includes updates on the investigation or anything relating to the incident, proposals and requests for authorisation to be granted to open up other lines of enquires, authorisation for costs/expenses which might be incurred during the investigation to be met or deferred to another party. Communication and actions/findings by the marine expert commissioned to investigate this matter. Informing of requests made by the Spanish authorities and legal representatives of the families of the deceased and the survivors and advice on how to proceed.

- Anything else of interest or crucial to the investigation.

8. (a) Point (vii): Copies of any incident logs that may have been kept of the actions in respect of the Incident.

   (b) Point (viii): Copies of any call logs that may have been kept of the actions relating to the Incident.

   a. A CAD log, with serial number CD/20/00018587/P, was immediately opened by the RGP duty controllers following the initial telephone call made to them by Officer One. This was at 03.45:41hrs on the 8th March 2020, following the collision at sea, during which he reported a fatality (Appendix 64 refers). The RGP has no ability to record radio traffic.

   b. All telephone calls since then relating to the incident, including relevant information received and subsequent deployments and the call out of off duty officers were recorded. This includes Officer One, speaking with the duty Crown Sergeant, and informing him of the chase of a RHIB, at approximately 3 miles off Europa Point and culminating in a collision where a person had died and another was seriously injured. During the conversation the officer requests the ambulance to await their arrival at the GGMS, as they tow the suspect RHIB. This call log was closed at 07.16:42 hrs as a result of instructions given by the PIM in order to afford anonymity to the officers on the Sir John Chapple (Appendix 1 refers).

c. Whilst this was occurring, a second call log was opened with serial number CD/20/00018589/R at 07.13:50 hrs (Appendix 65 refers). As with the previous log, anything relevant to the incident was recorded.

d. Audio files from CAD containing the recording of the calls made from and to Officer One immediately after the fatal collision were also secured (Appendices 61 and 66 to 69 refers). Transcripts of the conversations have been produced (Appendices 70 to 73 refers).

e. The provisional SIO, Policy/action files, which records decisions, tasking and rationale is included at Appendix 39: These include:

- Policy File 11126: Offers an introduction into the Incident and initial briefing provided by the Duty Officer. As a result of this COP and other SMT officers were contacted.
- Policy File 11127: Stipulates Gold Command / role designation.
- Policy File 11128: Requires for the identity of the deceased and persons detained on board suspect RHIB; Carry out forensic and retrieve clothing; Crime Scene forensics and securing; and arrest strategy and obtain evidence by questioning.
- Policy File 11129: Requires liaison with PIP Manager and obtaining initial accounts from the crew on board the Sir John Chapple and HMC Seeker; GPF in attendance assisting PIMs assistant; and deployment of FLO.
- Policy File 11130: Enquiries with Spanish counterparts to identify next of kin of the deceased, evidence gathering and establishing exact location of Incident.
- Policy File 11131: Consider resilience issues to secure PMB, GHA and NMH.
- Policy File 11132: Media strategy.
- Policy File 11133: Enquiries with WHSS, Port Authority and Tarifa Trafico.
- Policy File 11134: Consider ECHR implications and by extension the Gibraltar Constitution.
- Policy File 11135: Secure audio files from CAD and PMB appertaining to the Incident.

- Policy File 11136: Intrusive search of vessel through HMC.
- Policy File 11137: Obtain expert collision report.
- Policy File 11138: Enquiries with PMB.
- Policy File 11139: Expedite and facilitate repatriation of the bodies of the deceased.

The contents for each specific task is contained within Appendix 39.

9. Point (ix): Details of any conversations or other operational communications with Spanish law enforcement or other agencies and whether that led to any actual or tacit invitation to enter the Spanish Territorial Sea, providing exact details of such actual or tacit invitation, or the absences thereof.

a. The initial call which initiated the actions taken by the RGP crew of the Sir John Chapple, came from WHSS (Appendices 15, 20, 23, 30 refer). According to the call logs from the mobile telephone held by the RGP officers, this was at 0238 hrs on the 8th March 2020 (Appendix 23 refers). The officers were informed of a suspect vessel seen in the eastern side without navigational lights. The vessel was first spotted by the WHSS personnel at approximately 3 to 4 miles out of BGTW. WHSS personnel were then instructed to keep observations on the vessel.

b. Following this, the RGP crew contacted GC COS. According to the call logs, the first call to them prior to the actual chase, was at 0308 hrs. During the conversation, it was confirmed by the GC that they were monitoring the vessel. Officer One states that the GC informed that there was a large RHIB heading at speed towards land (Appendix 15 and 24 refer).

c. As a result of the observations being carried out by WHSS, on their thermal imaging cameras they observed the suspect vessel heading towards the Atunara Port, where they were met by a smaller vessel. This information was relayed to the RGP crew at about 0315 hrs (Appendix 20 refers).

d. According to Officer One, as the Sir John Chapple arrived at the eastern side, they received two further calls from the GC. This is captured on the call log as being at 0320 hrs and 0322 hrs (Appendix 23 refers). In the first of these two calls, they were informed by the GC that the suspect RHIB was by the breakwater at La Atunara carrying out what they believed to be a crew change and food resupply. The call that followed, according to Officer One, was for the RGP vessel to remain at their current position. He was then requested to head east (Appendix 15 refers).

e. The call logs show further calls being made to the RGP Marine Section mobile telephone by both WHSS and the GC (Appendix 23 refers).

f. Officer One reports that soon after the collision, the GC contacted him but he does not recall the conversation (Appendix 15 refers). The call logs show two calls at 0338:47 and 0339 hrs from the GC to the RGP crew (Appendix 23 refers). (NB. according to the marine expert's draft report, the collision between both vessels took place at around 0338:56 hrs (Appendix 19 refers)). Officer One advises that he received a call from the Gibraltar Port Authority but again does not recall the conversation.

g. According to WHSS personnel, they received a call from the RGP crew informing them of the collision and that there was a fatality and possibly another and that they were returning with the suspect RHIB on tow (Appendix 20 refers).

h. Following the incident, the GC contact point in Algeciras contacted the RGP requesting information, including the identity of the crewmembers on board the suspect RHIB. He was informed that as soon as they were in a position to provide the necessary information it would be supplied to them. Shortly after, an RGP contact officer was appointed and the GC were provided verbally with the identity of those concerned. Their assistance was requested in order to notify the next of kin of each of the deceased. The GC was also requested to provide information as to the vessel's positioning data and the previous convictions of the occupants on the suspect RHIB (Appendix 77 refers). An email followed from the RGP to the GC contact point, requesting once again any previous convictions, any existing GC incident report and the vessel radar positioning data. In relation to this, only the previous convictions were provided (Appendix 78 refers).

i. On the 9th March 2020, the GC contact point with the RGP was specifically asked if it had been the GC or the RGP who had initiated contact on the night in question in respect of the suspect RHIB. He replied that according to the information available to him, it was the RGP Marine Section who had contacted COS enquiring as to the RHIB. The RGP was informed by the contact point them, that the GC were already monitoring the vessel on their cameras (Appendix 24 refers).

j. On the 12th March 2020, following on from an SIO tasking (Appendix 81 refers) and in order to try and establish the location of the Incident, it was decided to enter Spanish waters with the authority of the GC COS on a RGP vessel and try and ascertain if there was radio and telephone coverage. A number of positions were tested surrounding the coordinates were the collision took place. Coverage was available on all locations, except on one of them were only emergency calls were able to be received or made. (Appendix 79 refers). Subsequently whilst this was taking place, the GC despite having granted authority previously, made contact with the RGP vessel and questioned their reasons for being in Spanish waters. An explanation was given to them and accepted. The RGP terminated their line of enquiry and returned to BGTW.

k. On the 16th March 2020, the GC contact officer informed the RGP that the vessel's positioning data would be supplied once available (Appendix 80 refer).

l. Notwithstanding the account of Officer One which indicates certain directions given to them by the GC, there is no evidence to suggest that there was any actual invitation to enter Spanish Territorial Waters. To accept such an invitation would contravene RGP instructions.

10. (a) Point (x): A statement (or copy if they are in printed or printable form) of what standing instructions are given to officers in respect of operations outside of BGTW.

(b) Point (xi): Copies of any such or any other relevant instructions or other standard operating procedures.
(c) Point (xii): Documentation or confirmation in writing of the instructions provided to officers of the Marine Section by senior management as to the procedures to be followed when suspects who are being chased inside BGTW fail to stop and exit BGTW and what position the RGP take or have taken (until the time of the Incident) in respect of 'hot pursuit' from BGTW into International Waters, Spanish Territorial waters and / or into Moroccan Territorial Waters and on what basis and on what advice such a position , if any, has been taken. (It is essential for the Government to understand what training was provided to the officers in question in respect of their ensuring that they operated solely within the territorial limits of Gibraltar. I want to know what the RGP's standard operating procedures are in such instances).

c. In respect of drugs and human trafficking officers are to patrol BGTW and should officers encounter any suspect vessels then they will be pursued in a determined and safe manner within territorial waters and to liaise with the Spanish Authorities.

d. These instructions cover other such topics as incursions by Spanish state vessels, Search and Rescue operations, summer bathing season, health and safety and fishing vessels. (Appendix 82 refers).

e. On the 17th February 2016, officers were reminded via email of the extant instructions in relation to not patrolling outside BGTW other than in a search and rescue operation. Officers were also informed that the vessel in which the officers are carrying out patrols must have the Automatic Identification System (AIS) on at all times. This document can be found at Appendix 83.

f. On the 8th of July 2016, the Marine Section Instructions were updated and provided to the duty crew members. These instructions cover various topics concerned with carrying out duties within BGTW. (Appendix 84 refers). The instructions state that the objectives of any RGP marine crew are to only operate in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters (BGTW) and are to provide:

- Reassurance of beach users and legitimate seafarers.
- Prevention and detection of crime at sea and law enforcement.
- Support Royal Navy challenges to sovereignty.
- Support Environmental Agency operations.
- Support HM Customs and GDP Operations.

International Waters

Officers are not authorised to operate outside BGTW and in International Waters unless when responding to a situation as described below:

- Participating in a Search and Rescue Operation
- Responding to an incident where there is an imminent and serious risk to life.

Spanish Territorial Waters

Officers are not authorised to operate outside BGTW and in Spanish Waters unless when responding to a situation as described below:

- Participation in a search and rescue operation at the invitation of Spanish Authorities.

The instructions go on to cover such areas as the Rules of Engagement with Spanish Law Enforcement Vessels and Health Safety.

Marine Section Officers were again reminded of the policing instructions (issued on the 28th July 2016) by Sgt Stone on the 16th September 2019. These were followed up by an email from Ch Insp Finlayson to the Marine Section Insp and Sergeant on 21st January 2020. (Appendix 85).

Training

a. In [redacted] several officers from the marine section received training and qualified as instructors in boat handling. The bespoke course was endorsed by the Gibraltar Maritime Authority and its syllabus was designed for RGP and HMC marine section officers.

b. In March [redacted] RGP officers delivered this course to a number of RGP officers which included including Officer 1, to certified coxswain level. On successful completion of the course, the candidates would be able to satisfactorily operate twin engine and above RHIB's under law enforcement conditions in a manner which is deemed to be responsible and safe for the coxswains, crews and other users.

c. The course comprises various elements that are outlined in the documents provided to the candidates. These include theory and practical work as well as exam and practical assessment. It is designed around several scheduled mini courses, training days and in-house training during working hours. The course is not time specific and is dependent on the students learning capacity and time constraints placed by operational commitments.

d. Students complete a two day induction course which aims to acquaint the student with the different aspects of work involved in the safe operation of in and around RHIBs, provide an idea of the health and safety requirements and to allow the student to reach a competent level to work on power boats.

e. The student is then required to complete 30 hours of handling a small single engine vessel fitted with a lesser HP engine. The aim is for the student to obtain a decent working knowledge of how to operate a single engine RHIB which would include the approaching and leaving a berth and close quarters manoeuvring.

f. The candidate is then required to complete a further 60 hours on a larger vessel fitted with a fitted higher powered single engine. This will allow the student to observe how what he has learned previously affects a vessel with larger dimensions and engine capacity. The student will also begin to control a vessel with a more powerful engine and will learn how this affects handling in a safe manner.

g. The candidate will be assessed and progression form 1 will be completed, entering all the subjects undertaken with the use of single engine.

h. The student will then complete approximately 60 hours of handling a twin engine RHIB. The student should understand the use of twin engines and engine selection. Students to acquaint themselves with handling a more capable vessel, which possess more power whilst emphasizing its safe operation.

i. Towards the end of this stage the candidate will attend a scheduled training day for an introduction onto pacing. At the end of the stage the candidate will be assessed on progression assessment form 2 entering all the subjects undertaken.

j. The student will undertake a further 50 hours of handling a RHIB of two or more engines, during this stage the candidate should understand the use of several engines and how throttles control these during various manoeuvres. This vessel is much more powerful and should be part of the operational fleet. Practical lessons should also take place during day and night to further enhance the experience of the candidate. The student should continue another scheduled training day to continue the introduction to pacing.

k. The candidate will then proceed onto the final two week qualification course where prior to this stage they should be deemed to be sufficiently competent at handling a RHIB. The course will cover all aspects and material in depth in both practical and theory based lessons. Students will be tested and signed off on the different subjects as they successfully complete them. Candidates must prove to be competent in handling a RHIB at this advanced level of powerboating and be able to plan and navigate Gibraltar waters in different sea and weather conditions during the day and night. The designated assessor must complete the final assessment form.

l. The topics which are covered in two week final qualification course include:

Module 1 – Introduction to Marine Section and Vessel Familiarisation. This is a theory based lesson which allows students to obtain an understanding of their role within the marine section. To familiarise themselves with the type of vessels and equipment carried on board and their general maintenance.

Module 2 – Introduction to Marine Section and Vessel Familiarisation. This is a practical based lesson which allows students to obtain an understanding of their role within the marine section. To familiarise themselves with the type of vessels and equipment carried on board and their general maintenance.

Module 3 – Rope Work. This is both a theory and practical based lesson which enables the students to learn how to perform the different types of knots available and its correct use for different situations – mooring, anchoring, etc.

Module 4 – International Rules for Prevention of Collisions at Sea (IRPCS). This is a theory based lesson which aims for students to acknowledge the importance of observing safety at sea for themselves and other water users to prevent a collision at sea by understanding the rules of IRPCS.

Module 5 – Buoyage – International Association of Lighthouse Authorities (IALA). This is a theory based lesson which allows students to familiarise themselves with daytime and night-time buoyage signage and their different purposes.

Module 6 – Buoyage – International Association of Lighthouse Authorities (IALA). This is a practical based lesson which allows students to familiarise themselves with daytime and night-time buoyage signage and their different purposes whilst navigating.

Module 7 – Chart work and Navigation. This is both a theory and practical based lesson which provides for students to understand the terms used within a navigation chart to be able to interpret basic techniques in navigation.

Module 8 – Distress Signals. A theory and practical lesson which allows the students to understand the interpretation of each different types of distress signals and how to apply them should they find themselves is a dangerous situation.

Module 9 – RHIB Launch and Recovery – (Use of Trailer and Crane). A theory and practical lesson which is aimed for students to understand the importance of all safety features when launching and recovering RHIB from sea through means of a slipway and trailer or via lifting with a crane.

Module 10 – Controlled Handling Drills – Single Engine RHIB. This is a theory and practical based lesson for students to demonstrate a level of competence in controlled handling and slow speed precision manoeuvres of RHIB's in a confined space.

Module 11 – Rough Sea Passage. A theory based lesson which allows students to understand the importance of controlled speeds of RHIB's in varying weather/ sea conditions and their safety and all of others on board.

Module 12 – Rough Sea Passage. A practical lesson for students to demonstrate competency in the safe and controlled handling approach of RHIB's at various speeds in varying sea/ weather conditions. To develop an understanding of when to "Power On" and "Power Off".

Module 13 – Anchoring. Both a theory and practical based lesson for students to understand the correct use of anchor and anchor line depending on seabed and/ or weather conditions.

Module 14 – Man Overboard Manoeuvres & Casualty Rescue. A theory based lesson which teaches students the importance of safety of everyone on board a RHIB and of the consequent rescue approach and procedures should a casualty fall overboard from a moving RHIB.

Module 15 – Man Overboard Manoeuvres & Casualty Rescue. A practical lesson which requires the student to achieve an understanding of the procedures required to perform a man overboard rescue. Students to be able to demonstrate their competence in demonstrating the above.

Module 16 – Search and Rescue Patterns. A theory based lesson which requires the students to understand how to apply correct search and rescue pattern methods whilst observing own safety. Factors to consider i.e. weather conditions, number of casualties and communications with other agencies.

Module 17 – Search and Rescue Patterns. A practical based lesson which allows students to demonstrate their competence in the correct application of the different search and rescue pattern methods.

Module 18 – Controlled Handling Drills – Twin Engine RHIB. A theory and practical based lesson for students to demonstrate a level of competence in controlled handling and slow speed precision manoeuvres of RHIB's in a confined area.

Module 19 – Prisoner Handling. A theory and practical lesson which allows students to understand the importance of their own safety and that of prisoners when on board a RHIB.

Module 20 – Towing. A theory lesson which provides for students to understand the importance on towing methods in relation different types of vessels and emergency situations.

Module 21 – Towing. A practical based lesson for the students to demonstrate competency in the safe and controlled handling of different towing situations involving small crafts.

Module 22 – Climbing a Pilot Ladder. Both a theory and practical based lesson for students to understand the importance of all safety aspects when climbing a pilot ladder and dangers involved.

Module 23 Pacing Manoeuvres- A) Pacing Parallel B) Pacing Alongside. This is a theory based lesson for students to achieve and understanding of the skills required to perform pacing manoeuvres; parallel and alongside.

Module 24 Pacing Manoeuvres- A) Pacing Parallel B) Pacing Alongside. A practical lesson which allows students to demonstrate a safe handling of vessels when performing pacing manoeuvres in following areas; a) when performing the approach, b) parallel pacing of target vessel, c) coming alongside target vessel, d) departing target vessel.

Module 25 Helicopter SAR Recovery Operations. A theory based lesson which enables the student to demonstrate an understanding of safety aspects and the dangers involved during helicopter operations and the actions to be taken; a) prior to the helicopters arrival b) during the helicopters approach c) whilst recovering a casualty d) on the helicopters departure.

m. Upon completion of the course the officers are presented with their certificates relating to the different topics covered in the syllabus. These include RYA qualifications of Day Skipper/ Watch Leader and an RYA Radar Course, Personal Survival techniques, Fire Prevention and Fire Fighting, Personal Safety and Social Responsibilities, First Aid and Coxswain Certificates covering the different stages of the RHIB Handling Course. Redacted Copies of certificates presented to Officers One and Two are available (Appendices 86 and 87 refer respectively).

n. It should be noted that although there is no specific lesson plan for Fast Speed Handling, it is mentioned as part of the competency criteria and both officers were accredited with these qualifications as the certificates show. It is expected that this will be clarified by the Metropolitan Police investigation team when they interview the officers and trainers.

o. Officer 3 was only covering marine section duties on the night in question and had no prior marine experience. He has only received first aid training which forms part of the core RGP syllabus prior to commencement of operational duties (Appendix 88 refers).

p. The instructors keep the training manual of students, which shows that the officers have been signed off in the relevant sections required to complete the course.

q. The manual for Officer Two is included as Appendix 89 however the record for officer one cannot be located as it has been removed by some person(s) fro the marine section filing system. That said, there is evidence that he has passed these courses by the production of the certificates (see Appendix 86).

r. Officer One has stated he had no hot pursuit training and this was repeated by Capt. MEIKLE in his report. We have asked the Captain what course he was referring to and that would capture hot pursuit training. Capt. MEIKLE was unable to answer this as he did not know. The officers from the Metropolitan Police Service have been written to, asking them to consider looking into this area. It could well be that our local training course captured this area either in the pacing or fast speed handling competency area that is recorded in the manual. They would need to approach our trainers if they have not already done so.

Point (xiii): Alternatively, an explanation of why no such position has been taken, given the prevalence of such activities.
Answer: Not applicable. (See answers for Points (x), (xi) and (xii)).

11. Point (xiv): What assessment senior management have made of such operations occurring, in particular where there is not an express invitation from another police force (whether that is the Spanish police force or the Moroccan police force) for operations to continue outside of BGTW in Spanish Territorial Waters, International Waters or Moroccan Territorial Waters. (The Government is very concerned to understand what the Senior Management Team of the RGP has done in respect of continued incidents of operations outside of BGTW before the events in questions and thereafter, in particular if there has been any change in standing instructions or posture as a result).

    a. [redacted]

    b. Since 2016 the RGP do not authorize any deployment outside BGTW including at the request of a foreign LEA.

    c. The only exception would be to assist the Gibraltar Port Authority in a search and rescue operation.

    d. To date, there have been many instances where we have undertaken chases out at sea and within BGTW. The moment the pursued vessel departs our waters we have disengaged allowing the vessel to escape.

    e. We have also monitored many vessels passing outside our jurisdiction without us being involved, we have solely shadowed them from within our limits and deterred them from coming into our jurisdiction.

12. Point (xv): Any other relevant information, reports or documents (whether existing in documentary, printed or digital form) which the RGP consider the Government should have available in considering the facts and matters which arise from the Incident and planning to address the same in the Public Interest of Gibraltar.

    A timeline and supporting documentation including list of appendices have been included.

On the 11th May 2020, it was brought to my notice that a Spanish Parliamentary question had been asked by VOX and responded to by Government. I emailed you, the AG and MOJ advising you of this.

Toxicology results have been received for the deceased [redacted] on 27th May 2020. These have been forwarded to the forensic pathologists. [redacted] the toxicology report for the deceased [redacted] are not expected until the 10th of June 2020.

You will have noted that in this report I have referred to the RGP crew as Officers one, two and three. However, because of the limited time to produce this report for you, I have been unable to redact any reference to their identities in the appendices. I would therefore respectfully ask that you bear this in mind when handling these documents with a view to continue safeguarding their anonymity.

Whilst the above points are factual and I hope will satisfy the requirements you asked of me, we are still awaiting the final report and/or further actions from the independent team and marine expert. The latter's conclusive report is expected around mid June 2020.

Should any points in this report require further explanations, I will endeavour to provide them.

Yours sincerely

Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Commissioner of Police

3.	08/03/2020	0200hrs	WHSS observes suspect RHIB on Thermal Camera however it is too far away to identify the vessel. It is suspected that the vessel id 3-4 Nautical Miles out of BGTW.	Daniel Ferro mentions this in his statement (appendix 20)
4.	08/03/2020	0235hrs	Suspect RHIB heads towards the Spanish Port of La Atunara, La Linea, from its position of 11 nautical miles to the east.	Solis Draft Report based on data obtained from suspect RHIB navigational equipment (Appendix 19). Daniel Ferro states that at 0250hrs he sees vessel heading towards Spanish mainland (appendix 20)
5.	08/03/2020	0238hrs	Call from WHSS to RGP PMB Mobile phone. Officer 1 answers phone and receives report of a suspect RHIB seen on the eastern side approximately 3 to 4 miles out of BGTW. Call 1 02:38:02 (Duration 1:21) Call 2 02:39:12 (Duration 1:21)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23)
6.	08/03/2020	0306hrs	PMB Calls WHSS. (Duration of call 1:47)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23)
7.	08/03/2020	0308hrs	Officer One contacts Guardia Civil COS informing them about the information received from WHSS during which time the GC confirm they were monitoring the vessel. (Duration 01:32)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23)
8.	08/03/2020	0309hrs	Officer One contacts WHSS and confirms that GC are monitoring suspect RHIB and RGP Crew will deploy to Eastern Side of Gibraltar. AIS device not activated. (Duration 00:50)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23). Daniel Ferro confirms the call to WHSS however he puts the time "at about" 0300hrs (Appendix 20). GDP PC Kilpatrick also provides the time frame of "at about" 0300hrs (Appendix 30)

9.	08/03/2020	0315hrs	WHSS on their cameras observe suspect RHIB heading towards Atunara Port where they were met by a smaller vessel. Information relayed to the RGP crew. Call 1 03:11:36 (00:17) Call 2 03:12:47 (00:17) Call 3 03:15:27 (00:18) Call 4 06:16:38 (00:18)	Mentioned in statements of Daniel Ferro and GDP PC Kilpatrick. On Officer 1 being informed of the observations, he confirms to WHSS that GC are keeping him informed (Appendices 20 & 30). The Gibtelecom logs for the PMB mobile shows four calls originating from 20055000. (Appendix 23) these are MOD telephone numbers which although suspected to refer to calls from WHSS, this cannot be confirmed as they could be MOD exchange numbers. It could not be established which one of the calls the info was relayed. No mentions are made by any officers in their statements of the numerous calls made to PMB mobile during this time frame. This information is reflected in the Solis Report this provides a time of 0316hrs (Appendix 19).
10.	08/03/2020	0320hrs	GC Contacts PMB, as they arrive at Eastern Side. Informs crew that the suspect RHIB was by the breakwater at Atunara Port carrying out what they believed to be a crew change and food re-supply and advises PMB to head east. (Duration 46sec)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23)
11.	08/03/2020	0322hrs	GC Contact PMB and informed RGP vessel to remain at their current position as the Suspect RHIB is heading towards them. (Duration 46 Sec)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23)
12.	08/03/2020	0326hrs	Suspect RHIB with four crew on board, depart the Port of Atunara and heads initially north and then onto a north easterly heading away from the Spanish Coast.	Solis Draft Report based on data obtained from suspect RHIB navigational equipment (Appendix 19). Daniel Ferro & GDP PC Alan Kilpatrick's statements (Appendices 20 & 30) put this event at about 0330hrs.

13.	08/03/2020	0324hrs – 0325hrs	Three calls made to PMB by WHSS. 1. 03:24:08 (36 Sec) 2. 03:25:19 (36 sec) 3. 03:25:22 (16 sec)	There is no mention of these calls in the officers' statements. The details of these calls have been obtained from the call log (Appendix 23). The Gibtelecom logs for the PMB mobile shows three calls originating from 20055000. These are MOD telephone numbers which although suspected to refer to calls from WHSS, this cannot be confirmed as they could be MOD exchange numbers.
14.	08/03/2020	0325hrs	Three calls made by GC COS to PMB Mobile. 1. 03:25:26 (No Duration) 2. 03:25:37 (No Duration) 3. 03:25:48 (No Duration)	According to the call logs (Appendix 23) these show no duration to the calls. It may be that the officer never answered the phone at this stage. The officers also make no mention of this in their statements.
15.	08/03/2020	0326hrs	(03:26:15) Call made by WHSS to PMB (Duration 14 Sec)	There is no mention of this call in the officer's statements (Both RGP and WHSS). The details of these calls have been obtained from the call log (Appendix 23). The Gibtelecom logs for the PMB mobile shows one call originating from 20055000. This is an MOD telephone number which although is suspected to refer to calls from WHSS, this cannot be confirmed as they could be MOD exchange numbers.
16.	08/03/2020	0326hrs	(03:26:17) GC COS calls PMB (No Duration)	There is no mention of this call in the officer's statements. The details of this call have been obtained from the call log (Appendix 23).
17.	08/03/2020	0326hrs	(03:26:33) Call made by WHSS to PMB Duration 16 secs	There is no mention of this call in the officer's statements (Both RGP and WHSS). The details of these calls have been obtained from the call log (Appendix 23). The Gibtelecom logs for the PMB mobile shows one call originating from 20055000. This is an MOD telephone number which although is suspected to refer to calls from WHSS, this cannot be confirmed as they could be MOD exchange numbers.

18.	08/03/2020	0326hrs	3 Calls made from GC COS to PMB at the following times: 03:26:37 No Duration 03:26:48 No Duration 03:26:59 No Duration	There is no mention of this call in the officer's statements. The details of this calls have been obtained from the call log (Appendix 23). There is not duration to call.
19.	08/03/2020	0327hrs – 0339hrs	Calls made from GC COS to PMB at the following times: 03:27:12 20 Secs 03:27:25 15 secs 03:27:28 (No Duration) 03:28:22 20 secs 03:38:16 14 secs 03:39:27 14 secs	There is no mention of this call in the officer's statements. The details of this calls have been obtained from the call log (Appendix 23). There is not duration to call. The two calls at the end of the list are close to the time of the collision 03:38:56 according to the SOLIS draft report (Appendix 19).
20.	08/03/2020	0329hrs	The Sir John Chapple intercepts the Suspect RHIB at Coordinates 36° 11.7'N 005° 18.1'W. Blue beacons activated on PMB. Suspect RHIB performs evasive and dangerous manoeuvres and objects were thrown at Police Vessel by suspect RHIB crew members.	The coordinates and timings are provided from the SOLIS draft report which has been obtained from the suspect RHIB's navigational equipment (Appendix 19). According to WHSS the intercept occurs at 0332hrs (Appendix 20, 30 & 74). According to officer 1, PMB commenced to follow the suspect RHIB after the suspect RHIB passed in front of the bow of the PMB at a distance of about 5-10metres (Appendices 15, 16 & 17). This contradicts the direction of the suspect RHIB as Meikle's report evidences. Officer one states the vessel is travelling south east and officer three states it was travelling south. WHSS also state that they can observe PMB blue beacon illuminated during the chase. This was also confirmed by the PMB officers and Bruno Miguel Gomes Sereno (one of the persons arrested). During the course of the pursuit crew members from the suspect RHIB began to throw objects at the PMB according to the statements from the PMB officers. It has also been noted in the officers' statements and the statements obtained from WHSS that the suspect RHIB carried out erratic and evasive manoeuvres. In the SOLIS report these movements are described as sharp turns.

21.	08/03/2020	0338hrs	According to the marine expert, the collision occurred at around 03:38:56, in position 36° 09.96' N 005° 12.51' W	Initially we are provided similar coordinates by the GC as a result of a telephone call made by DI Chipolina (DI Chipolina File note) Subsequently we photographed the suspect RHIB's radar signal lost screen and this provides us with a suspected collision coordinate but we could not interpret this data as we did not have an understanding of the unit and had no expertise in this field. This was subsequently verified by Capt. Meikle in his SOLIS draft report. (Appendix 19). According to WHSS the pursuit ends at 0342hrs (Appendix 20, 30 & 74). Thermal imagery The officers' statements also make reference to the collision and end of the pursuit but they do not provide a time and location.
22.	08/03/2020		Immediately after the collision PMB turns to the suspect RHIB and comes alongside. Officers 1 & 2 jump onto the suspect RHIB and begin to offer medical assistance, after observing the fatality and the seriousness of the second casualty it was decided to convey the persons back to GGMS via towing the suspect RHIB where they could receive medical attention.	These accounts are from officers 1, 2 & 3 (appendices 15, 16 & 17). The decision to not leave any officer on board the suspect RHIB was taken by officer one as he feared for their safety and also taking into account that he and his crew were suffering from shock. There is no mention of calling a May Day by the officers.
23.	08/03/2020	0339hrs	PMB call GC COS at 03:39 (duration 15 seconds)	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23).
24.	08/03/2020	0343hrs	PMB calls WHSS and informs them of the collision with one fatality and a second person seriously injured. Duration 1:10	Officer's 1 statement (Appendix 15) does not provide a specific time for this event and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23). None of the officer's mention calling a May day and this is evidenced in the Solis report. This is also reflected in Daniel Ferro and GDP PC Kilpatrick's Statements (Appendix 20 & 30).

25.	08/03/2020	0345hrs	PMB calls GC COS. The duration of this call is about 44 seconds; however the contents of the conversation is unknown.	There is no Specific mention of this Call by officer 1 however it has been identified from the Gibtelecom call logs (Appendix 23). Officer 1 states in his statement that he receives a call (contrary to the telephone log) from the GC COS. He further states that he cannot recall the conversation, he just remembers this being about "something to do with "la Roca" or "enfrente la Roca" (Appendix 15).
26.	08/03/2020	0346hrs	Sir John Chapple heads back to Gibraltar with suspect RHIB on tow.	This time has been identified by the SOLIS Draft Report (Appendix 19). Officer one's statement makes mention to suffering engine failure following the collision (Appendix 15) along
27.	08/03/2020	0348hrs	PMB calls RGP NMH and informs the duty crown sergeant of the incident and one fatality with a second seriously injured and request ambulance to await arrival at GGMS. Duration 2:24	Although the officer does not make mention of the time, the information in this section is obtained from officer 1's statement (Appendix 15). The time of the call has been retrieved from the Gibtelecom phone logs (Appendix 23). The Police CAD Logs and PC 117 Fortunato provide a time of 0345hrs (Appendix 64 & 27). PS Stone states that he was passed the phone call about 0400hrs (Appendix 28). Officer one explains to PS Stone that they had been involved in a chase of a smuggling RHIB approximately 3 miles off Europa Point. This is mentioned in the CAD log (Appendix 64). This also explains Officer 1's rationale as to why he did not want to leave an officer aboard the suspect RHIB in case further medical attention was required.

28.	08/03/2020	0350hrs	PS 6 Stone contacts Duty Officer, (Insp Lutkin) and informs him of the incident. Inspector Returning to duty and attending Marine Base.	PS Stone's (Appendix 28) statement does not provide a time that he informed the Duty Inspector, however the time presented is taken from the notes made in the CAD Log (Appendix 64). Inspector Lutkin's statement (Appendix 58) states that he received a call "at about" 0345hrs.
29.	08/03/2020	0353hrs	DCI Field (Gold Command on call) is called by Inspector Lutkin and informed of Incident	These details are from DCI Field's Notes
30.	08/03/2020	0353hrs	PS Stone contacts DC 136 Victory (CSI) and informed him of situation.	This is from the CAD Log (Appendix 64).
31.	08/03/2020	0355hrs 0356hrs	2x calls made from WHSS to PMB, 1. 03:55:19 (1:10) 2. 03:56:30 (1:10)	There is no mention of these calls in anyone's statements and the time is based on the call log from Gibtelecom (Appendix 23). The Gibtelecom logs for the PMB mobile shows the calls originating from 20055000. This is an MOD telephone number which although is suspected to refer to calls from WHSS, this cannot be confirmed as they could be MOD exchange numbers.
32.	08/03/2020	0355hrs	GPF Chairman is contacted by PMB over the incident.	DCI Field notes
33.	08/03/2020	0356hrs	Call made from PMB to WHSS the duration of this call was 1:11.	There are no details of this call in any officers statements but a call is reflected in Daniel Ferro & GDP PC Kilpatrick's Statements around 0350hrs (Appendices 20 & 30). This could also be reflected in serial number 22.
34.	08/03/2020	0357hrs	There are a total of four calls made from NMH to PMB: 03:57:55 (no duration) 03:59:06 (no duration) 03:59:45 (1:59) 04:00:56 (1:59)	There is no mention of these calls on the CadLog (Appendix 64). We do not have any details of call but In the statement of PS Stone (Appendix 28) the Crown Sgt contacts PMB, Officer 1 states that he was encountering engine failure and requests for assistance from HM Customs marine unit to deploy and help convey the injured back to GGMS to receive medical treatment.

35.	08/03/2020	0357hrs	PS Stone contacts DS Garratt (Crime on Call) and apprised of situation.	This is from the CAD Log (Appendix 64).
36.	08/03/2020	0400hrs	The Port VTS Supervisor on duty Iain Undery receives a call from Tarifa Traffic where he was informed that they had received a call from an unknown person reporting that there had been a serious incident at sea just off the port of Atunara. As a result of this, Undery contacted PMB and informed him of the report made to him. To this the PMB crew confirm that there had been an incident and they had the vessel on tow.	This is reflected in the statement of Iain Undery (Appendix 29). Officer 1 states that he receives a call from the Port Boarding officer but does not recall the conversation (Appendix 15). The Gibtelecom log (Appendix 23) does not reflect an incoming call from the Port Authority. It does show an outgoing call to Port Boarding officer from PMB at 0413hrs.
37.	08/03/2020	0401hrs	Call made from PMB to NMH Control Room. 04:01:00 Duration 2secs	This information is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). No mention can be found in the CAD Log either (Appendix 64). No specific mention of this call in any statements.
38.	08/03/2020	0405hrs	GHA Ambulance contacted and informed of incident and to attend GGMS and await for arrival of casualties.	This is from the CAD Log (Appendix 64).
39.	08/03/2020	0413hrs	Call made by PMB to Port Boarding officer Duration 51 seconds	This is reflected in the Gibtelecom call log (Appendix 23). There is no mention of an outgoing call in any officers statement, but could be linked to serial No 33.
40.	08/03/2020	0415hrs	PMB Calls NMH Duration 2:24	This information is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). No mention can be found in the CAD Log either (Appendix 64). No specific mention of this call in any statements.
41.	08/03/2020	0418hrs	PMB contacts HMC Marine Section. Duration 33 secs	The time of the call is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). Officer 1 makes reference in his statement (Appendix 15) to contacting HM Customs marine base, informing him of the incident and requested assistance in conveying all injured parties from the suspect RHIB to GGMS to receive medical attention. This is also mentioned in HMC Officer 4's statement (Appendix 10).

42.	08/03/2020	0419hrs	PS Stone contacts DCI Field. The crown sergeant provides a brief and informs that HMC vessel will be deployed and if they could assist in the transportation of the injured parties to GGMS. DCI Field asks this to be carried out expeditiously to save lives.	These details are from DCI Field's Notes.
43.	08/03/2020	0419hrs – 0420hrs	2x Calls of CAD calling PMB 1. 04:19:24 (duration 45 secs) 2. 04:20:34 (duration 45 secs)	This information is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). No mention can be found in the CAD Log either (Appendix 64). No specific mention of this call in any statements.
44.	08/03/2020	0420hrs	PMB calls NMH CAD duration 46 seconds	This information is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). No mention can be found in the CAD Log either (Appendix 64). No specific mention of this call in any statements.
45.	08/03/2020	0422hrs	DCI Field contacts COP and briefs him regarding incident. COP instructs available SMT to convene at his office for a Gold Strategic meeting.	These details are from DCI Field's Notes
46.	08/03/2020	0423hrs	DCI Field arrives at scene	This is from the CAD Log (Appendix 64).
47.	08/03/2020	0425hrs	Customs contact RGP NMH and informs control room that they are deploying to PMB's location.	This is from the CAD Log (Appendix 64). It is also mentioned they deployed in HMC Officer 4's Statement (Appendix 10).
48.	08/03/2020	0426hrs	DCI Field contacts Supt Richardson and briefs him regarding incident.	These details are from DCI Field's Notes. Supt Richardson then attends NMH.
49.	08/03/2020	0428hrs	GHA Ambulance with EMT's Stuart Ryan and Tanya Noguera arrives at GGMS	This is from the CAD Log (Appendix 64).
50.	08/03/2020	0429hrs – 0430hrs	X 2 GC COS contacts PMB. 04:29:15 (41 Seconds) 04:30:26 (41 Seconds)	This information is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). No mention can be found in the CAD Log either (Appendix 64). No specific mention of this call in any statements.
51.	08/03/2020	0430hrs	PMB calls GC COS duration 42 secs	This information is from the Gibtelecom Log (Appendix 23). No mention can be found in the CAD Log either (Appendix 64). No specific mention of this call in any statements.
52.	08/03/2020		Comment made from one of the DP's made in the hearing of Officer 2 reads as follows "Estan muertos y a mi me duele mucho el costado hay que	These comments are referred to the statement of officer Two (Appendix 16)

			llevarnos al hospital" (they are dead and I have a lot of pain in my side and we need to be taken to the hospital) Further on another comment is made to the effect "no tienes la culpa, los motores se pararon, se que no quieren ustedes matar a nadie. Porfavor ayuda a mi tio" (it wasn't your fault. The engines stopped, I know you guys wouldn't kill anyone, please help my uncle). (I suspect this last comment is made by [redacted] as it relates to his uncle.

He briefs him as to the incident involving the fatal collision at sea and that PIP has been implemented with an SIO being provisionally appointed but highlights the importance for this type of matters being dealt with by an independent team. Goddard is informed that COP reached out to the Small Island Forum Police forces but what was offered was not the ideal scenario, being a 3rd party oversight for a managed type investigation on behalf of the PCB. He explains that the PCBs role in Gibraltar does not have capacity or the capability to carry out investigations. COP also informs them that the services of the MDP in Gibraltar was sought but their senior management informed they did not have the skills required for such task.	COP Email

			Therefore he has requested the assistance of Goddard. He explains that he is looking for an independent force investigation team to take on the task. Lastly, COP also asked to see if assistance can also be provided by identifying a forensic pathologist who would be able to perform the PMs on both deceased prior to that which has already been arranged for the end of the week, explaining to him that the reasons are to mitigate any threats which might materialise by having the bodies within the hospital mortuary.
154.	10/03/2020	1200hrs	DS Garratt contacted Tim Yates of Sheppard's Marina in relation to ascertaining if he can obtain the navigational data from both vessels.	Notes DS 15 Garratt

230.	26/03/2020	1141hrs	Leigh Debono from Verralls, emailed DI Perera asking to be provided with the medical records of Mr Dris, as his doctor in Spain was asking for it.	DI Perera Emails
231.	26/03/2020	1256hrs	Mr Finch from Verralls, contacts CI Perez and informs him that he is acting for the families of the deceased and their respective estates in Gibraltar. He also states that he is liaising with Spanish lawyers who are working on this matter in Spain. He requires to be provided with information, if he is to discharge the legal onus in both a criminal and civil context. He looks for an insight into the incident, including whether the coxswain of the RGP vessel has been suspended pending inquiry and whether the Police will be seeking the adjournment of the Coroner's investigation, as he claims to	DI Perera Emails be normal practice where a criminal offence has been committed.

232.	26/03/2020	1628hrs	Mr Debono from Verralls is informed by DI Perera that as part of the investigation the RGP had not obtained any medical evidence, as the survivors, had been arrested in relation to offences which would not be justified for the RGP to request such information as it would not prove or disprove any of the offences mentioned. He was anyhow informed that if he requires such information, a SAR would have to be submitted to the GHA, as it was where his client had been treated and examined.	DI Perera Emails
233.	26/03/2020	1652hrs	Supt Richardson emails DCI Gary Smith MPS and enquiries whether he wishes for Mr Finch to correspond with him directly or to be filtered by RGP PSD. Supt Richardson informs DCI Smith that given that we no longer have grounds to suspect that any part of the chase took place within BGTW, the RGP intends to recall the survivors and release them from arrest.	Supt Richardson emails
234.	26/03/2020	1713hrs	Mr Debono from Verralls emails DI Perera and informs him that the medical notes he was referring to was that which he had been shown by the Custody Sergeant whilst at NMH.	DI Perera Emails
235.	27/03/2020	1031hrs	CI Perez replied to Mr Finch and informed that COP has instructed that for the purpose of transparency an independent investigation will be carried out to determine the events that lead to the tragic incident. He informed that an approach has been made to UKs NPOC and a team of the MPS was deployed to Gibraltar. It was further added that due to the current pandemic the team had to return to the UK earlier than thought.	DI Perera Emails
236.	27/03/2020	1156hrs	After consultation with the RGP DPO, DI Perera informs Leigh Debono from Verralls, that that the doctor's note he is referring to as being shown in custody	DI Perera Emails

			has been identified. Anyhow, his client (or through him with his expressed consent), should submit a SAR to the RGP for it to be considered.
237.	01/04/2020	1140hrs	CI Field authorised the release of the two survivors arrested on the day of incident without any charges being preferred against him. This was done by the Custody Sgt through Verralls.	Email from DCI Field
238.	01/04/2020	1856hrs	Gary Smith from MPS team informs COP, Supt Richardson and DCI Field via email to tell the lawyer representing the families Mr Chris Finch to go through RGP PSD rather than link directly with MPS. DCI Gary Smith includes in his email that he is aware that the criminal case against the survivors has discontinued and the family of the deceased / survivors and are considering legal action against the RGP / those deployed in the vessel. The Spanish may also be considering a homicide investigation, so restriction/ suspension may occur.	Supt Richardson email
239.	03/04/2020	1123hrs	CI Perez informs Mr Finch that all future communication with the RGP should be channelled through him. In respect to requests made by Mr Finch for the disclosure of PM reports and the opportunity to inspect the vessels, CI informed that the Coroner has indicated that the PM reports will be disclosed once he has received the final report from the pathologist. AS to the vessels, he was told that the Coroner is yet to receive the report from the marine expert and once such has been received, a copy will be made available to him.	DI Perera Emails
240.	06/04/2020	1137hrs	Mr Finch informs CI Perez that as the two survivors have been released from their arrest, they are now asking for their properties to be returned. He also wishes for that of the deceased.	DI Perera emails
241.	06/04/2020	1159hrs	Mr Finch communicates to CI Perez that it should be noted that once a person has been released from his arrest, he is entitled to have all his property returned, unless unlawful per se. He	DI Perera

245.	21/04/2020	1049hrs	Email received from Phil Mandleberg at the Port Authority, he was tasked with viewing the remainder of the footage and identifying the ships which have appeared in the footage. Arrangements made to obtain a statement.	DS Garratt emails
246.	21/04/2020	1430hrs	Meeting held by Supt Richardson, DCI Field, CI Perez and DI Perera. Roles of each of these officers discussed. DCI to act as liaison with Met Police Team. CI Perez to be SPOC for Chris Finch and DI Perera to resume role of Coroners officer. Supt Richardson requested 1. Find out if lawyer was called whilst in custody. 2. Ask GC if an allegation has been made in Spain 3. What is GC's Position	DI Perera Notes
247.	21/04/2020	1530hrs	DI Perera informs FLO that two 10x16 have been released from arrest. Requesting to ascertain from families if they still have the same legal counsel in Gibraltar in case RGP need to contact them.	FLO PC Passano notes
248.	21/04/2020	1540hrs	DI Perera contacts GC and ascertains GC's position to which they reply that	DI Perera Notes

			they are not aware of any formal complaints made in Spain. Will enquire with authorities and will inform DI Perera. GC also stated that GC had submitted a report but had still not been taken over by any judge. GC currently untasked.
249.	21/04/2020	1553hrs	FLO receives a message from [redacted] (family of [redacted]) to state that they still retain the same Gibraltar lawyers and he does not recall the details of the lawyer in Spain and would communicate this back to the officer (No further information received) Irene does not reply to message.	FLO PC Passano notes
250.	21/04/2020	1600hrs	FLO tasked by Di Perera, (following meeting with Supt Richardson, to try and ascertain from families of deceased what lawyers they were instructing) and to provide families with an update of investigation.	DI Perera Notes
251.	21/04/2020	1850hrs	Update received from HTCU: Due to the current capabilities available to the RGP HTCU, out of the nine phones which were either in possession of the crewmembers of the suspect RHIB or found strewn on its deck, full extractions or unlocking of the devices to access its data have not been possible on four of the phones. In view of this, through HTCU, contact has been made with their counterparts abroad (Cellebrite, to see if they are able to access the phones in question and extract any relevant data held on them. Once a reply is returned and if in the positive, it will be forwarded to HM Coroner for approval in meeting the costs. Another option offered by HTCU with six of the phones, is to request information in respect of SIM cards and their PUK codes, from their service providers (all of which are from Spain). With this there might be a possibility of retrieving call data. However, it must be borne in mind that requesting this through the official channels, such as EIOs, MLAs, etc, is not an option, as the investigation is not of a criminal nature	DC 106 Oton

252.	22/04/2020	1200hrs	Meeting between AG, DPP and CoP ref communications from lawyers representing the deceased indicating that they would be making a civil claim for damages. CoP enquires about crown counsel representation and again the need to agree a strategy. DPP states, no civil claim has yet been filed so there is no immediate need to appoint counsel. AG would give thoughts whether to leave the matter to be discussed at [Brexit] law enforcement group meeting or privately with his Brexit negotiator counterpart.	CoP notes
253.	22/04/2020	1234hrs	DI Perera informs HM Coroner that he has once again resumed the role of Coroner's Officer (as previously told to him by RGP SMT). Mr Pitto is informed that in respect of the mobile phones held in relation to this investigation, due to the software / encryption issues faced by the HTCU, some of these cannot be accessed for the purposes of retrieving date. He has been informed that enquiries will be carried out with HTCU counterparts in UK to see if they would be able to do this. The reason to continue pursuing their contents, is to try to establish where each of the crewmembers on board the suspect RHIB were sat. There might also be a possibility that information may be held on the phones as to messages / location of the chase and / or recordings of the incident. He is also asked if the authorises for the return of personal property which are not of evidential value, to the families of the deceased and survivors. Mr Pitto is also informed of a request from Mr Finch, to be provided with copies of the photographs of both PMs and that that of both vessels involved in	DI Perera Emails the incident. He is asked how to proceed.

254.	22/04/2020	1246hrs	DI Perera instructs FLO not to contact families anymore ref lawyers info, only welfare checks and if they provide lawyer info, the DI Perera to be informed.	FLO PC Passano notes
255.	22/04/2020	1603hrs	HM Coroner is forwarded an email sent by Mr Finch to CI PEREZ. This is for him to be aware of the stance being taken by VERRALLS. In the email, Mr Finch complains of not being provided with information requested and other requests made, including the surveying of the vessels by his own marine expert. He also asks for the location of the vessels at the time of the incident, asking if it happened in Spanish waters. Mr Finch claims that he will be writing to the Coroner as it appears the intention of the RGP is to close down all important avenues of enquires. He also claims that failure to suspend the officers involved in the collision indicates a predetermination of the enquiry from the outset, indicating a partisan approach and not that of an independent approach.	DI Perera Emails
256.	24/04/2020	1245hrs	Mr Finch emails Maurice Turnock from the Magistrates Court. He forwards him an email thread with CI Perez and wants the Coroner to be informed of what he describes as serious problems he is encountering with the RGP. He states that he considers this case to be of an unlawful killing. He mentions international implications, including ECHR.	DI Perera
257.	24/04/2020	1521hrs	In respect of the email sent to Mr Pitto as to the stance taken by Mr Finch and the complaints he is making, the Coroner informs that Mr Finch has been dealt with by necessary implication in a reply sent to him from his office.	DI Perera Emails
258.	30/04/2020	1519hrs	Update received from HTCU as to enquiries carried out with their counterparts abroad (Cellebrite) in	Dc 106 Oton respect of mobile phones held in relation to this investigation.

259.	05/05/2020	1026hrs	HM Coroner asked if he authorised for 3D scans on both vessels involved in the incident. This will provide a better picture of how the collision took place.	DI Perera Emails
260.	05/05/2020	1118hrs	HM Coroner has been forwarded by DI Perera, the draft copy of the SOLIS report from Capt. Meikle, in respect of his examination of the vessels.	DI Perera Emails
261.	05/05/2020	1202hrs	Approval given by HM Coroner for the 3D scans of the vessels to proceed.	DI Perera Emails
262.	05/05/2020	1258hrs	HM Coroner has been informed of the reply of Cellebrite UK in respect of being able to examine mobile phones held by Police, which were seized during the investigation and which were unable to be accessed by HTCU. He was asked if he authorised for this to be sent over for examination.	DI Perera Emails
263.	05/05/2020	1503hrs	HM Coroner informs that in respect of the examination of mobile phones, he was inclined to say no but would go through the SOLIS report prior to taking a decision.	DI Perera Notes
264.	06/05/2020	1118hrs	Mr Finch emails CI Perez complaining that he is still awaiting for a date for his maritime surveyor to be able to inspect the vessels involved in the collision. He also complains that there is no obvious reasons for the CSI phots taken of the vessels not being supplied to him.	DI Perera Emails
265.	06/05/2020	1614hrs	HM Coroner emails DI PERERA and informs that Mr Finch will be supplied with all necessary reports and information, once the Coroner's investigation was complete. He informed that this reflect the inquisitorial nature of the coronial process and the fact that in an inquest, interested persons are not parties as they might be in atrial. He states that if Mr Finch is interested in pursuing the matter on behalf of his clients civilly or even criminally, he should institute	DI Perera Emails proceedings and acquire the rights of a party at trial in that way. He also stated that he had no difficulty in returning the property (of deceased and survivors), even the phones. He wanted to ensure that the views of the investigating team from the MPS were canvassed and that they had no issues on the return of the items.

268.	07/05/2020	1402hrs	Mr Finch emails CI Perez wanting to be given a date for the inspection of the vessels and have sight of the relevant photographs and marine expert report.	DI Perera Emails
269.	10/05/2020	1411hrs	Mr Finch informs CI Perez that legal representatives on behalf of the families are entitled to participate in the investigation into the deaths of their loved ones. He adds that there is no cooperation from the Police. He says this to be a clear abdication of the state's responsibility where the state agents are clearly responsible in fact and law for the deaths of these concerned. He says there is no excuse to hold back photographs, marine expert report or not allow his own Marine expert to view the vessels.	DI Perera Emails given by the coroner. Everything we have asked for, despite numerous requests has been refused. Any statements to be taken should be taken by their legal representatives, as the police can no longer be trusted to be independent and objective. The police you say on the instructions of the coroner has deliberately delayed and frustrated our inquiries and access to information, including examination of the boats and the draft PM report and even the names of the boat's crew. These actions constitute serious breaches of fundamental rights which will not go without full redress. Maybe you should advise the coroner what the RGP has done under his assumed direction, because there will be consequences."

08 03 20 0605Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Nick - We're dealing with a critical incident - one of our boats has been involved in a collision with a smuggling RHIB with 4 on board. 2 on the smuggling RHIB are fatalities. Our crew are uninjured but clearly shaken & shocked. I am invoking Post Incident Procedures and planning for consequence management. Once I have further updates I will let you know. Rgds Ian
08 03 20 0724Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Ian. Thank you. What are the nationalities of the deceased? Was it drugs or tobacco? Any GC or SVA involvement?
08 03 20 0733Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message So far we have 3 identified. 2 from Ceuta (moroccan descent) & a Portuguese. No Spanish law enforcement agency involved. RHIB suspected to be involved in drug smuggling. I have also informed The Convent. I have held a "Gold" command meeting in my office to address, welfare of the crew, the investigation that will now follow, security/safety to our law enforcement officers, community impact et al. Also linked up with GC and CNP more so after the disturbances in La Linea after the other death involving the our customs patrol boat but given that those on the RHIB are not from this region it may not have an impact. I am still waiting for the 4th & (also deceased) to be identified.

08 03 20 0737Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Just had the ID of the 4th one confirmed. He is also from Ceuta of Moroccan descent.
08 03 20 0740Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Thank you. Are our officers safely ashore and seen by med staff if necessary? Are their families informed they are ok, in case social media lets on there has been a fatal collision, so they don't worry?
08 03 20 0741Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Also, what time did it occur and was it firmly within BGTW or questionable?
08 03 20 0742Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message I think we should announce if possible to avoid social media speculation. Have you prepared media release or do you want Stuart's help?
08 03 20 0742Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Our crew are ok. Their welfare is being totally safeguarded. I am also circulating a notice to all staff to prevent speculation and social media reporting from within. I will issue a very brief press notice shortly.
08 03 20 0743Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok. Re the two who survived, captured? Hospital or cells?
08 03 20 0743Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Collision occurred at approx 0340hrs. Location still to be confirmed.
08 03 20 0744Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message The two who survived are in hospital with non critical injuries as far as I am informed.
08 03 20 0813Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Arrested, correct?
08 03 20 0814Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message They will be if they haven't been already.
08 03 20	CoP	MoJ	Whatsapp message Minsiter - We're dealing with a critical incident - one of our boats has been involved in a collision with a smuggling RHIB with 4 on board. 2 on the smuggling RHIB are fatalities. Our crew are uninjured but clearly shaken & shocked. I am invoking Post Incident Procedures and planning for consequence management. I have advised CM & HE Rgds Ian
08 03 20 0900Hrs	CoP	GPA Ch	Whatsapp message Joey - We're dealing with a critical incident - one of our boats has been involved in a collision with a smuggling RHIB with 4 on board. 2 on the smuggling RHIB are fatalities. Our crew are uninjured but clearly shaken & shocked. I am invoking Post Incident Procedures and planning for consequence management.

			I have advised HE, CM & MoJ already. Regards Ian
08 03 20 0925Hrs	MoJ	CoP	Whatsapp message an thanks for letting me know. If there is anything you need from me let me know.
08 03 20 0927Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Ian. Thanks for letting me know. Sorry to hear this.
08 03 20 0929Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message And of course if ty need anything from us/HMG just ask. Hope your guys are ok.
08 03 20 0941Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Thanks Nick.
08 03 20 0949Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message CM - the information suggests that the collision took place outside BGTW - approx 6NM east off the runway/Santa Barbara beach. (Note this is information and not yet confirmed evidence)
08 03 20 0953Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message When a death arises from police contact its best practice to engage with an independent investigating team & I am studying how to achieve this.
08 03 20 0953Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok. We need to liaise with AG on this and ensure we are transparent on this.
08 03 20 0954Hrs	CM	CoP	Whatsapp message Yes, agreed. Any necessary additional expenditure will be approved.
08 03 20 0954Hrs	CoP	CM	Whatsapp message Many thanks.
08 03 20 1031Hrs	GPA Ch	CoP	Whatsapp message Thanks - I saw it on the news feed.
08 03 20 1058Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Not asking any questions of you in view that it is under investigation and for Coroner to determine. Just like to say that it is unfortunate, to say the least!
08 03 20 1140Hrs	AG	CoP	Whatsapp message Been in New Mole for the last hour or so. Cooperation RGP/Spanish LEAs very good. New RGP Press Release today will say good cooperation with ES, drug related activity, 2 deaths are Spanish nationals of North African descent. Investigation continues. PR will not say where incident occurred but it is virtually certain it was outside BGTW eastern side opposite runway. It also seems that part of the chase was within BGTW. (This is a text the AG sent to CM which he copied to CoP. He sent me the copy straight after he sent it to the CM after I asked him who was going to brief up to CM)
08 03 20 1220Hrs	MoJ	CoP	Whatsapp message Hi. How are the officers?
08 03 20 1312Hrs	CoP	MoJ	Whatsapp message

			Our officers are ok. We are constantly keeping tabs of their welfare. We are expecting them to come today at some point to provide a detailed account of what occurred. This is in accordance with our force policy on post incident procedure. Thanks fro your interest. Its much appreciated.
08 03 20 1333Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Thanks for the briefing. I'll do a quick note for London for when it hits the press. Line will be. Investigation ongoing. Spanish nationals from Ceuta (did you say one person was Portuguese). Not sure in whose waters incident took place. RGP seeking assistance from UK police authorities. No assistance needed from FCO at this stage.
08 03 20 1346Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Yes all correct. Indeed one was Portuguese.
08 03 20 1347Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Trying to clarify exact position of the collision.
08 03 20 1356Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok. Thanks.
09 03 20 1015Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Morning. I was with the AG last night and we wondered whether it would be worth having an update at some stage later this morning. We are keen to reach ioutnto Spain given talks this week in London (please protect).
09 03 20 1016Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Michael and I are happy to come to NMH when convenient for you. Nick
09 03 20 1125Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Happy for you to come to NMH. I am here now. Please feel free to come round.
09 03 20 1150Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Michael and I will come to you @ 12.05
09 03 20 1131Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message Morning Michael - Nick Pyle tells me you want to meet. I am here at my office.
09 03 20 1152Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Let me know when you're downstairs and I will come down to meet you.
09 03 20 1152hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Will do.
09 03 20 1205Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Just arrive in reception
09 03 20 1205	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Coming down
09 03 20 1433Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Joey - been working through the weekend on this collision case. I am going to email you, (or if you want Elka), to formally notify you of the incident and refer you the fact that an investigation is underway. For purposes of transparency, this investigation should be independent & therefore I am trying to source out a team willing to take on the task. In UK the IOPC (our PCB) would decide whether the investigation would be wholly independent of managed by them with an external 3rd party (senior officer) overseeing on their behalf. If we applied that locally, it would mean the PCB would manage the investigation and we'd require a senior UK Officer to oversee it on the PCB's behalf. The field work though would be done by RGP Professional Standards. It may not be the best model as the independence element is not total. Then again for practicalities sake it may prove useful. I need to discuss the matter further with you & perhaps Frank too but I'm conscious that you're away. I have held meetings with the AG & HE (Nick Pyle) and they support my intent to secure the best model to use. Regards Ian

09 03 20 1435Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Thanks - best model to use, in my view, would be to outsource completely
09 03 20 1435Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message If I'm honest, the PCB would not have the necessary expertise
09 03 20 1436Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Neither would anybody in the GPA, if we are honest
09 03 20 1436Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message I agree - I share your views. It would be most unfair on PCB.
09 03 20 1439Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message The GPA/PCB (Police Complaints Board) should though retain some control similar to that when they receive a complaint against Police. Technically there isn't a complaint as no family member has yet filed one but it could happen. Even if it didn't happen, the fact that deaths have occurred we should treat this as an external complaint and not as internal one generated by the RGP itself. This aside for the concurrent coroner's investigation that will also take place.
09 03 20 1440Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message There has been another death at sea and GPA was not involved - why is this different ?
09 03 20 1441Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Because it wasn't arising from contact with the Police. It was Customs.
09 03 20 1441Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message OK- I see
09 03 20 1441Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Customs have it easier
09 03 20 1442Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Ok - we would both be back tomorrow – (Referring to Mr Frank Carreras the PCB Chairman and himself. They were away from Gibraltar).
09 03 20 1443Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message I will work to get an independent team out. ASAP. & we can discuss tomorrow. Time is of essence, will explain in person..... Politics.

09 03 20 1444Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message I'll give you a call tomorrow as soon as I get back
09 03 20 1444Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Many thanks
09 03 20 1445Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message As I said, whatever is best practice etc
09 03 20 1445Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Thumb up emoji
09 03 20 1515Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Ian - I'm flying in to Malaga tomorrow at around 5.00 so I'll call you as soon as I'm in Gib - even if it's late in the evening... ok?
09 03 20 1525Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Of course. No probs.
09 03 20 1542	GPA CH	CoP	Thumb up emoji
10 03 20 1018Hrs	CoP	NPocc	Email Email sent to Ch Supt Goddard of the National Police Coordination Centre in the United Kingdom requesting aid for Op Kram. The ask is for an independent team to fly out to Gibraltar and assume conduct of the investigation.
10 03 20 1133Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Ian I've had to change travel plans and get the AVE instead of flying! I'll be in Gib later than expected - if you prefer, I can go to see you with Frank (hopefully) on Wednesday morning? Let me know if you are ok with this...
10 03 20 1229Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Yes fine. I am going to forward you an email I have sent to UK NPOC who coordinate requests for assistance. Its just for your information.
10 03 20 1256Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message OK
10 03 20 1259Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message When you can also let me know the time to meet tomorrow
10 03 20 1309Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Can do anytime. Shall we fix for 9am?
10 03 20 1317Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message See you then.
10 03 20 1328Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Got your email but for some reason I can't reply! Do you need me to do anything? Do you want me to see if Nick can help?
10 03 20 1328Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message Don't need anything from yourself, it was just for your info. Gonna speak with Nick now.
10 03 20 1328Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message OK.

10 03 20 1329Hrs	GPA CH	CoP	Whatsapp message Count on me – you know that
10 03 20 1332Hrs	CoP	GPA CH	Whatsapp message I know. Many Thanks.
10 03 20 1254Hrs	NPocc	MPS DPS CoP	Email – Email from Ch Supt Goddard of Npo advising the Metropolitan Police Directorate of Professional Standards that the RGP will be making a request for assistance via the FCO.
10 03 20 1302Hrs	CoP	NPocc MPS	Email – Email from CoP to Ch Supt Goddard of NPocc copied to Supt Wagstaff of the Met. Nigel – many thanks for you prompt action. His Excellency the Governor, Nick Pyle, the FCO's rep in Gibraltar is apprised. Regards Ian
10 03 20 1307Hrs	CoP	HE	Email YE – please see below thread (referring to the above emails with NPoCC) with the UK's National Police Coordination Centre in my efforts to source an independent investigation team. It is highly likely that the MPS will be taking on the task. You will read that that I have been asked to alert you of my request so that FCO and HO London link up. Best wishes Ian
10 03 20 1315Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message Nick – can you take a call?
10 03 20 1316Hrs	HE	CoP	Whatsapp message Happy to but in 10 minutes. Please call the mobile.
10 03 20 1317Hrs	CoP	HE	Whatsapp message OK (emoji symbol)
10 03 20 1336Hrs	HE	CoP	Email Ian, Thanks. I have asked FCO London to action and also and also if we need anything a touch more formal. I suspect we might need a letter.
11 03 20 1802Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message Michael - we have still not provided any official account to GC of the incident at sea and they have asked for a brief from us. I am now at a stage where I also require background details of those who were on-board the RHIB as this is being requested by the independent investitagtion team. I can hardly ask them for these details when we haven't released anything official to them. Its only prudent to do so I propose to send them the below details and on the back of this make our request to them. I would appreciate your views on what I propose to send. STARTS Ref: Initial Incident Report – Collision at Sea with fatalities At about 0300hrs on Sunday 8th March 2020, officers from the Royal Gibraltar Police Marine Interceptor Sir John Chapple (Bravo

			4) communicated with the Guardia Civil COS in relation to the presence of a suspect susect vessel activity in waters off the Playa de Santa Barbara, near to the eastern side between Gibraltar and La Linea. Bravo 4 deployed and remained ready to engage at a point approximately 3 miles East of the runway. Soon afterwards a chase ensued with the suspect vessel and Bravo 4 challenging the vessel, a 14mt semi-rigid hulled inflatable vessel (RHIB) crewed by 4 occupants, powered by 4 x 300hp engines and fitted with Garmin radar. The said vessel was suspected to be involved in illicit drugs trafficking activity. During the course of a high-speed pursuit shortly afterwards, there was a collision between both vessels, and this resulted in the death 2 of the 4 RHIB's occupants, namely: [redacted] [redacted] The remaining 2 occupants sustained injuries of various types, and were conveyed to St Bernard's Hospital in Gibraltar where they received treatment for their injuries and later discharged. [redacted] Both [redacted] and [redacted] were arrested on suspicion of Importing a Prohibited Import (14mt RHIB), Dangerous Navigation and Obstructing Police. [redacted] gave a "No comment" interview at New Mole House Police station and [redacted] gave only a brief account of events stating that he had been 1 of the 4 RHIB's occupants and that they had been chased by Police between Gibraltar and Spanish waters prior to the collision between both vessels. Both [redacted] and [redacted] were later bailed out in the sum of £2500.00 to return to New Mole House Police Headquarters at 1100hrs on the 4th June 2020 whilst enquiries continue.

			A Coroner's investigation is already underway into the deaths of [redacted] and [redacted], and post-mortem examinations will be conducted by a Forensic Pathologist on Wednesday 11th March and Thursday 12th March 2020. The Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police has sought assistance of specialist investigators from the United Kingdom. ENDS
11 03 20 1858Hrs	HE	CoP	Email Ian, Good to hear about progress re Met help. Are we any clearer as to where the collision took place? London are keen to know whether it was inside or outside BGTW and if the latter, approximately by how far. Regards Nick
11 03 20 1907Hrs	CoP	HE	Email response Nick – we are getting there on establishing exact co-ordinates of where collision took place. We are tying up some loose ends and probing further from WHSS and should be able to confirm soon. It is, high probable it did occur out BGTW. We are getting plotted which will provide as better understanding in terms of distance from BGTW. Best regards Ian
11 03 20 1909Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message HE (Nick) is asking for confirmation of where collision took place as London are keen to know. I have informed him along the same lines that you advised CM ie that is highly probable that it happened outside BGTW.

18 03 20 1530Hrs	CoP	AG	Whatsapp message Michael - Held video conference with GC as they wouldn't meet face to face because of the pandemic. They were obviously cagey with our UK colleagues but it served well to demonstrate that we were totally transparent. The UK team were happy with the meeting. What I was able to elicit from GC is that a judge is still to be assigned the matter & it is likely that it'll be a judge from La Linea. Again because of their lock down there are delays in their courts. GC anticipate that when appointed, the judge will request information and accounts from us. What form this will take is not clear - the judge could potentially summons our officers to provide their statements in person or simply request their accounts via police to police channels. What mechanisms we should rely on to facilitate this, were we to oblige, is something we'll need to discuss. GC also expects the family of the deceased to file a complaint in their courts to seek compensation. This will no doubt complicate matters for us as the judge may be swayed to look at the matter from a different perspective in terms of where the collision took place. GC are requesting from us for photos of the vessels, post mortem reports & statements from those involved in the collision. We have to carefully study this request and weigh the pros and cons of withholding the data or provide it at some point. Speak soon.

07 04 20 1000Hrs	AG	CoP	Meeting To discuss strategy of how we were going to deal with the Op Kram. I expressed concern with what my officers could be facing once a Spanish judge was assigned to the case. AG was stressing that we had to focus that this was a joint effort by GC and RGP to tackle organised crime and that yes, perhaps the RGP went too far by going out of BGTW but in essence they were discharging a law enforcement role and he would be happy to defend that position. Discussed the correlations with the Alcaidesa incident where RGP officers also went beyond their remit in to Spain and how that particular case had dragged on for 10 years and therefore I wanted a Gibraltar PLC strategy to deal with the case if only to keep on file until such time as we had to activate it. AG fully agreed with me and undertook to discuss with the CM whom he had quick access to.
22 04 20 1200Hrs	AG DPP	CoP	Meeting – To discuss Op Kram. Correspondence being received from the lawyers representing the families indicating that they would be making civil claims for damages. I enquired about legal representation and again the need to agree a [Gibraltar] strategy given all the strands the matter had (i) Coroners inquiry, (ii) Professional Standards investigation, (iii) the Spanish dimension in terms of courts and politics AG undertook to keep the matter alive with CM pending any developments on the political front. Spanish judge had still not been appointed because of the Covid19 lockdown measures in Spain. DPP said the civil claim hadn't been filed yet so there was no need to engage counsel as yet. AG wanted to have sight of the final investigation report from the UK before giving further thought to the strategy.
11 05 20 1353Jts	CoP	CM MoJ AG	Email CM- MoJ- AG For your information I refer to the attached document which is a response to parliamentary question in Spain. He question was asked by Agustin Rosety from VOX. It has been published by the Senate today. I have not shared it with HE in case you wanted to touch base with him yourselves. I draw your attention to the 3rd paragraph that according the the Spanish Foreigh Ministry had not made a request for support on the night in question. We do, however, have evidence there was a constant exchange of communication between GC and RGP on the movements of the suspect vessel which they were with their SIVE costal carneras and relaying this to our crew. The GC maritime assets deployed in the area that night. I am asking SB to monitor social media because no Rosety will take to posting about the matter. Regards Ian

1. INTRODUCTION

1.1. Instructions Received

1.1.1. I have been instructed by the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) to investigate the collision between the RGP vessel 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' and an RHIB suspected of illegal drug activity ('SUSPECT RHIB') in the western Mediterranean Sea.

1.1.2. I am to provide my opinion on:

i. The events leading to the collision

ii. The territorial waters where the incident occurred

iii. The role of the RGP Officers in the collision

iv. The other factors that may have contributed to the collision

1.1.3. I have not been instructed to consider the policing and/or legal background to the illegal drug trade and I have not done so.

1.1.4. My qualifications and experience are described in my curriculum vitae which is included as Appendix A of this report. In summary, I have previously investigated fatal accidents that have occurred on vessels at sea, primarily while as an Inspector of Marine Accidents at the UK's Marine Accident Investigation Branch (MAIB). I have also attended Coroner's Courts to support my reports. I have also previously investigated a fatal marine accident in Gibraltar that involved a government operated patrol vessel.

1.2. Scope of this Report

1.2.1. I open this report by giving the background to the sequence of events at the material time.

1.2.2. My conclusions are contained at Section 5 of this report.

1.2.3. I am aware of my duty to the Court and have signed a statement of truth to that effect at Section 6 of this report.

1.3. Background

1.3.1. I have outlined the sequence of events, as I understand them, below. All times are local, that is UTC +1 hour unless otherwise stated.

1.3.2. The Police Officers on board 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', as required by the RGPs Post Incident Procedures (PIP), are referred to as Officer One, Officer Two and Officer Three.

1.3.3. The drugs trade between Morocco and Spain is well known, and well established. The use of high-speed craft to import illegal drugs from Morocco into Spain has been established over a long period.

1.4. Position Data Recovered from 'SUSPECT RHIB'

1.4.1. All the navigation systems found on board 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' were checked; however, no relevant data, as the Automatic Identification System (AIS) and Global Positioning System (GPS) systems were apparently turned off, was available to be recovered.

1.5. Position Data Recovered from 'SUSPECT RHIB'

1.5.1. 'SUSPECT RHIB' was fitted with a Garmin NAVnet 3D radar/chart plotter which saved only its position data; therefore, the GPS position, speed-over-the-ground and course-over-the-ground were not recorded.

1.6. Track of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' – Rapid Replay Reconstruction

1.6.1. A Solis Marine Rapid Replay reconstruction was produced to show the track of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' for the time of the incident (Figure 1). The reconstruction used the GPS position data recovered from the 'SUSPECT RHIB's radar/chart plotter. The technical comments on the Rapid Replay reconstruction are contained at Appendix B and the data recovered from the NAVnet 3D chart plotter is at Appendix C.

1.7. WHSS Infrared CCTV Footage

1.7.1. Infrared CCTV was recorded from two cameras that were controlled from Windy Hill Signal Station (WHSS). [redacted]

1.8. Narrative

1.8.1. On Saturday 7 March, at around 22:00, the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' reported for duty at New Mole House, before they deployed to the RGP Marine Base at Gun Wharf Quay, also known as Gibraltar Government Maritime Station (GGMS). Shortly after 22:00 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' departed from RGP Marine Base to carry out patrols of Ocean Village.

1.8.2. At around 01:30 on 8 March, at around 01:30, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' departed from Ocean Village and returned to Gun Wharf Quay to relieve the afternoon crew at the conclusion of their shift at 02:00. At 02:35, 'SUSPECT RHIB' headed towards the Spanish port of Puerto de La Atunara from her position 11 nautical miles (NM) to the east.

1.8.3. A mobile phone call, at an unknown time, was received on the RGP Marine section mobile phone from WHSS stating that there was an unknown vessel without navigation lights on the eastern side of Gibraltar, heading westwards towards the coast.

1.8.4. The Coxswain, Senior Coxswain (Officer One), called the Spanish Guardia Civil by the marine section mobile phone and informed them of the information they had received from WHSS. The sighting, presumably by infrared CCTV, of the unlit vessel was then confirmed by Guardia Civil.

Officer One then advised Guardia Civil that he would deploy to the Eastern Side of Gibraltar; however, the objective of the deployment is unknown.

1.8.5. The three-man crew boarded 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' at the Marine Base and deployed to the Eastern Side of Gibraltar. Officer Two had the Inter-operations handheld police radio; Officer Three had the police operations handheld radio. Officers Two and Three were supplied with hand-held LED torches.

1.8.6. The radar was turned on, and the GPS chart plotter was left off as Officer 1 stated that the equipment reduced his night vision. The chart plotter also activated the vessel's AIS, which was therefore also not turned on. The crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' carried out pre-departure checks that included: engine and fuel status; condition of the vessel's foam collar; that portable VHF radio's batteries were charged, and that functioning torches were available.

1.8.7. Officer One sat in the conning position (starboard forward), Officer Two was on the port side forward position and Officer Three sat in the seat on the starboard side behind Officer One.

1.8.8. At 03:16 the Rapid Replay reconstruction and CCTV showed that 'SUSPECT RHIB' arrived off Puerto de La Atunara (Figure 2), in a position close to the breakwater of the port.

1.8.9. As 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' arrived on the eastern side of Gibraltar, Officer One received a mobile phone call from the Guardia Civil stating that 'SUSPECT RHIB' was by the Puerto de La Atunara breakwater for, what they believed to be, a change of crew and a resupply of food. The Guardia Civil asked 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' to head to the east of the port and to wait.

1.8.10. At 03:26:16, 'SUSPECT RHIB' (Figure 3) with four crew on board departed Puerto de La Atunara and headed north and then north-easterly away from the Spanish coast.

1.8.11. Officer One reported that he received another call from the Guardia Civil who stated (it is not known whether this was a request or an instruction) that 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was to remain in their current location as 'SUSPECT RHIB' was heading directly for their location.

1.8.12. [redacted]

1.8.13. Officer One reported that 'SUSPECT RHIB' then passed between 5 metres and 10 metres in front of the bow of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE then followed the 'SUSPECT RHIB' in a high speed 'hot' pursuit.

1.8.14. Officer One stated that his intention was to identify the suspects and determine whether 'SUSPECT RHIB' was carrying an illegal cargo. Officer One noted in his statement that 'SUSPECT RHIB' appeared to be:

> "...either a prohibited import over 6m in length, a fast launch having an engine capacity over 200 horsepower and in any event was not displaying any navigational lights".

1.8.15. Officer One gauged that the heading of 'SUSPECT RHIB' was in a south-easterly direction, and he expected 'SUSPECT RHIB' was heading towards Morocco. Officer two reported that 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was positioned on the 'SUSPECT RHIB's starboard side.

1.8.16. Officer One reported that 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' then approached the 'SUSPECT RHIB's port side. Officer two opened the port side door and shone his Dragon torch on to the vessel.

1.8.17. 'SUSPECT RHIB' was illuminated by the blue beacon lights and the Dragon torch held by Officer Three. Objects were thrown by the 'SUSPECT RHIB's most aft crewman and the objects were hitting 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'.

1.8.18. At 03:31, as shown by the Rapid Replay (Figure 4), 'SUSPECT RHIB' made a sharp turn to starboard. The evading manoeuvres of 'SUSPECT RHIB' sprayed seawater onto 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' which reduced the visibility and therefore force it to slow down. Officer One trimmed down his outboard engines and slowed down when necessary, which provided him greater manoeuvrability with greater water plane area. Officer One also observed that 'SUSPECT RHIB's outboard engines were still trimmed up, which produced significant spray at slower speeds.

1.8.19. Three minutes later, at 03:34 (Figure 5), a second sharp turn to starboard by 'SUSPECT RHIB' was recorded, followed by another turn to starboard at 03:37.

1.8.20. Officer One then stated that following the two turns made to starboard he saw the 'SUSPECT RHIB' make a sharp turn to port, he therefore placed the propulsion into neutral and attempted to turn to starboard to avoid 'SUSPECT RHIB' by slowing down and turning away. Officer Two stated that the 'SUSPECT RHIB' passed very close to 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' and that the spray created caused the windows to be covered and removed any visibility. It is not known whether the fitted window wipers were operated, or whether they were effective. Officer Two stated that he:

> "then felt an extremely large and sudden impact that caused our vessel to stop abruptly and noticed that we immediately began to tilt to starboard".

1.8.21. Officer Three stated that he:

> "felt a sudden impact and heard a short creaking sound as we continued rolling to the right".

And then:

> "the starboard side window slam [sic] into the water with a sudden impact. A large amount of dark water flushed into the cabin..."

1.8.22. At 03:38:56, the Rapid Replay reconstruction (Figure 6) shows a very sharp turn to port, followed almost immediately by the collision when the 'SUSPECT RHIB' is seen to stop in position 36° 10.0' N 005° 12.5' W, around 6.1 NM east of Puerto de La Atunara.

1.8.23. Officer One stated that he felt the impact and that 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' then heeled heavily to starboard. There was then a significant ingress of seawater through the open windows on the starboard side. The crewman Gomes Serena of 'SUSPECT RHIB' stated that the 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' collided with the "rear left-hand side", and "went over" 'SUSPECT RHIB'.

1.8.24. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' then righted, and Officer One saw 'SUSPECT RHIB' on his port side and could hear of the 'SUSPECT RHIB's crew men shouting. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' manoeuvred her starboard side alongside 'SUSPECT RHIB's starboard side. Officer Two only then realised that there had been a collision.

1.8.25. Officer Two boarded the bow of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' from the stern of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', while Officer Three held the two vessels alongside each other. Two crewmen were seen to be the centre console of the 'SUSPECT RHIB'; one was apparently dead, the second seriously injured. Officer One and Officer Two, apparently shocked at the situation they faced, advised the other two 'SUSPECT RHIB' crewmen standing at the bow that they would tow them back to Gibraltar where they would be met by an ambulance.

1.8.26. Officer One and Officer Two re-boarded 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' and Officers Two and Three connected a long tow line from the stern of the vessel to the 'D' Ring on the bow of 'SUSPECT RHIB'. Officer One then contacted WHSS and informed them that there was one fatality and possibly a second and that they were heading back to the RGP Marine Base. Officer One then contacted his duty Sergeant to arrange an ambulance crew to stand by for their arrival at the Base. Officer One then received mobile phone calls from the Guardia Civil and the Port Boarding Officer, although the purpose of the calls is unknown.

1.8.27. At 03:46, about 7 minutes after the collision, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' headed back to Gibraltar with the 'SUSPECT RHIB' in tow around 30 metres astern, with Officer Three watching 'SUSPECT RHIB' from the stern of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's starboard outer outboard engine apparently failed following the collision, and the towing speed was reduced.

1.8.28. At 04:31, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' stopped around 1 NM north-east of Europa Point and was met by the Her Majesty's Customs (HMC) vessel 'HMC SEEKER' (Figure 7), which then came alongside 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's starboard side. Officer Two instructed the Customs Officers to manoeuvre 'HMC SEEKER' alongside the 'SUSPECT RHIB', then to transfer all the crew to their vessel and take them ashore for treatment.

1.8.29. Officer Two, Officer Three and the Customs Officers transferred the seriously injured crewman and the two other crewmen to 'HMC SEEKER' which headed back towards Gibraltar at a fast speed. The dead crewman was left onboard the 'SUSPECT RHIB'. At 04:41 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' resumed a heading towards Gibraltar with 'SUSPECT RHIB' in tow. At 04:36, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' crossed into British Gibraltar Territorial Waters (BGTW) and at 04:57, passed south of Europa Point. At 05:20, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' berthed alongside the RGP Marine Base with the assistance of a Gibraltar Defence Police RHIB.

1.8.30. Shortly after their arrival the three officers were informed that a PIP process had been initiated and on the morning of 8 March the officers provided initial Stage 3 statements. One of the crew of 'SUSPECT RHIB' provided a statement to the RGP on 8 March. RGP Stage 4 PIP statements were taken from the three RGP Officers on 16 March.

1.9. Environmental Conditions

1.9.1. Two of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's crew reported the conditions to be moonlit with calm seas and good visibility. The weather conditions at the time have yet to be verified.

1.10. Post-mortem Report

1.10.1. A preliminary post-mortem was carried out on the two dead crew from the 'SUSPECT RHIB' on 11 and 12 March 2020 (Appendix E). [redacted], believed to be dead immediately following the collision, was stated to be 40 years old with death due to:

> "extensive head injuries as well as to the left shoulder. The injuries are consistent with forceful impact to posterior left aspect of the trunk / head..." such injuries are non-survivable and would likely have caused immediate loss of consciousness and/or death".

1.10.2. [redacted], who was found seriously injured immediately following the collision, was stated to be 49 years old, with death due to:

> "...extensive chest, spine and upper limb injuries. The injuries are consistent with forceful impact to the back with the suggestion of repeated pattern, possibly associated with a rotating object... Such injuries are not survivable but may have been associated with limited consciousness. Any delays in resuscitation are unlikely to have affected the outcome".

2. Background Information

2.1. Crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'

2.1.1. Officer One was a Senior Coxswain and was the coxswain in control of the vessel at the time of the collision. He had been a Police Officer since [redacted] and joined the Marine Section in [redacted] becoming a fully qualified coxswain in [redacted]. His training included Royal Yachting Association (RYA) operated STCW 95 (Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers) courses in sea survival, first aid, navigation and firefighting as well as a week-long course that included radar and VHF radio training which included a practical assessment. Officer One also successfully completed a two-week long fast RHIB course which included high speed navigation and pacing (pacing is the manoeuvring alongside of two patrol vessels at speed). No pursuit training was provided.

2.1.2. Officer Two joined the RGP in [redacted] He gained an RYA Powerboat Level 2 qualification, RYA Day Skipper Theory qualification and was trained to STCW 95 standard in sea survival, first aid, navigation and firefighting in [redacted]. Officer Two qualified as a Gibraltar Maritime Administration (GMA) Boat Master in [redacted] and completed an RGP in-house GMA Interceptor RHIB course in [redacted]. He also held valid VHF radio and radar operator qualifications.

2.1.3. Officer Three was a Police Officer in the United Kingdom from [redacted]. He joined the RGP in [redacted]. Officer Three had no marine qualifications.

2.2. Crew of 'SUSPECT RHIB'

2.2.1. The crew of 'SUSPECT RHIB' consisted of four crewmen. One of the surviving crewmen, [redacted], identified the crew as redacted - seat 1 (forward), [redacted] seat 2, [redacted] - seat 3, [redacted]) - Seat 4 (aft), (Figure 8).

2.3 Position Data Recovered from 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'

2.3.1 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was fitted with a Chart Plotter; however, the GPS that provided the navigation data to the radar plotter and the chart plotter was turned off. No navigation data was recovered from the vessel. No AIS data was transmitted, and therefore the GPS position, speed-over-the-ground, heading and course-over-the-ground were not recorded.

2.4. The Royal Gibraltar Police - Marine Section Vessels

2.4.1. The RGP Marine Section operates the following vessels with the AIS systems as fitted onboard:

[redacted]

2.4.2. The RGP Marine Section also consists of five Response Teams, with a support Section. The reporting structure of the Marine Section is shown at (Figure 9).

2.8. RGP Marine Section - Pre-departure Checks

2.8.1. Prior to the deployment of a vessel one of the marine trained crew will carry out 'pre-checks'. That is intended to ensure that the vessel has enough fuel and that the fitted equipment, including navigation and radar equipment, is working.

2.9. RGP Marine Section - Records

2.9.1. While communications are recorded by WHSS, and an end of shift email sent, no logbooks or records were apparently kept on board 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'.

2.10. RGP Marine Section - Instructions

2.10.1. The RGP Marine Section Instructions (The Instructions), described by RGP Police Sergeant Mr. Stewart Stone in an email as 'Rules of Engagement' which were issued on 8 July 2016 and are at Appendix D.

2.10.2. The Instructions stated inter-alia:

> "Deployment into different jurisdictions surrounding the territory of Gibraltar are described below. Officers will only operate within BGTW unless in accordance with the specific situations described in paragraphs 3 and 4 below. These instructions will be adhered to until further notice. All previous instructions are rescinded.
>
> ...Officers are NOT authorised to operate outside BGTW and in International Waters unless when responding to a situation as described in 3(a) or 3(b)
>
> [3] a. Participating in a Search and Rescue operation
>
> [3] b. Responding to an incident where there is an imminent and serious risk to life. Officers are NOT authorised to operate outside BGTW and in Spanish Waters unless responding to a situation as described in paragraph 4(a).
> [4] a. Participating in a Search and Rescue operation at the invitation of Spanish authorities."

2.10.3. On 17 February 2016 RGP Marine Sections' Inspector Albert J Buhagiar sent an email to the Marine Section that stated:

> "I would like to remind ALL of the current and existing instructions that under no circumstances are you allowed to police/patrol outside the limits of BGTW. The only exception would be in a GPA led SAR [search and rescue] operation or of a vessel or person(s) in distress. In any case, you should first seek authority from either myself, Sgt. Stone or the Duty Officer.
> Furthermore, the AIS on the vessel being used will be switched-on at all times..."

2.10.4. The defined area of operation, as used by all government operated vessels based in Gibraltar, was shown on a map located in the cabin of 'SIR JOHN Chapple' (Figure 10).

2.10.5. An RGP File Note created on 12 March 2020, four days after the collision, stated that RGP Police Officer DC62 APAP had reviewed all DTGMs on the police network back to 10 April 2016 relating to hot pursuits and BGTW. The DTGM dated 19 April 2017 stated that the Marine Section must only use vessels with AIS. Also, a DTGM, dated 15 November 2019, stated that following incidents where missiles were thrown at crews during a pursuit, that all marine crew wear their PPE and helmets.

2.10.6. An undated Marine Section Standard Operating Procedures (Appendix... stated:

'Marine crews are to conduct systematic periodic patrols of Gibraltar's coastlines throughout their tour of duty.

Drugs trafficking

The straits of Gibraltar and its environs is a well-known smuggling route with drug and human trafficking taking place from the North African coastline and territorial waters throughout there [sic] tour of Duty. They will pursue suspect vessels in a determined though safe manner within our territorial waters and liaise with our Spanish counterparts."

2.10.7. Anecdotal evidence from the RGP Marine Support Unit's Senior Marine Mechanic stated that 'hot pursuits' into Spanish waters could be permitted with the approval of the Guardia Civil.

2.11. Tactical Contact

2.11.1. The Marine Support Unit Officer stated that there was a 'No Force' policy for contact; however, no procedure detailing the actions that can be taken has been identified in the documentation made available. The normal operating procedure was stated, by the Marine Support Unit Officer, [redacted]

3. CONSIDERATIONS

3.1. Position of the Interception

3.1.2. The Infrared CCTV (Figure 17) shows the time of interception as 16m 59s into the recording. This time is 2m 59s after the departure of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' from Puerto de La Atunara, at 03:26:16. Therefore, the time of the interception is around 03:29:15.

3.2. Position of the Collision

3.2.1. The Rapid Replay (Figure 19) indicates that the point of the collision between the two vessels, at around 03:38:56, was 36° 09.96' N 005° 12.51' W.

3.2.3. From the Rapid Replay, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', towing the 'SUSPECT RHIB can be seen to stop when it rendezvoused with 'HMC SEARCHER' at around 04:30 as shown at Figure 21 below. It would have been clear to the officers, with significant experience of operating in the area, that they were in Spanish waters and well to the north of BGTW. It would also have been clear to the officers, with significant experience of operating in the area, that they were in Spanish waters and well to the north of BGTW.

3.2.4 The time of and position of the collision was verified with the continuous WHSS infrared CCTV footage, maintained from the collision time until the rendezvous of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' with 'HMC SEEKER'. The video showed that the two vessels rendezvoused around 50 minutes after the collision at 04:29 (Figure 22), therefore confirming the time of the collision as occurring at around 03:39.

3.2.5. During the collision, as discussed at 3.9.6, 'SUSPECT RHIB's radar was heavily damaged. The Garmin GPSmap radar/chart plotter recorded and displayed the loss of radar signal as an alarm. The alarm recorded the time as 03:39 on 8 March 2020 in position 36°09.953' N 005° 12.511' W (Figure 23).

3.2.6 The position is in the same location as identified by the Rapid Replay reconstruction (Figure 19). The 'Radar Service Lost' alarm also confirms both the time and the position of the collision.

3.3 Position of the Interception, Chase and Collision

3.3.1 While there was no digital evidence recovered from 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', the digital data recovered from 'SUSPECT RHIB', and the proximity of the two vessels shown in the CCTV recording, confirmed the position of the two vessels throughout the pursuit. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's chart plotter, turned off at the time of the collision, showed the limits of BGTW (Figure 24).

3.3.2. While the limits of BGTW were known to the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' the engagement, chase and collision with 'SUSPECT RHIB were all carried out at least 1.5 NM beyond the limits of BGTW in Spanish waters.

3.3.3. While the limits of BGTW were not visible to the coxswain on the chart plotter the area of the northern limit of BGTW is generally indicated by reference to the lights from Gibraltar airport. As 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was significantly to the north of the airport and off the Spanish port, it would have been clear to the officers, with significant experience of operating in the area, that they were in Spanish waters and well to the north of BGTW.

3.4. Identification of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' Crew

3.4.1. The crew of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' were seen by the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' to be seated in tandem during the chase. Due to the speed and tight rapid turns made during the pursuit it is probable that the crew were seated at the time of the collision.

3.4.2. [redacted] stated that he was in seat 4 and [redacted] (full name unknown), the other survivor, was in Seat 3. The two deceased crewmen were, therefore, located in seat 1 and in seat 2. It cannot be stated with any certainty who the coxswain was; however, the Coxswain - in Seat 1 - was likely, due to the head injuries he sustained and the available evidence of human remains around the console visor, to be [redacted]. The crewman in seat two who was found alive - but died shortly after the collision - was, by elimination, most likely to be [redacted].

3.5. Condition of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' - Post Collision

3.5.1. The starboard bow of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was damaged with indentations close to the serrated log defenders fitted to the stem (Figure 25).

3.5.2. The starboard bow was marked with regular deep indentations, around 10mm apart, with heavy -apparently recent- gouges in the same area (Figure 26).

3.5.3. Scratch marks were evident along almost the full length of the starboard hull of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' (Figure 27).

3.5.6. The coxswain of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' stated that the starboard engine did not work after the collision. The port outboard propeller was damaged; however, it is not known for certain when that damage occurred. It is considered likely, as the damage would cause notable vibration at speed, that this occurred at the time of the collision.

3.5.7. Water was evident in the forward cabin of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'. This water flooded into the cabin following the ingress of water through the starboard side windows, indicating a significant starboard heel during and immediately after the collision with the 'SUSPECT RHIB'.

3.6. Condition of 'SUSPECT RHIB' – Post Collision

3.6.1. In addition to the four crew, the RHIB was loaded, in the stern section and immediately forward of the console, with a total weight of 801Kg that was made up of:

i. Fuel – 448 kg (in 27 containers)

ii. Food and drinks – 298kg

iii. Clothing and other items – 55kg

3.6.2. While fitted with navigation lights, there was evidence that a significant effort had been made to ensure that no lights were visible from the vessel, including the displays and indicator lights (Figure 30).

www.pol-s.marine.com

3.7. 'SUSPECT RHIB' – Collision Damage

3.7.1. The port quarter, and stern section, were significantly damaged as shown at Figure 31.

3.7.2. The port outboard engine sustained the most significant damage, with the engine mountings broken (Figure 32).

3.7.3. The port outboard engine flywheel was heavily damaged (Figure 33); the engine would have stopped instantly following the collision. The port inboard engine was also damaged; with the timing belt broken so that this engine would also have stopped immediately.

3.7.4. The jockey seats that formed part of the centre console and battery storage were heavily damaged (Figure 34). The aft two, of the four seats, were bent and distorted. It is noticeable that the two forward jockey seats, where the crewmen were seated, had very little damage when compared with the heavily damaged aft two seats where the two surviving crewmen were seated. The reason for that inconsistency is not known.

3.7.5. The Furuno radar was heavily damaged and would have stopped working immediately after the collision (Figure 35). The starboard inflatable collar was damaged. That damage is likely to have been caused by the collapsing radar mast, or during the initial contact with 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'.

3.7.7. A gouge on the starboard console is likely to be a witness mark from the (starboard) hull of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' (Figure 37).

3.7.9. The starboard forward collar was damaged, as seen at Figure 39

3.7.10. It is considered likely that this damage was more likely caused as the two vessels came alongside after the collision, or when 'HMC SEARCHER' berthed alongside starboard to starboard after the incident. This is supported by the direction of the damage shown at (Figure 40)

The bodies of the deceased and badly injured crewmen were found on the starboard side aft between the seating and the collar (Figure 41).

3.8 Events onboard 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' Prior to the Collision

3.8.1 Following the initial communication from WHSS, Officer One started the response to proceed to the eastern side of Gibraltar. The communication from Guardia Civil confirmed the location of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' which was clearly in Spanish waters.

3.8.2 The Rapid Replay and CCTV evidence showed that the 'SUSPECT RHIB' was outside of BGTW and that the objective of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was to wait for the departing 'SUSPECT RHIB' and to intercept the vessel if possible, regardless of the marine authority responsible for the area of operation.

3.8.3 The pursuit was made at high speed with 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' initially catching up with the 'SUSPECT RHIB'. The close pursuit, with blue lights on, with Officer Two and Officer Three using the Dragon Torches was close enough to observe the occupants, and for 'SUSPECT RHIB's crew to respond by throwing objects and making sharp turns to deter the RGP vessel.

3.8.4. The officers on board 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' responded to the thrown objects by closing the doors and windows. When the rapid turns were made by 'SUSPECT RHIB' the officers responded by trimming the engines down, to make the vessel more manoeuvrable and able to respond to the fast turns of the 'SUSPECT RHIB'.

3.8.5. The quick turns of 'SUSPECT RHIB' produced spray which significantly reduced the visibility of Officer One and Officer Two. The reduced visibility in the cabin considerably increased the risk of collision with the evasive 'SUSPECT RHIB'. Only by slowing down substantially, and increasing the distance from 'SUSPECT RHIB' would the risk of collision been appreciably reduced.

3.8.6. When 'SUSPECT RHIB' turned immediately in front of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' the spray, as reported by Officer One and Officer Two reduced the visibility to zero. None of the RGP Officers could recall witnessing the collision occur.

3.8.7. Although Officer One stated that he took avoiding action by stopping and turning to starboard, his actions were insufficient to avoid the collision. The speed of the collision led to 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' passing over the top of 'SUSPECT RHIB' and, once clear, landing on their starboard side at a large angle which led to the water ingress into the cabin.

3.9. Events on 'SUSPECT RHIB' Prior to the Collision

3.9.1. The 'SUSPECT RHIB' displaying no navigation, or other lights and accelerating away from 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was navigating in a manner which would arouse suspicion as to its activities. The RHIB was of a size, type and with an engine power of vessels used to transport drugs from Morocco to Spain. During the chase, missiles were thrown from 'SUSPECT RHIB' and the evasive action taken was enough to reduce the visibility of the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE'.

3.9.2. The 'SUSPECT RHIB', as would be expected, did not have the capability to transmit AIS data.

3.9.3. The Rapid Replay (Figure 6) shows a change of track, which indicates a rapid turn to port, following the two turns made to starboard, immediately prior to the collision.

3.9.4. It was reported by the coxswain of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' that the 'SUSPECT RHIB' was operating with the outboard engines 'trim up'. It would be expected that when travelling at speed, on a steady heading, that the vessel would be operating with the outboard engine trimmed up (away from the hull). While manoeuvring trimmed up the boat would be less manoeuvrable; however, as the vessel turned it would also produce a wash spray that might disorientate a pursuing vessel by reducing its visibility.

3.9.5. The CCTV of the collision is unclear as to the manoeuvres of either vessel immediately prior to the collision.

3.10. The Angle of Incidence of the Collision

3.10.1. It is apparent that, for the injuries and damage to both vessels to have occurred, and the splash of water seen on the video, that 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' passed, at least partly over the top of 'SUSPECT RHIB'. The crewman from 'SUSPECT RHIB' stated that 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' collided with the port quarter of 'SUSPECT RHIB'. Without video or additional digital evidence, it is not possible to say with certainty how the two vessels collided. The witness mark on the console indicates the possible angle of the hull of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' as it then passed over 'SUSPECT RHIB' (Figure 42).

3.10.2. Marks from 'SUSPECT RHIB's port outboard engine's damaged fly wheel very closely matched the markings on the starboard bow of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' (Figure 43). That also matches the statement of the crewman of the 'SUSPECT RHIB' that the bow of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' collided with the port quarter of 'SUSPECT RHIB'.

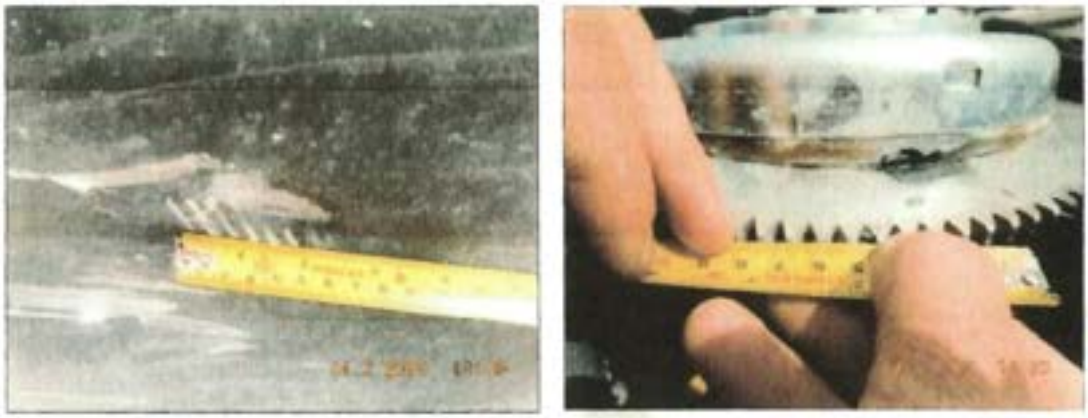

Figure 43 Marks on 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' compared with the teeth of the flywheel on 'SUSPECT RHIB's engine

3.10.3. Following the collision, all the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' reported that the vessel rolled to starboard and then hit the water with significant force. After 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' righted, the vessel's crew stated that they observed the 'SUSPECT RHIB' on 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's port side.

3.10.4. To establish, with further certainty, the angle of incidence and the path of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' in relation to 'SUSPECT RHIB' additional modelling of the two vessels would be required to produce an accurate picture of how the two vessels probably interacted.

3.11. RGP Marine Section - Use of AIS

3.11.1. Prior to departure from the RGP Marine Base, Officer One turned on the radar, however, he did not turn on the chart plotter or the GPS that supplied the Radar Unit with position data, stating that it interfered with his night vision. By leaving the chart plotter off, 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' did not transmit AIS data, which would have allowed the vessel's position data to be tracked and recorded. It was also possible that the 'SUSPECT RHIB' would have been able to detect and track 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' by AIS as they approached.

3.11.2. There has been no evidence produced to support Officer One's statement that the brightness of the chart plotter interfered with night vision, or that the alleged issue had previously been reported to managers. There was a clear instruction that the vessel's AIS system should always be turned on when in service and neither Officer One nor Officer Two complied with that instruction.

3.12 RGP Marine Section - Use of Navigation Equipment

3.12.1. The chart plotter and the GPS unit that fed the radar display were turned off for the duration of the deployment. With no GPS and no chart plotter displayed, the two marine officers were reliant on visual navigation and the radar picture. Officer One stated that the range of the radar was set to [redacted]. That range setting would have been suitable for detecting vessels within the range, but not the land, or for assessing whether a risk of collision existed. The officers were therefore solely reliant on visual navigation. However, the limits of BGTW were shown on the chart plotter. There were apparently no guidance/instruction/orders as to what navigation equipment was to be used when on patrol, either in daylight or at night.

3.12.2. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was fitted with a magnetic compass which would have shown the vessel's heading. Officer One stated that he was travelling in a south-easterly direction; Officer Three stated that 'SUSPECT RHIB' was travelling in a southerly direction, both of which were incorrect.

3.12.3. By not using the available navigation equipment while navigating at night with no position monitoring, other than by eye, the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' showed that a poor standard of navigation was being practiced at the material time.

3.13. RGP Marine Section - Application of the Instructions

3.13.1. The Instructions were clear that the area of operation for law enforcement was solely within BGTW. It is not known why the coxswain and the two officers headed into Spanish waters to intercept 'SUSPECT RHIB' and to continue to chase the RHIB in Spanish waters until the time of the collision.

3.13.2. The Instructions stated that "They will pursue suspect vessels in a determined though safe manner within our territorial waters and liaise with our Spanish counterparts". The Instructions also stated that the safety of the crew was the priority; however, the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' placed themselves so close to the 'SUSPECT RHIB' as to place themselves and the crew of 'SUSPECT RHIB' in considerable danger.

3.13.3. The crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' did not comply with the Instructions that were issued.

3.14. RGP Marine Section - Equipment Provided

3.14.1. [redacted]

3.14.2.

3.15. Pursuit Training

3.15.1. The two qualified marine crew had training in professional skills and for pacing at speed. However, there was no training in carrying out pursuits of suspect vessels who would be taking evasive action to avoid being apprehended. While numerous pursuits have been carried out, the coxswains' experience in pursuits was learned on the job, watching more experienced coxswains as they trained. Pursuit methods are therefore developed and understood by the coxswains, but without RGP Marine Section management standards or proper established oversight in place.

3.16. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' - Actions Following the Collision

3.16.1. Following the collision, two of the crew boarded the 'SUSPECT RHIB'. It was clear to the crew, due to the severity of their injuries, that one crewman was dead, a second was very seriously injured and that the two other crewmen were injured and in a state of shock. The crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' were also apparently shocked by the situation they faced, they did report the accident and then decided how to tow the 'SUSPECT RHIB' back to the base. However, there was no attempt to provide the seriously injured crewman with first aid.

3.16.2. While the situation the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' faced was understandably shocking, the correct marine response would have been to issue a mayday relay call alerting all vessels in the area that there was a serious risk to life and that immediate assistance was required.

3.17. RGP Marine Section - Management Oversight

3.17.1. From the actions on the night of the collision, the Coxswain and crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' considered it appropriate to leave GBTW to pursue a suspect RHIB positioned close to a Spanish port. There were clear instructions that, without higher management approval, no pursuits should be carried out in Spanish waters. It is not known why the crew did not comply with the Instructions.

3.17.2. Once the highspeed pursuit had started, in Spanish waters, the coxswain, who was not trained in high speed pursuits with suspect vessels, was close enough to the 'SUSPECT RHIB' that objects thrown from the suspect boat were able to hit his vessel. While the guidance was that the safety of marine crews was the priority, the proximity of the two vessels during the pursuit placed the crews of both vessels as well as the vessels themselves in considerable danger.

3.17.3. Marine Section senior officers had provided instructions, on several occasions, that the AIS was to be turned on; however, the coxswain and crew operated 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' with the AIS turned off.

3.17.4. While there are no explicit instructions, it would be reasonable to assume that Marine Section Senior Officers would have expected that all available navigation equipment, particularly when navigating at night, would be used; however, the available GPS and chart plotter navigation systems were not turned on.

3.17.5. From the Instructions provided to Marine crews, the Marine Section Senior Officers were aware and accepted that the highspeed pursuits were being routinely carried out. Instructions had been issued for the use of PPE when faced with missiles being thrown. They must also have been aware that pursuits also strayed into Spanish waters and records should exist internally, or with the Guardia Civil of any previous operations taking place where boundaries were crossed.

3.17.6. From the evidence reviewed to date, it appears that Marines Section Managers did not apply effective oversight into how their patrols were being carried out.

4. ANALYSIS – POSSIBLE FURTHER WORK

4.1. Collision Analysis

4.1.1. Due to the lack of digital data, witness accounts, or video recordings it has not been possible to say with certainty how the two vessels collided and provide an insight into the events during the collision which led to the fatal injuries to two of the crew of the 'SUSPECT RHIB'.

4.1.2. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' was purchased as a second-hand vessel and there are no detailed drawings available. 'SUSPECT RHIB' was built to transport illegal drugs, therefore there are probably no manufacturers' drawings or other construction data available.

4.1.3. Modelling the two vessels using 3-D scanning technology would be capable of producing an accurate representation of their hull and superstructures. The 3-D models can then be created using available software (Rhino is an industry standard program) to show the relative positions and aspects of the two vessels prior to, during, and after the collision.

4.2. Management Oversight

4.2.1. The RGP Marine Section's management structure and operation requires further examination. The instructions and guidance provided to the Response Teams, oversight of operations (patrols and high-speed pursuits) and the management's review processes should be better understood.

4.2.2. The operational arrangements, both formal and informal, that exist between the RGP and the Guardia Civil requires further investigation.

4.3. Historic AIS data for RGP Marine Section Vessels

4.3.1. The contact, chase and collision were known to have been carried out in Spanish waters. It is not known how often RGP Marine vessels operate outside of BGTW. A study of AIS data, over a period of several months would provide an insight into the operating patterns of these vessels and the frequency at which they operate outside BGTW. A preliminary analysis has identified that AIS data is available to provide an effective study (Figure 44).

4.4. Previous Incidents

4.4.1. It is known, from brief internet searches, that there have been previous collisions between RGP Marine Section vessels and suspect vessels. A review of previous incident reports, investigations and actions taken by RGP senior officers would be beneficial to the investigation.

5. CONCLUSIONS

5.1. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' intercepted the 'SUSPECT RHIB' in position 36° 11.7'N 005° 18.1'W at around 03:29:15. The collision occurred at around 03:38:56, in position 36° 10.0' N 005° 12.5' W. The intercept, pursuit and collision took place in Spanish waters.

5.2. It would have been clear to the officers on board 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', as they were familiar with the waters, even when navigating by eye that they were well outside of BGTW.

5.3. 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's starboard bow collided with the port quarter of 'SUSPECT RHIB'. The speed of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' led it to pass over the top of 'SUSPECT RHIB' during the collision and, once clear, landing on their starboard side at a large angle which led to the water ingress into the cabin.

5.4. It cannot be stated with any certainty who the coxswain of 'SUSPECT RHIB' was; however, it is likely to have been Mr. Mohamed Abdeselam Ahmed. The crewman in seat two was, by elimination, likely to be Mr. Mustafa Das Mohamed, who died shortly after the collision.

5.5. It is not known why the two forward jockey seats on 'SUSPECT RHIB', where the two dead crewmen were seated, had very little damage when compared with the heavily damaged aft two seats.

5.6. To establish, with greater certainty, the angle of incidence, and the path of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' in relation to 'SUSPECT RHIB' additional modelling of the two vessels would be required. The creation of 3-D models using Rhino software could be utilised to show the relative positions and aspects of the two vessels prior to, during, and after the collision.

5.7. Officer One did not turn on 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE's AIS for the duration of the operation in contravention of Marine Section Instructions.

5.8. The crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE', in not using all the available navigation equipment showed a poor standard of navigation.

5.9. The Instructions stated that the safety of the crew was the priority; however, the crew of 'SIR JOHN CHAPPLE' in continuing to pursue at very close range, with limited visibility, and unable to respond to a quick turn by the 'SUSPECT RHIB' did not comply with those Instructions

5.10. There was no proper training in pursuits of suspect vessels for the coxswains who would be required to take evasive action.

www.solis-training.com

5.11. From the evidence reviewed to date, it appears that Marines Section Managers did not have an effective oversight of how their patrols were being carried out.

5.12. Once Officer One realised that there was immediate risk to life, he should have broadcast a Mayday relay call to all vessels in the area.

5.13. The Instructions and guidance provided to the Response Teams, oversight of operations (patrols and high-speed pursuits) and the management's review processes should be better understood.

5.14. A study of AIS data, over a period of several months would provide an insight into the operating patterns of these vessels and the frequency at which they operate outside BGTW.

5.15. A review of previous incident reports, investigations and actions taken by RGP senior officers would be beneficial to the investigation.

I've just met with the Commissioner of Police who kindly gave me a briefing on the incident. The facts have yet to be determined and the investigation is ongoing, but initial headlines are as follows:

The incident happened at @ 04.00 hours though it is not yet known whether it took place in BGTW waters or just outside.

Four pax involved - three Spanish from Cueta (Moroccan descent) and one Portuguese.

Two fatalities (one instant). Two others initially hospitalised but are now in police custody. The Spanish nationals are from Ceuta, of Moroccan descent and known to the local Spanish authorities.

Given those involved are not from the area, the incident is not expected to impact on the border as a similar incident did last October.

RGP/Spanish cooperation is good though the Spanish are understandably conducting their own parallel investigation.

Given the loss of life, the RGP are actively approaching UK police authorities to conduct the enquiry. I said they could state in any request that such an approach has our support.

No action for us at this stage.

The Commissioner was grateful for my visit.

Matt, Gib Chief Minister has let us know there were two fatalities on the water (Spanish nationals) and two more smugglers in hospital. They are in touch with local Spanish police. We'll need to keep an eye on press, and probably look at some kind of tweet from Governor and/or Amb in Madrid tomorrow when facts clear.

There may be complications around yesterday's incident in that it might have happened as much as six miles inside Spanish waters.

If true, it's hard to fathom quite what the RGP were doing chasing a vessel so deep into Spanish waters and one can only hope that it was at the invitation of the Spanish. But this may be why GoG have kept details very close and have asked for no social media speculation. The only comment so far has been a tweet from Marlene Hassan MP who regretted the loss of life and commended the RGP.

Let's hope this is all resolved quickly between the agencies and that there is no negative impact on Thursday's talks with the Spanish.
I'll continue to monitor and will report accordingly. I will be reactive only to any media enquiries with a line of inappropriate to comment given the investigation into the incident is ongoing. At some stage a tweet similar to Marlene's may be appropriate.

Nick – thanks for heads up. I'm now copying to [redacted], covering for [redacted] as head of Europe South and Gib bilateral, and [redacted] – grateful if you could keep in close touch with Nick on this. It is uncanny that this incident has happened now, when we also had a fatality just ahead of the Spanish talks in Madrid in October. Whatever happens, we will need some good advice on any media/tweets we should do today and some lines to take for Thursday's talks with Spain.

Sorry, not particularly dexterous on the phone.

I've just left a meeting with the Commissioner at which Michael was present. Michael referred to a Spanish press release which I've attached.

I'll do a record later this afternoon, but we are unlikely to have the facts until tomorrow at the earliest. 2 RGP Inspectors are on their way back from Algeciras so local communication if not cooperation looks to be firmly established.

Los familiares de los fallecidos tras chocar patrullera piden investigación

Ceuta, 9 mar (EFE).- Los familiares de los dos fallecidos en la colisión de una patrullera de la policía de Gibraltar con una embarcación semirrígida, ocurrida este domingo en aguas del Peñón, han pedido la apertura de una investigación "clara" para conocer a fondo el suceso.

Los fallecidos son españoles residentes en Ceuta y sus familiares han reclamado a través de las redes sociales que se abra una investigación para esclarecer el origen de la colisión que provocó el fatal desenlace.
Se trata de dos jóvenes y sus amigos han manifestado en las redes sociales que en la embarcación no había absolutamente nada de hachís ni de otro tipo de sustancia estupefaciente.
Las familias de ambos fallecidos se han desplazados ya hasta el Peñón.
Los otros dos heridos en este accidente son otro ciudadano español también vecino de Ceuta y un varón portugués, quienes se encuentran bajo custodia policial tras su detención.
A los detenidos se les imputan los delitos de navegación peligrosa, importación de bienes prohibidos y obstrucción a la policía, según las autoridades gibraltareñas.
El suceso tuvo lugar a primeras horas de la mañana de ayer, durante una persecución a gran velocidad entre ambas embarcaciones en aguas del Estrecho de Gibraltar, al sospechar los agentes que se trataba de una lancha neumática dedicada al narcotráfico.
La Unidad Marítima de la Policía Real de Gibraltar actuó al detectar la presencia en aguas cercanas al Peñón de una embarcación inflable de casco semirrígido, de 14 metros de eslora, propulsada por cuatro motores fueraborda de 300 caballos y equipada con un equipo de radar, de las habitualmente utilizadas para el narcotráfico. Thanks Nick. Was about to put up a brief note to Minister, which I'll amend slightly on back of your note. Does this look accurate to you. Is there anything I can say about the press release (is it purely factual, or in any way provocative?):

The Minister will want to be aware that in the early hours of Sunday, two people died following a collision between a Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) interceptor vessel and a rigid-hulled inflatable (RHIB) vessel during a high-speed chase. The RHIB occupants were from Spain and Portugal. The surviving RHIB occupants are in police custody following their arrest for offences relating to dangerous navigation, importing a prohibited import and obstructing police. Although details are still not confirmed, it seems that the pursuit happened after the suspect vessel was challenged whilst supporting drug trafficking, and that there was cooperation between the RGP and Spanish law enforcement. A senior investigating officer has been appointed and the forensics examination is ongoing. The interim Governor has received a briefing from the Police Commissioner.

Chief Minister Fabian Picardo reacted on Twitter , including sending his condolences to the families of the deceased. Spanish authorities issued a press release and we have prepared defensive press lines. HMA Madrid has also tweeted ("I want to echo the condolences of FP for the families of the two Spaniards who died in the collision with a patrol boat of the RGP. An investigation has been opened to clarify what happened.") and Embassy officials will discuss the incident with their Spanish counterparts during other meetings today. We do not recommend any further action at this stage.

Sorry, not particularly dexterous on the phone.
I've just left a meeting with the Commissioner at which Michael was present. Michael referred to a Spanish press release which I've attached.
I'll do a record later this afternoon, but we are unlikely to have the facts until tomorrow at the earliest. 2 RGP Inspectors are on their way back from Algeciras so local communication if not cooperation looks to be firmly established.

The AG and I received a further briefing from the Commissioner of Police (CoP) this morning (at my request). Headlines are as follows:

CoP started by saying he had sent two Inspectors to Algeciras to establish face to face contact wth the Guardia Civil. The GC confirmed they had opened up an investigation which they would pursue regardless of where the collision took place. This infers even they are not sure where it happened.

According to the Portuguese person arrested, the 4 pax were a "crew change" for an illegal activity (assume drugs). They were picked up at Atuna beach which is on the outskirts of La Linea.

According to the CoP, there was nothing on board the vessel save fuel.
The Spanish Nationals belonged to the Castinitas (sp?) a powerful OCG.
A "notorious" (CoP's word) Gibraltar legal company Verralls, have been engaged by those detained.
A Pathologist, Coroner and Marine Accident Investigator have all been retained. The intent was to release the bodies of the deceased for burial asap (Muslim culture).
The RGP helmsmen did not for report the start of the chase to Ops Centre as per SoPs. CoP brushed this off to an oversight due to the pressure of the moment. I was less forgiving.
The RGP officers will be interviewed tomorrow or Wednesday.
CoP confirmed that the exact location has still to be determined as were details of the chase which lasted 10 minutes.

I said it was important that before Thursday's meetings in London we had one single and agreed version of the facts. I welcomed the fact that there had been communications between the GC and RGP before and since the collision.

The AG said it was clear, with the entry at some point of the vessel into BGTW, that the law had been broken and that therefore the chase was legitimate. He said it was important we are able to present this to the Spanish as "cooperation". He stressed the need for details of the communication between the GC and RGP and especially who instigated it.

I suspect this is as much as we will get until the investigation, including the interviews of the RGP and the mining of phones and IAS, have been completed.

There may be complications around yesterday's incident in that it might have happened as much as six miles inside Spanish waters.

If true, it's hard to fathom quite what the RGP were doing chasing a vessel so deep into Spanish waters and one can only hope that it was at the invitation of the Spanish. But this may be why GoG have kept details very close and have asked for no social media speculation. The only comment so far has been a tweet from Marlene Hassan MP who regretted the loss of life and commended the RGP.

Let's hope this is all resolved quickly between the agencies and that there is no negative impact on Thursday's talks with the Spanish.
I'll continue to monitor and will report accordingly. I will be reactive only to any media enquiries with a line of inappropriate to comment given the investigation into the incident is ongoing. At some stage a tweet similar to Marlene's may be appropriate.

I've just met with the Commissioner of Police who kindly gave me a briefing on the incident. The facts have yet to be determined and the investigation is ongoing, but initial headlines are as follows:

The incident happened at @ 04.00 hours though it is not yet known whether it took place in BGTW waters or just outside.

Four pax involved - three Spanish from Cueta (Moroccan descent) and one Portuguese.

Two fatalities (one instant). Two others initially hospitalised but are now in police custody. The Spanish nationals are from Ceuta, of Moroccan descent and known to the local Spanish authorities.

Given those involved are not from the area, the incident is not expected to impact on the border as a similar incident did last October.

RGP/Spanish cooperation is good though the Spanish are understandably conducting their own parallel investigation.

Given the loss of life, the RGP are actively approaching UK police authorities to conduct the enquiry. I said they could state in any request that such an approach has our support.

No action for us at this stage.

The Commissioner was grateful for my visit.

Matt, Gib Chief Minister has let us know there were two fatalities on the water (Spanish nationals) and two more smugglers in hospital. They are in touch with local Spanish police. We'll need to keep an eye on press, and probably look at some kind of tweet from Governor and/or Amb in Madrid tomorrow when facts clear.

I'm not sure to what degree if any the issue of Sunday's collision at sea which resulted in two Spanish deaths will come up today.

I asked the Commissioner of Police yesterday if he could, 3 days on, confirm the location of the collision, as per the meeting Michael and I had with him on Monday. He could not and restricted himself to saying more work needed to be done but "it is highly probable it was outside BGTW".

What I can add is that based on a formal request from the RGP, a team of 6 from the Met will be arriving tomorrow to conduct an independent investigation into the incident. This is a positive move.

I have to say I cant quite understand why we still don't definitively know whether the incident took place inside or outside of BGTW. The exact coordinates don't matter that this savage - it's a matter of inside or out. This leaves me worried that it was significantly outside.

The Commissioner also did not say which side instigated comms which is also relevant and a question put to him by Michael on Monday.

I've copied Michael in should he know more than I.

Good luck today and I shall see you tomorrow for the JMC.

I've just had an update from the Commissioner of Police who confirmed our suspicions that not only did the collision take place in Spanish waters, so did the pursuit. The Commissioner also confirmed that SOPs/Protocols we're not followed. I refrained from saying what was on my mind (no s..t Sherlock) but this is not good news and will complicate matters. The Commissioner added that the Spanish are "not kicking off at the moment and playing it down". I think the Commissioner is worried a touch.

I said that given the imminent arrival of the Met Police Team, we can use the line to any enquiries, official or otherwise, that it would not be right to comment until the investigation has been completed. The Commissioner said he was issuing a press release, agreed with the Met, acknowledging the arrival of the team and saying just that.

The better news is that the autopsies have been completed and the bodies are being repatriated.

We should try to get 5 mins with the AG tomorrow to take his view on this.

BA has landed which has lifted my mood a bit! Not many people in the departure lounge though many who are here of Far Eastern descent are wearing masks.

Nick,

many thanks for your email. I have copied it to Legal Adviser and Europe South Spain colleagues.

For the wider chain, the CM's WhatsApp message is as follows. I am very concerned about the effect that this can have. I understand that there is a note verbale. Grateful if it could be shared. We must be entirely transparent on this to the interior ministry, the Ceuta autonomy and the families, to ensure we grow the relationship from this and not hamper it. I am minded to seek a report from the RGP (I have the power to do this under the Police Act). There is also a pending inquest, although it may be ultra vires, given the incident happened well outside BGTW.

Points for action.

- [redacted]: the CM mentions a Note Verbale. It's not clear whether this might have arrived in BE Madrid from the MFA or in FCO London from the Spanish Embassy. Grateful if you could check and let me know. (I'm conscious today is a holiday in Spain, so BE Madrid is closed; Monday is fine to check this there.)

- [redacted]: I think Nick is clear that the CM does have the right under the Police Act to seek a report from the RGP. Grateful if you could confirm that.

- Nick[redacted]: I note you've asked for sight of the Met. Police report on its investigation into the incident. Please let us know if you need us to follow up here.

The CM's instincts on handling look spot on: handling it transparently and being seen to do so. Once we're had sight of the Note Verbale and know what the Spanish are saying/asking, we should have an initial meeting to discuss handling from our end (including what should rightly be left to GoG and what should be done by FCO). [redacted]: grateful if you could provisionally set something up for Monday afternoon (us, Convent, [redacted], [redacted], Spain Team, BE Madrid), so that we can have a quick first run through the issues. We'll probably then need to do an update para. for Ministers, and flag to Media Office.

Please shout if you think there's any immediate points that I've missed.

Many thanks,

Thanks. I'll email and the. We can perhaps have a chat. Basically and on a cumulative basis. Both the Chief Minister and I have lost faith in the Commissioner of Police. All highly sensitive and only the AG knows. One question is how best to quickly recruit a replacement. CM agrees we should look outside Gibraltar.

I am sorry to hear the situation has reached such a critical point. Please feel free to call me any time that is convenient for you. There are a few options around recruitment to consider, if you were to look outside Gibraltar there would be strong interest from UK applicants.
The need for confidentiality in this matter is duly noted.

Hi [redacted]

I was just speaking to the editor of the Gibraltar Chronicle on other business and he mentioned that he is planning to run an article on the RGP collision (probably on Thursday this week). He said he would put some questions to us in writing. I was non-committal in response and said that we would most likely be very limited in what if anything we could say given legal proceedings in play. He had picked up that there had been a PQ asked in the Spanish parliament which referred to a NV being sent to BE Madrid. He promised to send me a copy of the PQ but I haven't seen it yet. Maybe Fi could try to dig it out and see if it says any more than the NV.

As an update, the CM and I met last Friday and, following a long discussion about the RGP and its recent performance, concluded that we had lost confidence in the Commissioner of Police and that we would ask the GPA to call for his retirement. I therefore asked Joey Britto, the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA), to meet with the CM and I. The meeting took place in the Convent on Monday.

At my request, the CM set out the issues of concern, namely the damning HMIC report, the fatal collision, Police Federation allegations of bullying, and the mishandling of a high-profile ongoing investigation in which the Commissioner apparently went against the advice of the Attorney General and Director of Public Prosecutions. The CM then went into detail by linking our concerns to relevant sections of the Police Act. The CM concluded by stating that as a result, we had both lost confidence in the Commissioner and were therefore requesting the GPA to consider using the powers available to them under Section 34 of the Police Act (2006) to call upon the Commissioner to retire. The CM reminded the Chair that should this not happen, the Act gave the Governor powers to call for the resignation of the Commissioner.

I endorsed the CM's position and said that there had to be accountability for the failings, not least given the loss of life. I said the collision incident alone raised grave concerns and has wide-reaching political, financial, reputational and sovereignty implications which may not go well for Gibraltar. I said the common thread through all the issues appeared to be a lack of management and leadership and therefore in my opinion, it is the Commissioner who has to held accountable. I said should the GPA determine that a call to retire was not appropriate, I would consider using the powers available to me under Section 13.(1)(f) which allowed me to call for the resignation of the Commissioner and that as things stood, I would need strong and persuasive arguments not to do so. I said whilst I was not looking to pre-judge the deliberations of the GPA and was mindful that the Commissioner is allowed to make representations as Section 34 allows, the GPA should be in no doubt as to the strength of my feelings. I concluded by saying the powers I have under Section 13.(1)(f) only come into play "in default by the Authority" and as such, the GPA was under some scrutiny.

A clearly shocked Chair said he took note, could see where we were coming from and would convene a meeting of the GPA as soon as practicable, commenting that the Commissioner would most likely fight this.

Comment. The CM was visibly angry during our meeting on Friday and is clearly worried at the political, financial and sovereignty damage the fatal collision incident could do to Gibraltar. Invoking Governor's powers will not go down well and is likely to provoke a backlash. The CM and I recognise the difficulties that lie ahead and have agreed we must be completely as one on this. The Police Act was carefully written shortly after the Constitution was revised and gives us each powers with some overlap. But I agree with the CM and it is important we are seen to be as one on this issue. The RGP, which has many decent and capable officers, is in need of fresh modern leadership and someone skilled in transformational change management. When discussing this the CM rather surprisingly said "we should look externally for a replacement". I was shot down by the former GPA Chair when I recommended this in early 2018.

Without doubt, the CM has the bit between his teeth and wants the Commissioner removed from his position as soon as possible. As a result, the CM asked me to postpone the Gibraltar Contingency Council meeting we were due to have tomorrow. I believe the GPA is meeting tomorrow.

I do not think we need to brief the Minister at this stage but should probably do so should the Commissioner step down, hence the length of this email which gives the detail should things take a turn for the worse.

Nick,

many thanks for your email. I have copied it to Legal Adviser and Europe South Spain colleagues.

For the wider chain, the CM's WhatsApp message is as follows. I am very concerned about the effect that this can have. I understand that there is a note verbale. Grateful if it could be shared. We must be entirely transparent on this to the interior ministry, the Ceuta autonomy and the families, to ensure we grow the relationship from this and not hamper it. I am minded to seek a report from the RGP (I have the power to do this under the Police Act). There is also a pending inquest, although it may be ultra vires, given the incident happened well outside BGTW.

Points for action.

- [redacted]: the CM mentions a Note Verbale. It's not clear whether this might have arrived in BE Madrid from the MFA or in FCO London from the Spanish Embassy. Grateful if you could check and let me know. (I'm conscious today is a holiday in Spain, so BE Madrid is closed; Monday is fine to check this there.)

- [redacted]: I think Nick is clear that the CM does have the right under the Police Act to seek a report from the RGP. Grateful if you could confirm that.

- Nick[redacted]: I note you've asked for sight of the Met. Police report on its investigation into the incident. Please let us know if you need us to follow up here.

The CM's instincts on handling look spot on: handling it transparently and being seen to do so. Once we're had sight of the Note Verbale and know what the Spanish are saying/asking, we should have an initial meeting to discuss handling from our end (including what should rightly be left to GoG and what should be done by FCO). [redacted]: grateful if you could provisionally set something up for Monday afternoon (us, Convent, [redacted], [redacted], Spain Team, BE Madrid), so that we can have a quick first run through the issues. We'll probably then need to do an update para. for Ministers, and flag to Media Office.

Please shout if you think there's any immediate points that I've missed.

Many thanks,

An update

- The CM has instructed Sir Peter Caruana to act for him in this matter on the basis that he wanted to "get it right and having Sir Peter in my corner means he won't be in the other one".
- The GPA at its meeting yesterday agreed to call for the Commissioner's retirement.
- The Chair of the GPA met with the Commissioner this morning to inform of him of their decision.
- The Commissioner has asked for a detailed written explanation as to the reasons behind the loss of confidence.
- The Commissioner believes this is in part driven by the ongoing investigation. The high-profile person referred to below is James Levy!
- The Chair of the GPA has agreed to consider any representations and forward them to the CM and I.
- The Commissioner has engaged a solicitor (and first approached Sir Peter Caruana) citing "a huge constitutional crisis".
- The Commissioner contacted the AG who told him that he had also lost confidence in him.

There is no constitutional crisis as the CM and I are in full agreement, but given lawyers are now involved and others aware, news is likely to break and this will be a big story. A quick para to the Minister as discussed may therefore be appropriate.

Nick, [redacted],

If I have understood correctly Sir Peter Caruana will be acting for the CM in the civil case in Spain? That's of course the CM's decision and I can well understand the reasons behind it. But just to remind everyone though that politically Sir Peter Caruana has a certain reputation in relation to territorial waters in Spain , having been very outspoken on this subject in the last years of the Trilateral and accused of trying to turn himself into a "sovereignty actor". That could however add to the significance of the CM's transparent handling approach.

many thanks for your email. I have copied it to Legal Adviser and Europe South Spain colleagues.

For the wider chain, the CM's WhatsApp message is as follows. I am very concerned about the effect that this can have. I understand that there is a note verbale. Grateful if it could be shared. We must be entirely transparent on this to the interior ministry, the Ceuta autonomy and the families, to ensure we grow the relationship from this and not hamper it. I am minded to seek a report from the RGP (I have the power to do this under the Police Act). There is also a pending inquest, although it may be ultra vires, given the incident happened well outside BGTW.

Points for action.

- [redacted]/[redacted]: the CM mentions a Note Verbale. It's not clear whether this might have arrived in BE Madrid from the MFA or in FCO London from the Spanish Embassy. Grateful if you could check and let me know. (I'm conscious today is a holiday in Spain, so BE Madrid is closed; Monday is fine to check this there.)

- [redacted]: I think Nick is clear that the CM does have the right under the Police Act to seek a report from the RGP. Grateful if you could confirm that.

- Nick[redacted]: I note you've asked for sight of the Met. Police report on its investigation into the incident. Please let us know if you need us to follow up here.

The CM's instincts on handling look spot on: handling it transparently and being seen to do so. Once we're had sight of the Note Verbale and know what the Spanish are saying/asking, we should have an initial meeting to discuss handling from our end (including what should rightly be left to GoG and what should be done by FCO). [redacted]: grateful if you could provisionally set something up for Monday afternoon (us, Convent, [redacted], [redacted], Spain Team, BE Madrid), so that we can have a quick first run through the issues. We'll probably then need to do an update para. for Ministers, and flag to Media Office.

Please shout if you think there's any immediate points that I've missed.

Many thanks,

Subject: Fatal collision between Royal Gib Police and Spanish smugglers

[redacted]

We spoke about this yesterday and as you know, the CM has now informed by WhatsApp the senior wider group of the filing of a case as per the attached. I've also attached my email to you of 9 March for ease of reference. I am meeting the CM later today to discuss this and other issues relating to the behaviour of the RGP and in particular its leadership. I'll report thereafter. Needless to say, he is extremely worried about many aspects of the case which we agreed is not good news and will require extremely careful handling.

As you may remember, the Met Police carried out an independent investigation into the RGP operation. We've asked for sight of their report.

we provided an update (below) to the Minister in early March, immediately after a fatal collision at sea involving the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP). Two Spanish nationals (who were allegedly smuggling drugs) were killed. Since then, it has emerged that the collision happened outside British Gibraltar Territorial Waters (BGTW), and there appear to have been other anomalies in the handling of the pursuit and internal processes afterwards. The Metropolitan Police sent out a team to conduct an investigation; we await its final report. The family of one of the Spanish nationals who died has filed a civil claim in a Spanish court against the RGP. The Chief Minister (CM) has been clear in discussions with the Governor that the Government of Gibraltar (GoG) and RGP must handle this in a transparent manner with Spain. There is no role for HMG UK in this civil case, though we will maintain a watching brief, given the potential for the case to take place in parallel with discussions with Gibraltar and Spain on Gibraltar's future relationship with the EU.

The handing of this incident has though compounded existing concerns of the CM and Governor about the leadership of the RGP. The RGP has not acted on some significant recommendations in a 2016 HM Inspectorate of Constabulary report; there are Police Federation allegations of bullying; and the RGP Commissioner apparently went against the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions in an ongoing investigation. The CM and the Governor have considered at length, and concluded that they had lost confidence in the Commissioner; they called in the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA), setting out their concerns, linked to Gibraltar's Police Act, and requesting that the GPA consider using its powers to call for the Commissioner to retire. The GPA has subsequently done so. The Commissioner has engaged a lawyer, and the CM has done likewise for GoG (engaging former CM Sir Peter Caruana). As with the civil case, there is no role for HMG UK in this RGP matter (because the CM and the Governor are in agreement about the course of action, there are no genuine constitutional tensions in play; though some in Gibraltar may seek to suggest otherwise). But this will likely become a significant issue in Gibraltar, and may attract UK media coverage; we will prepare defensive press lines.

The Minister will want to be aware that in the early hours of Sunday, two people died following a collision between a Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) interceptor vessel and a rigid-hulled inflatable (RHIB) vessel during a high-speed chase. The RHIB occupants were from Spain and Portugal. The surviving RHIB occupants are in police custody following their arrest for offences relating to dangerous navigation, importing a prohibited import and obstructing police. Although details are still not confirmed, it seems that the pursuit happened after the suspect vessel was challenged whilst supporting drug trafficking, and that there was cooperation between the RGP and Spanish law enforcement. A senior investigating officer has been appointed and the forensics examination is ongoing. The interim Governor has received a briefing from the Police Commissioner.

Chief Minister Fabian Picardo reacted on Twitter , including sending his condolences to the families of the deceased. Spanish authorities have issued a press release, setting out the facts as currently known. HMA Madrid has also tweeted (“I want to echo the condolences of FP for the families of the two Spaniards who died in the collision with a patrol boat of the RGP. An investigation has been opened to clarify what happened.”) and Embassy officials will discuss the incident with their Spanish counterparts during other meetings today. We have prepared defensive press lines but do not recommend any further action at this stage.

Dear [redacted]

Thank you for your time both yesterday and previously.

As I said, I have spoken to the Chief Minister and Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority and whilst due process has to be followed, it is looking increasingly likely that we may need to recruit a new Commissioner of Police in the near future. The Chief Minister and GPA Chair both agree, as I do, with your suggestion that a secondment would be the best course of action.

As such, I would be grateful if you could discretely look to start the process of identifying suitable candidates as per our discussion. As soon as I am able, I will formally confirm matters with you. I will also forward a job description as soon as I receive if from the GPA Chair.

To update you further, the Chair of the GPA received at 18.00 hrs this evening, a 28 page letter from the Commissioner of Police's legal representative declining the Gibraltar Police Authority's request to retire. Whilst I will of course consider his representations, it looks as if I will have to exercise my powers under the Police Act.

The CM and I have agreed that we should meet early next week with the AG (as our Hon. Legal Advisor) and Chair of the GPA to discuss a response and will be doing so on Tuesday at the Convent.

Not unexpected but disappointing, not least as the letter calls into question my conduct and impartiality of which I am certain, as is the AG, that I have nothing to worry about.

I'll keep you updated.

As discussed yesterday, things have taken a turn for the worse. The AG told me yesterday the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA) meeting that was held last week to consider the position of the Commissioner of Police was not quorate. It's deliberations are therefore null and void and the Chair of the GPA should therefore not have called for the Commissioner of Police to resign. I should get a letter this morning from the Chair informing me of this.

The AG advised there is no point in looking to appoint new GPA members as they are chosen by the Public Services Commissioner from a list proposed by the CM and I. They are then appointed by the Governor. Any new GPA members would therefore likely be perceived as biased, not least by a court. This leaves Section 13(1)(f) of the Police Act as the only way forward to secure the resignation of the Commissioner should it be determined that this is the best way forward. The relevant Sections of the Police Act are attached.

I also attach the letter from the Commissioner's lawyer together with my response for ease of reference. The GPA, CM and AG will be also responding to it. My intent at the moment is to ask to see those letters before summoning the Commissioner. I would therefore have all the relevant information to hand to enable me to take a considered and reflected decision. I think this is important, not least to demonstrate to the Commissioner that I have taken all representations into account one final time. The AG agrees with this approach. Should I call for the Commissioner to resign, I would simply issue a factual statement announcing the fact. The CM will then deploy supporting press lines.

This is the talk of the town and subject to media speculation though the focus at the moment is on the CM. This will shift significantly should I use the powers available to me and there will be intense scrutiny of my actions which some will look to make mischief from. Luckily the CM and I are as one on this and therefore there should not be any constitutional issues. What is clear is that the Police Act needs updating. I will ask for work to start on that as a priority.

Whilst I do not see any option and sensed this is where we would end up, I wouldn't mind a final chat through this before I take any action we may later come to regret. Would you be available to do so via Teams sometime today before 14.00 (BST)? I have just spoken to the Attorney General (AG).

We have agreed that I will summon the Commissioner at 17.30 today to inform him that I have received copies of his representations and the responses to them from the AG, CM as well as a letter from the Chair of the GPA. I will tell him I will study them over the weekend and reflect. I will let him know of my considered determination on Monday.

The Chief Minister is however slightly worried that the Commissioner will use the weekend to seek an injunction. I said I did not think one could be sought let alone approved as I would not be disclosing my intent to the Commissioner and would merely be following the process as per the Police Act. I am meeting the CM and AG at 17.00 to talk through this but told the AG my strong preference was to create a gap for the reasons we discussed.

Finally, the AG accepted that there could be the perception of a conflict between his role as our HLA and his involvement in proceedings. He thought advice from Paola well worth seeking.

the Minister may welcome a further update para. on the Royal Gibraltar Police Commissioner issue. If there are further developments over the weekend, we will update the Minister's Duty PS.

[redacted]

There have been further developments on the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) Commissioner. Having lost confidence in the Commissioner, the Chief Minister (CM) and Governor asked the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA) to consider calling for him to retire; the GPA did so. He refused, and has engaged a lawyer. His lawyer has written to the Governor, CM, Gibraltar's Attorney General (AG)and GPA, detailing the Commissioner's concerns about the process, and making a number of allegations, including of political interference in the RGP's work. The Governor, CM and Attorney General have all replied to the letter; the GPA has subsequently advised the Governor that the meeting at which it decided to call for the Commissioner's retirement was not quorate. This means the process moves sooner than expected to the Governor, who can invoke his powers under the Police Act to request the Commissioner's resignation. The Governor has today (5 June) told the Commissioner that he will consider his letter, and those of the CM, AG and GPA, over the weekend before making his decision. Some in Gibraltar may seek to use this issue as evidence of constitutional tensions between the UK and Gibraltar. The issue has already been picked up in the local press, and may therefore attract UK media attention. We can say that we are aware of the issue, but it would not be appropriate to comment further while the process is ongoing.

abridged version of the update para. as requested.

In March 2020, two Spanish nationals (alleged drug smugglers) were killed in a sea collision involving the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP), apparently outside British Gibraltar Territorial Waters (BGTW), and with other handling anomalies. We await a Metropolitan Police investigation report. One of the families has filed a civil claim in a Spanish court against the RGP. The Chief Minister (CM) and Governor agree they must handle the case transparently with Spain. This incident has compounded existing CM and Governor concerns about the RGP Commissioner. He has not acted on a 2016 HM Inspectorate of Constabulary report; there are Police Federation bullying allegations; and he apparently went against the Attorney General and Director of Public Prosecutions in an ongoing investigation. The CM and Governor concluded they had lost confidence in him, and asked the Gibraltar Police Authority to consider calling for his retirement; it did so. The Commissioner has engaged a lawyer. The CM has engaged former CM Caruana. There is no immediate HMG UK role in the civil case or the internal RGP matter. But the former may run in parallel to engagement with Spain on Gibraltar's future EU relationship. While there are no constitutional tensions in the latter (the CM and Governor agree on handling), some in Gibraltar may suggest otherwise. Both will likely become significant issues in Gibraltar, and may attract UK media coverage; we will prepare defensive press lines.

Thanks very much for this. Very happy to put this to the Minister but could I just ask:

- Could you tweak it so it's self-contained without reference to the previous update (as the Minister probably won't remember the March incident)
- Shorten so it's just one para and ideally no more than 150 words.

Thanks!

we provided an update (below) to the Minister in early March, immediately after a fatal collision at sea involving the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP). Two Spanish nationals (who were allegedly smuggling drugs) were killed. Since then, it has emerged that the collision happened outside British Gibraltar Territorial Waters (BGTW), and there appear to have been other anomalies in the handling of the pursuit and internal processes afterwards. The Metropolitan Police sent out a team to conduct an investigation; we await its final report. The Minister will want to be aware that in the early hours of Sunday, two people died following a collision between a Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) interceptor vessel and a rigid-hulled inflatable (RHIB) vessel during a high-speed chase. The RHIB occupants were from Spain and Portugal. The surviving RHIB occupants are in police custody following their arrest for offences relating to dangerous navigation, importing a prohibited import and obstructing police. Although details are still not confirmed, it seems that the pursuit happened after the suspect vessel was challenged whilst supporting drug trafficking, and that there was cooperation between the RGP and Spanish law enforcement. A senior investigating officer has been appointed and the forensics examination is ongoing. The interim Governor has received a briefing from the Police Commissioner.

Chief Minister Fabian Picardo reacted on Twitter , including sending his condolences to the families of the deceased. Spanish authorities have issued a press release, setting out the facts as currently known. HMA Madrid has also tweeted ("I want to echo the condolences of FP for the families of the two Spaniards who died in the collision with a patrol boat of the RGP. An investigation has been opened to clarify what happened.") and Embassy officials will discuss the incident with their Spanish counterparts during other meetings today. We have prepared defensive press lines but do not recommend any further action at this stage.

I have just spoken to the Attorney General (AG).

We have agreed that I will summon the Commissioner at 17.30 today to inform him that I have received copies of his representations and the responses to them from the AG, CM as well as a letter from the Chair of the GPA. I will tell him I will study them over the weekend and reflect. I will let him know of my considered determination on Monday.

The Chief Minister is however slightly worried that the Commissioner will use the weekend to seek an injunction. I said I did not think one could be sought let alone approved as I would not be disclosing my intent to the Commissioner and would merely be following the process as per the Police Act. I am meeting the CM and AG at 17.00 to talk through this but told the AG my strong preference was to create a gap for the reasons we discussed.

Finally, the AG accepted that there could be the perception of a conflict between his role as our HLA and his involvement in proceedings. He thought advice from [redacted] well worth seeking.

As discussed yesterday, things have taken a turn for the worse. The AG told me yesterday the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA) meeting that was held last week to consider the position of the Commissioner of Police was not quorate. It's deliberations are therefore null and void and the Chair of the GPA should therefore not have called for the Commissioner of Police to resign. I should get a letter this morning from the Chair informing me of this.

The AG advised there is no point in looking to appoint new GPA members as they are chosen by the Public Services Commissioner from a list proposed by the CM and I. They are then appointed by the Governor. Any new GPA members would therefore likely be perceived as biased, not least by a court. This leaves Section 13(1)(f) of the Police Act as the only way forward to secure the resignation of the Commissioner should it be determined that this is the best way forward. The relevant Sections of the Police Act are attached.

I also attach the letter from the Commissioner's lawyer together with my response for ease of reference. The GPA, CM and AG will be also responding to it. My intent at the moment is to ask to see those letters before summoning the Commissioner. I would therefore have all the relevant information to hand to enable me to take a considered and reflected decision. I think this is important, not least to demonstrate to the Commissioner that I have taken all representations into account one final time. The AG agrees with this approach. Should I call for the Commissioner to resign, I would simply issue a factual statement announcing the fact. The CM will then deploy supporting press lines.

This is the talk of the town and subject to media speculation though the focus at the moment is on the CM. This will shift significantly should I use the powers available to me and there will be intense scrutiny of my actions which some will look to make mischief from. Luckily the CM and I are as one on this and therefore there should not be any constitutional issues. What is clear is that the Police Act needs updating. I will ask for work to start on that as a priority.

Whilst I do not see any option and sensed this is where we would end up, I wouldn't mind a final chat through this before I take any action we may later come to regret. Would you be available to do so via Teams sometime today before 14.00 (BST)? Apologies for the timeframe, but with a media storm brewing, I would like to resolve this as soon as possible and certainly before Sir David Steel arrives on Wednesday.

I fully support your approach to allow time to negotiate the Commissioner's early retirement. It's unfortunate that this matter coincides with the new Governor's arrival, but allowing time for the negotiations still leaves the new Governor with the option to use his power under section 13(f) in the event of a stalemate.

Dear Nick

I set out below a summary of the options and their merits in advance of your meeting this evening with the CM and AG.

1. Call for Commissioner's retirement by GPA pursuant to section 34(1) Police Act 2006
2. Commissioner's suspension or call for resignation by Governor pursuant to section 13(f) Police Act 2006
3. Commissioner's early retirement (subject to negotiated terms)

Option 1

As discussed during our call on Friday, the GPA meeting which was called to vote on exercising their section 34(1) power to call for the Commissioner's retirement was not quorate which rendered that decision invalid. In the GPA's 5 June letter to you, the Chair indicates that the GPA has sought independent legal advice which concludes that:

1. The process undertaken pursuant to section 34(1) is flawed and should be withdrawn.
2. The GPA as presently constituted is vulnerable to legal challenge on the grounds of bias (as detailed further below).

For these reasons the GPA Chair states that the GPA is unwilling to proceed with the Commissioner's removal pursuant to section 34(1).

Option 2

Section 13(f) gives you as Governor the power to either suspend the Commissioner from duty, or call for his resignation where the GPA 'has failed to discharge or perform a responsibility imposed on the Authority under this Act'. The GPA's responsibilities and powers are set out in section 5 and include ensuring the 'high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar' and holding 'the Commissioner to account for matters which are the responsibility of the Authority'.

Although any exercise of the Governor's power under section 13(f) is distinct to the removal procedure under section 34(1) (where the GPA has to secure the Governor's or the Chief Minister's approval to call for the Commissioner to retire), the exercise of that power nevertheless risks being liable to challenge for the reasons set out in paragraph 47 of the Commissioner's lawyer's 29 May letter to the GPA, namely 'it is not a mechanism for the Governor to simply use when he disagrees with the Authority, or when he disagrees with an action by the Police Commissioner, and nor is it a power which should be pre-emptively threatened in order to lean on the Authority to trigger section 34.'

Although you have justifiable grounds on which to exercise your section 13(f) power, there remains a risk that it could be challenged by the Commissioner.

Option 3

In his 5 and 7 June emails, the Commissioner's lawyer indicates that the Commissioner intends to apply for early retirement on terms addressed to the incoming Governor.

NP2/83

Although it is unfortunate that this matter coincides with the new Governor's arrival, a negotiation about the Commissioner's early retirement has the advantage that in the event of a stalemate the incoming Governor still has recourse to suspend the Commissioner pursuant to section 13(f) with a limited risk of a challenge, given he has not been involved in this situation to date.

I share your view that option 3 is the preferred approach and I am ready to speak at 17.30 on Teams if that is helpful.

I've just met with the AG and CM. We agreed that, on balance, we needed to protect Sir David and felt that should CoP still be in office after his swearing in, he would more likely than not retract his request to retire and appeal to Sir David, thus taking us back to square one. The issue is also in the public domain with rumours and accusations beginning to circulate. We agreed we needed to stop this and the only way to do so to conclude proceedings before Sir David's swearing in on Thursday.

On the back of this, I have asked the Commissioner to see me tomorrow at 10.00 when I will hand over copies of the letters the Attorney General, Chief Minister and I sent to the Chairman of the GPA setting out our position (we surmised that the Chairman did not forward these letters on to the Commissioner's lawyer). I will carefully get the message across that he either confirms in writing his request for early retirement with immediate effect with details to be confirmed, or I will use the powers available to me under Section 13.(1)(f). I will ask that he returns to the Convent at 16.00 to let me know his decision.

We agreed that, should I have to invoke my powers, I will suspend the Commissioner with immediate effect. I will not call for his resignation and suspension will allow the Commissioner to lobby Sir David but not take us back to square one.

The CM, clearly angry at the email from Gomez to me, is keen that we have a clear way forward that results in the removal of the Commissioner before he meets the Spanish on Tuesday in Malaga at 10.00. In light of the case in Spain in relation to the RGP collision, and news of a criminal case here, he wants to tell JPMM in the margins that we are taking decisive action.

I do remain slightly uncomfortable and hope the Commissioner sees sense. I don't think he will and I reluctantly think this is now the best way forward.

I met with the CoP at 16.00. He was assured and confident. I said I could set out what I wanted from the meeting by showing him a note I had prepared in advance (attached) that might form a record of our meeting and invited him to read it. He did so and agreed to retire as long as his financial terms were agreed. These were payment up to end of contract (2 years), legal costs covered and enhanced pension rights. As you will see from the note, I said I could not be involved in any negotiations around terms.

I then went to see the Chief Secretary, AG and CM. Whilst the AG and CM thought we should look to accommodate the Commissioner to some degree, the CM rejected all terms. The Chief Secretary confirmed this in writing to the Commissioner. With the AG's support, I subsequently advised the CM to try and accommodate the Commissioner in some way. The CM is now prepared to offer enhanced pension if it can be cleared with the Auditor.

The Chief Secretary has written to the Commissioner saying all matters relating to terms of settlement must be routed through him and not the Governor.

The CM has determined that an enhanced pension is the final offer. I said that I would keep out of that debate but that if the Commissioner did not provide a letter in writing to me asking for early retirement, I will call him in tomorrow and suspend him.

We'll see how the evening plays out.

Reading the Diptel made me think of something my company commander at Sandhurst used to frequently say, " the right thing to do is often the hardest think to do", that certainly resonates when I think of this situation. A challenging situation but without doubt the right course of action.

I am ready to assist with the next steps and have UK police chiefs ready to progress when necessary. This now opens up the opportunity to get a Commissioner in post who has the leadership and values that the RGP deserves.

Summary

Following a number of incidents, the Chief Minister and I lose confidence in the Commissioner of Police. After protracted legal toing and froing, the Commissioner submits an application to retire early. I accept, avoiding the need to exercise my powers. Gaps in the 2006 Police Act exposed. Whilst some will look to make mischief out of this for both the Chief Minister and I, this is in the best interests of the Royal Gibraltar Police which is in serious need of modernisation, both operationally and culturally.

Background

1. In March 2020, two Spanish nationals (alleged drug smugglers) were killed in a sea collision involving the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP), 4.5 nm outside British Gibraltar Territorial Waters. One of the families has filed a civil claim in a Spanish court against the RGP which has significant sovereignty and political implications. The Metropolitan Police, called in to investigate the incident have recommended criminal charges against the officers involved. This incident compounded existing concerns the Chief Minister and I had about the Commissioner. He has not acted on a 2016 HM Inspectorate of Constabulary report; there are Police Federation bullying allegations; and he went against the advice of the AG and DPP in an ongoing and high profile investigation. The CM and I concluded we had lost confidence in him, and asked the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA) to consider calling for his retirement which it did. The Commissioner immediately engaged a lawyer who wrote to the GPA rejecting the request. The letter detailed concerns about the process and made a number of allegations against the CM and I including that I was interfering with the independence of the GPA, involved in a plot to discredit the Commissioner and looking to influence an ongoing criminal investigation. The letter threatened a Judicial Review. A subsequent letter accused me of abuse of powers, acting unlawfully and asked I recuse myself from proceedings.

2. The GPA has however not covered itself in glory. Its meeting to consider requesting the Commissioner to resign was not quorate rendering its deliberations and subsequent actions null and void. I then told the Commissioner, as a result of the GPA being in default, I was considering using the powers given to me under the Police Act which allowed me to suspend him or ask for his resignation. I said I would consider all representations as well as the letters submitted to the GPA by the CM, AG and myself which I subsequently gave him in order to be transparent.

3. The Commissioner subsequently informed me of his intention to ask for early retirement which I asked him to confirm in writing. After eventually agreeing terms, he did so this morning. I have accepted his request.

Next Steps

4. The CM agreed, immediately and surprisingly, with my suggestion that we replace the Commissioner in the short term (18-24 months) with an external candidate which I will take forward with the OT Police Advisor in Miami who has kindly advised me on this matter. The intention is to second for two years a serving senior officer experienced in transformational change management. We will advertise for a new local Commissioner at the end of this year. This will give senior RGP officers an umbrella to prove their worth or expose their part in the malaise that had set in.

Comment

5. This is a good outcome and I am thankful that I did not have to use Governor's powers which would not have gone down well locally. As difficult as the process was, there are some positives that have come out of it. The first is that it has demonstrated the strength of the HMG-GoG relationship. Too easily mischief could have been made as has happened in the past. That the CM and I have been as one throughout has averted what could have potentially resulted in a constitutional crisis. The outcome also plays well into our ongoing negotiations with Spain. Another positive is that it has been concluded before the arrival tomorrow of Governor-Designate, Sir David Steel, who will be able to immediately set about the task, with the CM and GPA, of rebuilding the RGP.

6. This has been an interesting if not challenging interim Governorship that was only supposed to last 2-3 weeks. Four months on all I can say that it has not been the Governorship I was anticipating. In the midst of complex negotiations with Spain on Gibraltar's future relationship with the EU which are forever in the background, Gibraltar has, to date, survived Covid-19 thanks to help from HMG including from British Forces Gibraltar and weathered this storm. Working on OT issues is challenging and complex. More often than not, success of failure depends on the relationship as much as the issue. The relationship here is strong. And whist this episode has sent a shock wave throughout the Rock, we will get over it and initial media reporting has been balanced.

7. More broadly, the Convent Team is in good shape; enthused and excited about the future and the arrival of a new Governor could not come at a better time. I'm extremely grateful to the team here as well as FCO Gib Unit and BE Madrid colleagues for their help and support during this testing period which has demonstrated collegiate working at its best.

The GPA met today and a briefed them on how we got to where we were. The CM has backtracked slightly on the suggestion we parachute someone in. Acting Commissioner Richard Ulger has proposed he remains on top and help is sent in below him. The GPA have asked the two deputies to present their vision as to the way forward on 22 June. I stuck to my (your) proposal which got a lot of traction. But it is crucial that it is the GPA which takes the decision and that the two deputies have an opportunity to present their case. So we should have a decision on the way forward by 24/25 June.

Thank you for the update. I will provide a detailed update over the weekend when I have time to pen a proper reply.[redacted] Aside from the matters within the HMIC report and leadership which require significant levels of expertise, RGP face remarkable challenges in the next few years. Looking ahead the Commissioner needs to steer RGP through the impact of Brexit, supporting the Government of Gibraltar in establishing Gib in a new global position, actively playing a part in Spanish Border negotiations, etc etc.[redacted]

Have a good weekend.

Subject: Recruiting RGP Commissioner of Police Attachments: RGP Commissioner recruitment June 2020.docx

Good morning Nick,

1. Please find attached a short briefing paper where I have captured some of my observations regarding the recruitment of the RGP Commissioner of Police.

2. My observations are collected in the report under the following headings:

    a. RGP performance and standards. The HMICFRS 2020 report is damming and the current SMT are partly accountable for not delivering the 2016 recommendations. RGP has some hard work to get to the standards it needs to be at and the Commissioner will be key to making that happen. RGP needs to become an internationally renowned police force. It has the raw ingredients in its staff, it just needs the strength of leadership to make it happen.

    b. Royal Gibraltar Police priorities and challenges. RGP needs to clearly set out its priorities and challenges as part of addressing the HMICFRS recommendations and to make sure it is set to face the enormous demands the next few years will face. Of all the British Overseas Territories, Gibraltar is sat in possibly the most exposed political position (Brexit) and faces extraordinary threats from serious organised crime based in North Africa or southern Europe. The consequences of RGP officers being in confrontation with Spanish authorities are clear, but if priorities and objectives are not set to ensure improvements are made then adverse incidents become more likely. The fatal marine collision or putting a police car on a runway to stop a military flight are examples that bring into question culture and leadership.

    c. The Role of Commissioner of Police. The role needs to be clearly defined. This is an executive post of national influence. The previous incumbent worked at a very operational level which is not what is now required as Gibraltar faces 2021 onwards.

    d. Performance framework for Commissioner of Police. In addition to defining the role a clear performance framework needs establishing for the Commissioner and the whole rank and file of RGP. Professionalising the framework will reward the diligent and professional while singling out those not performing at the required standard. The framework supports with CPD and structured improvement programme, rather than immediately reverting to conduct proceedings.

    e. Essential personal qualities. These set the baseline for the Commissioner. Defining “essential” and “desirable” gives clear messaging as to what capability and standards of executive leader the GPA seek to recruit.

    f. Essential qualifications

    g. Essential experience

    h. Desirable qualifications

NP2/102

i. Desirable experience

j. Recruitment process. It is my recommendation that the recruitment process be focused to UK Chief Officers, preferably a serving ACC.

3. The political sensitivities of recruiting from outside serving RGP officers is fully understood.
[redacted]

4. I hope this is of assistance as you navigate the recruitment negotiations with the GPA. Please do not hesitate to contact me if there is anything at all I can assist with further.

Have a good weekend and stay safe.

Kindest regards

Jon Taylor (QHM) has very kindly plotted the position of the RGP collision on the attached chart for me. It's clearly in Spanish waters and not the funnel of international waters.

This was one of the actions from the recent meeting.

We spoke earlier.
I would be grateful if you could advise whether the RGP marine collision in March took place within the "funnel" of international waters that we could claim if we had a 12 mile (as opposed to a 3 mile) limit or within Spanish waters to the north of this. The collision took place at 36.09N - 5.12W.

If you were able to mark the position on the attached chart that would be most helpful.
Another favour to add to my ever growing beer chit!

Dear Joey,

Re: Commissioner of Police - Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29th May 2020 that you have received from Charles Gomez and Co representing the Commissioner of Police ("COP"), Ian McGrail ("the letter").

I have no formal role under the Police Act in relation to the matters currently before the Authority for consideration. Therefore, whilst my views about the COP are relevant only in so far as the Authority wishes to have regard to them, I cannot allow the Authority's record to stand unrebutted on the basis of the untrue and scurrilous allegations made by the COP. Thank for giving me the opportunity to do so.

The letter makes important and very serious allegations against me, namely, that I have improperly, corruptly and in abuse of my powers "interfered" with an ongoing criminal investigation by:

(i) privately subjecting the COP to "significant and at times intemperate private criticism" about how the criminal investigation has been handled; and

(ii) trying "for many months" to persuade COP to "change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted".

In support of those statements it is said that I have feigned loss of confidence in the COP as a means of disguising my alleged real objective which is said to be, effectively, to "nobble" the investigation and prosecution to which the investigation relates, and that in some way, this should be deduced from issues relating to "timing" of actions by others and the allegation (also denied by me) that I have reacted with "startling" emotion and consequential insinuation that this is apt to sustain the fantastic allegations made against me by the COP. I hasten to say that each of them is untrue and without merit or justification.

Part of the narrative of the COP's allegations against me is that I apparently gave him "the strong impression that I was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and 'Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words)". I am not aware that the Chief Minister is a person in need of protection in the context of the criminal investigation in question. In so far as concerns the fact that I was primarily concerned with protecting "Gibraltar PLC' (which is vernacular for the public interest of Gibraltar) that is absolutely correct. That is my constitutional role and my job (a fact that the COP, and those advising him appear to overlook).

At a personal level, I deeply regret (because I have always enjoyed excellent working and personal relations with him) to have to say that I cannot recognise the truth in the statements and allegations that COP now makes in the letter. They are untrue.

I have a constitutional role both in relation to prosecutions (I have ultimate responsibility and control over them) and for the rule of law (I am the guardian of the laws of Gibraltar and compliance with them). This is important because it renders proper interventions by me which may not be proper if engaged in by others. What the COP is effectively doing, on the basis of pure speculation and assumption on his part, is to cast the gravest aspersions on my motives for my statements, views and actions.

I should comment also that, in any event, the COP is not (as he appears to believe) immune to having his actions "strongly disapproved of" or being "severely criticised for them". Yet he equates both to the improper interference with the conduct of a criminal investigation and a violation of police independence. This, worryingly, shows lack of understanding and judgment by the COP.

Because of my roles described above, and also the fact that I am the Crown's (in all its facets, including the RGP) principal legal adviser in Gibraltar, it has always been customary for the COP and the RGP to seek the Attorney General's advice and to discuss ongoing investigations with him, whenever that is required. Mr McGrail has done so, both before and after becoming COP.

Contrary to what the letter says, I have never said that the COP lied to me. What I have told him is that he has incurred in a serious breach of my trust (which I explain below) as a result of which I have lost confidence in him.

I turn now to what has actually occurred. I first became aware of this criminal investigation on the 11 May 2019, when I received an email from the COP (sent also to the Chief Minister, Minister of Justice, the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the DPP) asking to meet with us urgently to brief us in relation to certain information that they had obtained in that criminal investigation. That meeting took place on Monday 13 May 2019. At that meeting, or shortly thereafter, I became aware that James Levy QC had shares in one of the companies involved in that dispute and that he was mentioned in communications with the three suspects and was potentially a person of interest to the investigation.

Far from seeking to intervene or interfere for that reason, I had no further involvement with the criminal investigation until over 11 months later when, in early-April 2020, the DPP called me to discuss the Government's position in relation to the ongoing issues about the ownership of a computer platform and its software that HMGOG uses, to which the criminal investigation related.

During that discussion the DPP explained to me that the RGP had drawn up a list of 76 charges (some of which could be impacted by the question of ownership of the platform) and that the RGP were thinking of issuing search warrants against Mr James Levy QC. I was alarmed, both by the number of charges (which would be quite inappropriate in any prosecution) and also by the proposal to obtain and issue a search warrant against a senior lawyer without first seeking voluntary co-operation or voluntary production of evidence. My concern was not because of any sense that lawyers should be exempt from this mechanism, rather it was (as would be the case of any person) that such warrants should reflect the reality of the risk of destruction of evidence unless the person is taken by surprise, or the refusal of the person to provide the evidence voluntarily. Not only can that not be assumed against any person, still less a practising lawyer, but Mr Levy had been aware of the RGP's interest in him for many months, and had had plenty of opportunity to destroy evidence if he were minded or inclined to do so. I have a legitimate public interest role and function (indeed, a responsibility) in respect of both these matters.

I asked to meet with the COP in relation to these two matters, and we did so on 7th April 2019. In that meeting I advised him of my concern about the need to obtain clarity on the issue of ownership of the computer platform since it was clear that that issue would likely have an impact on at least some of the proposed charges, and I also told him that I was worried about the overall number (76) charges, which seemed wholly excessive, not to say absurd. I reminded him of the general wisdom of focusing the charges appropriately. We also discussed, in the terms that I have described above, the proposal to obtain and execute a search warrant against Mr Levy.

The outcome of that discussion was that we reached a clear understanding that the the RGP would not take any further action until they had considered my advice about the rationalisation of the charges, and then the COP would come back to see me again. It was clear beyond peradventure that nothing would happen until we met again. The next I hear (from COP himself, as it was happening) was that RGP officers were in the process of executing search warrants against Mr Levy at the offices of Hassans and at his home.

I have never said anything to the COP which can be interpreted as anything other than advice and assistance, as has always been the practice. The COP is of course free to take whatever action he considers lawful and appropriate regardless of any advice that I may give him on the matter, and he did so. He unquestionably has that right. What the COP cannot do, and also expect to retain my personal confidence, is to act contrary to an understanding reached between us, as he has done. This, and not my disapproval of his actions (even though I think that they were ill advised), is the reason for my loss of confidence in him.

I have made it explicitly clear to the COP throughout that the conduct of the investigation (including the seeking and execution of search warrants) are, whatever I may advise him, operational matters entirely for him. Nothing that I have ever said to the COP or any other member of the RGP has been even remotely open to the possible (mis)interpretation that I have advised or encouraged, still less that I have interfered to bring about or try to bring about, the curtailment of the investigation, how it is carried out by the RGP or to prevent any person from being charged. It is outrageously wrong and unfair for the COP to allege that I have (let alone that I have done so repeatedly over an extended period of time) and I am shocked and deeply resent that he has done so. This necessarily deepens my loss of confidence in him going forward.

I remain at the Authority's disposal for anything with which I may be able to assist it further by way of clarification or further explanation.

Yours Sincerely,

Michael Llamas QC
Attorney General

Dear Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority,

RE: Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act

We write on behalf of our client, Ian McGrail, Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police, in response to the communications to him from the Chair of the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') on 22nd May 2020 which set out the Chair's decision to exercise powers under section 34(1) of the Police Act 2006 ('the 2006 Act'), calling on him to retire and seeking any representations from him under section 34(2). The three communications in question were (1) at a meeting that morning, (2) in a letter ('the first letter') handed to him at the 22 May meeting, and (3) in a further letter, sent to him late that evening ('the second letter').

We thank the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') for giving us the opportunity to make representations. We will explain below why the exercise of the s.34 power vested in the GPA would be wholly unjustified and grossly procedurally unfair. Moreover, there is an extremely troubling aspect to this, of which the Chair is fully aware, and which concerns the rule of law in Gibraltar, and which touches on the fundamental principle of the freedom of the Royal Gibraltar Police ('RGP') to carry out criminal enquiries without interference from politicians or the Attorney General.

At the outset, we wish to impress on the members of the GPA your solemn duties under the Constitution and the 2006 Act. The GPA is one of the few bodies created under the Constitution. The Constitution requires the GPA to "be independent in the exercise of its functions". These functions include, under the 2006 Act, that you must "ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar". You must also, because you are a constitutional body, act in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties including the European Convention on Human Rights. It should therefore be self-evident that the GPA plays an essential role in protecting the separation of powers between the executive and police, the rule of law and the rights of the citizens of Gibraltar.

It is in this light that you must make the decision whether to call on Mr. McGrail to retire – a decision which (because of section 34(3)) means he "shall" retire. You will therefore not just be making a request but giving him an instruction to prematurely end his distinguished 36-year policing career, and you will be removing from office the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar. In order to fulfil your constitutional duties, you must make the decision independently from the Governor and Chief Minister. You must not be directed by them. That would be quite wrong, and in violation of your obligations under the 2006 Act and the Constitution.

As set out below, we are deeply concerned by the approach of the Chair in the meeting he had with Mr. McGrail on 22 May. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that if he refused to comply with the invitation to retire then the Governor would use his powers under s.13(f) of the 2006 Act to call for his resignation. The decision was presented to Mr. McGrail as a fait accompli. The Chair said in effect that it did not matter how he responded – the result would be the end of his career either because he would be forced to retire in accordance with your request or would be called to resign by the Governor using his power under s.13(f). This is not how your power under s.34 works. It only applies if the GPA considers it is "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing" to request that the Commissioner retire, following consideration of any representations made by him. If you do not properly consider these representations and do not make an independent decision you will be acting unlawfully and your decision will be vulnerable to a judicial review challenge.

The damage to Gibraltar as a jurisdiction which claims to adhere to the Rule of Law would be incalculable. As people of standing in our community it will be immediately obvious to you already that the removal of the Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police in the way in which the GPA is being pushed to do is a travesty which will bring shame to Gibraltar and international derision when we are always trying to prove our democratic, non-colonial attributes in every international forum up to the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonization.

The background and motivations which we will proceed to explain (subject to the sensitivities of what is ultimately an ongoing very serious criminal investigation) uncover an abuse of power which is possibly unprecedented in Gibraltar.

The approach the Chair has taken thus far has been for the reasons explained below clearly unlawful. This could potentially be remedied by taking a fully independent decision now and concluding that Mr. McGrail should not be removed from office. This must be a decision of the full GPA, not the Chair alone, as the section 34 power vests in "the Authority". The GPA must also carefully consider whether any of its members has a conflict of interest which would exclude them from taking part in the decision-making process.

In light of the errors made to date, we respectfully suggest that you seek independent legal advice in order to assist you in making a lawful decision. We emphasise that it would be inappropriate to take advice from the Attorney General because he has already expressed a view on the substantive issues, as is clear from the second letter of 22nd May, and, moreover, he has played a key role in the issues we refer to in Section (d) below, as the Chair is already aware. We respectfully suggest that it may be prudent for you to take advice from lawyers in the United Kingdom given the multiplicity of local interests arising from this unfortunate case (as, indeed, Mr McGrail has done; he is represented by an expert counsel team from Gibraltar and London).

This letter is divided in to five sections:

(a) Preliminary Point - Recusal Issue;

(b) The legal framework;

(c) The invitation to retire;

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Failings; and

(e) Response to the substantive issues raised by the GPA.

(a) Preliminary point – Recusal Issue

1. There are two preliminary matters concerning recusal.

2. First, Mr. Nick Pyle is currently named as the member of the GPA appointed by the Governor.[1] He has been the interim Governor since February 2020 and he has had personal involvement in the background to this matter, as we summarise in these submissions. He should play no part in decision-making of the Authority under section 34 in any event, given the distinct role of the Governor under that section. We ask for an assurance that the GPA Chair will ensure that Mr. Pyle is not involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34.

3. Second, and related, we wish at the outset to raise an issue of very significant sensitivity and concern. It relates to a current police investigation. It would therefore be inappropriate to provide specific details of that investigation save as to the limited extent set out below (we address this further in section (d), as it is relevant to this invitation to retire). We know that the Chair is already aware of the background as it was discussed at his and Mr. McGrail's meeting on 22nd May, when he told Mr. McGrail it was discussed at the meeting when the Chief Minister and Governor said that they and the Attorney General had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. You will understand that it would not be appropriate for Mr. McGrail to provide more detail of a live investigation. However, we can say that it relates to national security and involves an alleged criminal conspiracy which potentially reaches to the highest levels of the community.

4. This is a further reason why it is essential that the Chair provide reassurance to us that Mr. Pyle will not be involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34. In addition, we suggest that it would be prudent for a further member of the GPA, Ms. Claire Pizzarello, to recuse herself from decision-making in this matter. We do not provide further details at this stage, and we trust that the Chair will agree that this would be a sensible course of action in the circumstances. (Should further information be required by the Chair, he should inform us of this.) We emphasise that there is no suggestion whatsoever of Ms. Pizzarello having any personal involvement in the matters in question, and this approach is suggested out of an abundance of caution.

(b) The legal framework

The Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 ('The Constitution')

5. Chapter 1 of the Constitution protects fundamental rights and freedoms. The Preamble states that the people of Gibraltar's right to self-determination must be "promoted and respected in conformity with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties". The European Convention on Human Rights is an "applicable international treaty".

6. The Constitution protects, amongst other rights, the right to privacy (section ('s') 7) and the right to freedom of expression (s.10).

7. The Constitution provides that there shall be a Police Authority for Gibraltar which "shall be independent in the exercise of its functions" (s.48(1)).

The Police Act 2006

8. The 2006 Act establishes the GPA (section 3(1)).

9. Part I sets out the responsibilities and powers of the GPA. s. 5 relevantly includes responsibilities: "to secure the maintenance of an efficient and effective police force for Gibraltar", "to ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar", "to establish, operate and supervise the process for investigating complaints against police officers under this Act" and "to hold the Commissioner to account for matters which are the responsibility of the Authority.

10. Part II sets out the Governor's and the Government's responsibilities for policing. Section 13 provides for the Governor's powers "in default by the Authority", which are exercisable only where the Authority "has failed to discharge or perform a responsibility imposed on the Authority under this Act". The powers include "where in the opinion of the Governor the integrity, probity or independence of the police has been compromised or is at risk, to direct the Force to take appropriate action to remedy the situation or avoid the risk" and "to suspend from duty, or call for the resignation of the Commissioner".

11. Section 15(1) provides that the Chief Minister may exercise various powers on behalf of the Government, including (a) require factual or assessment reports from the Force or the Authority on any policing matter, provided that there may be withheld from any such report any fact disclosure of which is likely to prejudice the effective operation of the Force.

12. Part IV provides for the establishment of the Royal Gibraltar Police Force. Section 32(1) provides for the appointment of the Commissioner of Police by the Governor, acting on the advice of the Authority, subject to any provision of the Constitution; for such that the Authority may advise and as shall be set out in the instrument of appointment.

13. Section 33(1) provides that the Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service. (section 33(2)).

14. Section 34 provides for the removal of the Commissioner by the GPA. It is set out in full below:

> "34.(1) The Authority acting after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister and with the agreement of either of them, may call upon the Commissioner to retire, in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar.

(2) Before seeking the approval of the Governor and the Chief Minister under subsection (1), the Authority shall give the Commissioner an opportunity to make representations and shall consider any representations that he makes.

(3) Where the Commissioner is called upon to retire under subsection (1), he shall retire on such date as the Authority may specify or on such earlier date as may be agreed upon between him and the Authority."

Human rights

15. The European Convention on Human Rights protects the right to respect for private and family life under Article 8 and the right to freedom of expression under Article 10. Both rights can be interfered with by the state by certain situations but only where that interference is lawful, necessary and proportionate in pursuance of a legitimate aim.

16. The European Court of Human Rights and the Council of Europe (which oversees the European Court) have repeatedly emphasised that corruption threatens the rule of law. There have been a number of cases where sanctions imposed on whistleblowers have been found to breach Article 10 ECHR - in cases involving the dismissal of public servants this has sometimes been articulated as an attack on reputation protected by Article 8 ECHR. As you will see below, the law relating to whistleblowers is relevant.

17. In Guja v. Moldova (No. 1)[2] the Grand Chamber held unanimously that there had been a violation of Article 10 (freedom of expression). The applicant was Head of the Press Department of the Moldovan Prosecutor General's Office. The case concerned his dismissal for giving a newspaper two letters received by the Prosecutor General's Office which disclosed interference by a high-ranking politician in pending criminal proceedings.

The Court balanced the conflicting factors under Art.10 and concluded there had been a breach.

> [72] ... The Court thus considers that the signalling by a civil servant or an employee in the public sector of illegal conduct or wrongdoing in the workplace should, in certain circumstances, enjoy protection. This may be called for where the employee or civil servant concerned is the only person, or part of a small category of persons, aware of what is happening at work and is thus best placed to act in the public interest by alerting the employer or the public at large.

18. Article 8 ECHR includes the right to protection of reputation.[3] As stated in Axel Springer AG v. Germany[4], judgment (Grand Chamber) of 7 February 2012, paras. 83-84:

> "... [T]he right to protection of reputation is a right which is protected by Article 8 of the Convention as part of the right to respect for private life ... In order for Article 8 to come into play, however, an attack on a person's reputation must attain a certain level of seriousness and in a manner causing prejudice to personal enjoyment of the right to respect for private life ...

19. The Council of Europe's Criminal Law Convention on Corruption ('the Corruption Convention") of 27th January 1999 states[5] in its pre-amble that "corruption threatens the rule of law, democracy and human rights, undermines good governance, fairness and social justice, distorts competition, hinders economic development and endangers the stability of democratic institutions and the moral foundations of society".

20. Each Party to the Corruption Convention shall adopt measures to ensure that persons or entities are specialised in the fight against corruption. They shall have the necessary independence in accordance with the fundamental principles of the legal system of the Party, in order for them to be able to carry out their functions effectively and free from any undue pressure.

21. The preamble to the Council of Europe Code of Police Ethics[6] states that "the criminal justice system plays a key role in safeguarding the rule of law and that the police have an essential role within that system". Paragraph 15 provides:

> The police shall enjoy sufficient operational independence from other state bodies in carrying out its given police tasks, for which it should be fully accountable.

22. Paragraph 34 states:

> Public authorities shall support police personnel who are subject to ill-founded accusations concerning their duties.

23. The Committee of Ministers' Recommendation on the protection of whistleblowers adopted on 30th April 2014 relevantly states in the preamble that "freedom of expression and the right to seek and receive information are fundamental for the functioning of a genuine democracy" and recognises that individuals who report or disclose information on threats or harm to the public interest, i.e. whistleblowers, can contribute to strengthening transparency and democratic accountability. Paragraph 21 states:

> Whistleblowers should be protected against retaliation of any form, whether directly or indirectly, by their employer and by persons working for or acting on behalf of the employer. Forms of such retaliation might include dismissal, suspension, demotion, loss of promotion opportunities, punitive transfers and reductions in or deductions of wages, harassment or other punitive or discriminatory treatment.

[6] Adopted 19th September 2001: https://rm.coe.int/16805e297e.

24. Protection from retaliation is clearly a matter of fundamental importance particularly when the potential victim is none other than the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar.

(c) The invitation to retire

25. On the morning of 22nd May 2020 Mr. McGrail met with the GPA Chair, when the Chair invited him to retire pursuant to s.34(1) of the 2006 Act.

26. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that he had met with the Governor and the Chief Minister on Monday 18th May and they had told him they had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. He said that he had taken notes of the meeting. It began with the Governor and Chief Minister taking him through the various options under the Police Act and focussing on section 13 (the power of the Governor to suspend from duty or call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the GPA has failed to discharge its duties) and section 34 (the GPA's power to remove the Commissioner from post).

27. The Chair made it very clear that he did not make this decision himself and that in his view the decision was entirely for the Governor and the Chief Minister to make. Although he said Mr. McGrail could make representations, it was made clear to him that if he does not take the offer of retirement then the Governor will trigger his power under s.13 to call for his resignation. It is in effect, an 'offer he can't refuse' – or, to put it another way, it is the equivalent, for an office-holder, of constructive dismissal.

28. It was also made clear to Mr. McGrail that the issue of his handling of the investigation referred to above was an important factor in the decision making by the Governor and Chief Minister. He said that the AG had all lost confidence in him because he had "lied" about the particular operation – which he strenuously denied.

29. At the time of the meeting none of the alleged issues with Mr. McGrail's conduct had been put in writing. When Mr. McGrail highlighted that this was unfair, the Chair offered to provide him with his notes of the 18th May meeting. Mr. McGrail asked for the reasons to be put in writing so he could properly respond.

30. At the meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed a letter containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s. 34(1) power ('the first letter'). This was a short letter which provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"), however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to s.34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". Mr. McGrail was given 7 days to respond to the initial letter (i.e. by today, 29th May – a period which included a long weekend) and invited to seek more time if required.

31. Mr. McGrail received a second letter late on Friday night, 22nd May, which provided more detail, relevantly stating:

    a. "the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar."

    b. "Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief

    c. Five "main issues" (in reality, these are four issues as two run together) were set out "contributing to the loss of confidence", including:

i. Efficiency: "The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear (sic) damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP...."

ii. "Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction."

iii. "I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident... [he has] expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you..."

iv. Effectiveness: that the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and will now be "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload".

v. Probity and integrity "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point...

vi. "additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings"

vii. "The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity."

viii. Independence: "This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service."

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Flaws

32. This process has been tainted from the outset by conspicuous unfairness, and it is grossly procedurally unfair. These flaws fall into the category described by Lord Bridge in Calvin v. Carr [1979] UKPC 1, [1979] 2 All ER 440: "when the defect is so flagrant, the consequences so severe, that the most perfect of appeals or rehearings will not be sufficient to produce a just result." The approach adopted here amounts to an attack on the Constitution, the rule of law and human rights principles, and it subverts the principle of separation of powers in a number of respects.

i. The Vanishing Reason for the Invitation to Retire

33. First, we indicated at the outset of this letter, when addressing the preliminary matter of recusal, that there is a sensitive matter concerning an ongoing criminal investigation, the detail of which Mr. McGrail does not address herein. The relevance of this issue to the invitation to retire is as follows. This matter was discussed in the 22nd May meeting as forming part of the reasoning behind the Chief Minister and the Governor informing the GPA Chair that he should invite Mr. McGrail to retire. Indeed, Mr. McGrail indicated at that meeting that he understood it to be the real and central reason for the request. However, this reason is, oddly, not cited in the second, detailed letter of 22nd May. Instead, that letter refers expressly only to two other matters – the incident at sea in March 2020 and the inspection report following the inspection in October 2019.

34. The two matters which are mentioned have been known to the Chief Minister, Governor and Attorney General ('AG') for months. As is explained below, Mr. McGrail has kept them fully informed in respect of both issues. The important point is that in respect of both issues, at all stages Mr. McGrail has received no criticism at all about his approach. The incident at sea is being investigated independently by the Metropolitan Police, at Mr. McGrail's request, and that report is yet to be received. Mr. McGrail has met regularly with the AG to discuss strategy towards this serious incident – the AG has been nothing but supportive. Equally, when the inspection report came out, Mr. McGrail received no public or even private criticism from authority figures at all – until the 22nd May invitation to retire.

35. By contrast, in recent months, and particularly the past fortnight, Mr. McGrail has received very significant and at times intemperate private criticism from the Chief Minister and Attorney General about a separate matter, namely how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled. For many months the AG has been trying (unsuccessfully, we might add) to persuade Mr. McGrail to change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted. Mr. McGrail has rebuffed these attempts and has treated this investigation as he would any other - characteristic of his probity and professionalism. The operational decisions in respect of this investigation have, in any event, been taken by individual officers below Mr. McGrail's rank, acting professionally and appropriately.

36. On 12th May, out of courtesy, Mr. McGrail notified the Chief Minister, the AG and the Minister of Justice of a certain operational action which was taken by the RGP in the case. Both the Chief Minister and AG immediately messaged him to say, in no uncertain terms, that they disapproved of the action. He was immediately called into a meeting with the Chief Minister and the AG. He was very severely criticised for the action that had been taken. The Chief Minister told him that, in his view, Mr. McGrail had handled the investigation "very very wrongly". He was told by the AG that he had to this point approved of his work but from that day he could not "entertain" Mr. McGrail again. The emotional response from both the Chief Minister and the AG is startling.

37. This was followed by two subsequent meetings with the AG and Director of Public Prosecutions (on 13th and 15th May respectively) where pressure was put on Mr. McGrail by the AG to change the RGP's investigative approach to the operation and he was given the strong impression that the AG was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and "Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words).

38. It is grossly inappropriate in a jurisdiction under the Rule of Law for politicians to interfere with any live criminal investigation in this way. It tramples over the separation of powers which is an integral feature of our Constitution. However, in this case the Chief Minister has a personal connection to the outcome of the investigation, which makes his intervention even more inappropriate. Not only should he not attempt to influence the investigation, he should completely recuse himself for any decisions or conversations which touch upon it.

39. The reason it is relevant to your decision is that we submit to you that the timing of the use of the s.34 process, which was triggered by the Chief Minister and the Governor and, we understand, came as a complete surprise to the GPA Chair, strongly suggests that the incident at sea and inspection report are fig leaves for the real reason Mr. McGrail is being pressured to retire, i.e. his (proper and reasonable) handling of a live criminal investigation.

40. It is unnecessary for us merely to rely on an inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point. The GPA Chair confirmed to Mr. McGrail at their meeting on 22nd May that his handling of the criminal investigation referred to above was spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail. The Chair told Mr. McGrail he took a note of his meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor, which we assume he can provide to you for your consideration. It is wholly unclear why this matter is then omitted from the letters sent to Mr. McGrail on 22nd May – although a simple explanation is that it was obvious to those writing the letters that if it were included it would invalidate the entire process. This is a clear breach of the requirements of fairness in itself – this was a factor cited in the meeting on 22nd May, at which no written documents were given to Mr. McGrail, yet the letters omit this material factor.

41. Further, we note that a factor which is cited in the Chair's 22nd May second letter is the Attorney General being said to have "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail, for an unspecified reason: "Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings". The Chair made clear to Mr. McGrail at the 22nd May meeting that this was entirely because of the criminal investigation matter referred to above and it reflects the comments made to Mr. McGrail by him directly at the meeting on 12th May. In reality, it is clear that this incident is at the heart of this request under section 34, despite it not appearing in the second letter.

42. We note that in the Chair's second letter it is stated "the Governor and the Chief Minister ... consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised". Unfortunately, we agree with that statement, and that statement alone, but for significantly different reasons. If the GPA decides to exercise its s.34 power, in the full knowledge that background involves the Chief Minister and AG seeking to interfere with a live criminal investigation, this would indeed be an affront to the rule of law and a breach of your duties under the Constitution. This would be a gross violation of the rule of law, and not the actions of an independent body in a mature democracy.

ii. Independence

43. There are further serious procedural failings. It was made clear to Mr. McGrail at the meeting on 22nd May 2020 that the Chair was proceeding on the basis that this is a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and he has taken his lead from them. This is also clear from the first letter, which followed the meeting. This is a fundamental misunderstanding of the statutory scheme: the section 34 decision is for the Authority. It also disregards the vital importance of the independence of the Authority, enshrined in the Constitution, s. 48(1).

iii. A Settled Decision

44. The process followed on 22nd May is not compliant with section 34. The statute makes clear that submissions must be sought under section 34(2) before the section 34(1) process is followed. The Commissioner is entitled to be given an opportunity to make representations, and for them to be considered. For this to be a meaningful opportunity, the Authority must not have a closed mind. In this instance, however, the Authority Chair has called upon the Commissioner to retire (under section 34(1)), indicating that this decision has been reached already: "the Authority feels that it is left with no option but to exercise the powers afforded to the Authority under section 34(1)..." The wording used is unambiguous. This was clear at the meeting on 22nd May, and it is expressly set out in the first letter of that date.

45. The first letter is instructive. At this meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed this short letter, containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s.34(1) power. This was very brief and provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire based on the Governor and the Chief Minister's views ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"); however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to section 34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". This language, promising to take the submissions into consideration, cannot be squared with the fact that definitive language making clear that the Authority has already set out an invitation to retire under section 34(1).

46. This not only raises concerns under section 34. It also results in a process which is not compliant with the concept of natural justice. Mr. McGrail cannot be penalised by a decision which would have such a devastating impact upon him without him being given prior notice of the case he has to answer, and a fair opportunity to answer it. This has not been the case here.

iv. The Relevance of Section 13

47. At the meeting of 22nd May, the Chair informed Mr. McGrail that this was not a decision for him, but a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and that if he did not invite Mr. McGrail to retire under section 34 then the Governor would exercise his power under s. 13. The Chair made clear that this had informed the decision to trigger section 34. However, this is an extraordinary situation, raising very serious concerns, and it taints the section 34 decision. The entire point of section 13 is that it only applies when Authority is in default; it is not a mechanism for the Governor to simply use when he disagrees with the Authority, or when he disagrees with an action by the Police Commissioner, and nor is it a power which should be pre-emptively threatened in order to lean on the Authority to trigger section 34.

(e) Response to the issues raised in the letter

48. We have addressed above why we believe that this attempt to remove Mr. McGrail from post is a pretence which would not have occurred but for the Chief Minister and AG's criticism of his handling of a particular live investigation. However, it is of course important and necessary to respond directly to the two issues which are directly mentioned in the 22 May letter. We should emphasise that our client takes both the incident at sea and the inspection report extremely seriously, as can be seen by his immediate and continuing actions in response to them, however we do not accept, even arguably, that either issue could be the basis of the use of the section 34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from his post in the interests of "efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar".

Mr. McGrail's career to date

49. Before addressing the substantive issues, we want to give you some background about Mr. McGrail's career as a police officer. This is so that in considering the issues, you can do so in the context of his record, which can only be described as exemplary. Mr. McGrail has had a long, unblemished and distinguished career in the RGP for 36 years, having joined in 1984. In the first decade of his career he served in front-line policing, and following the "fast launch" public disturbances in the mid-1990s he had particular responsibility for uplifting RGP's capacity and capability in order and personal safety.

50. In 2006, he became the youngest and most junior inspector at the time to be promoted to Chief Inspector. From 2012 he was a Superintendent. In 2015 he was included in the Queen's Birthday State Honours list and was awarded the Overseas Territories Police

Medal for meritorious service. He has been awarded the Queen's Golden and Diamond Jubilee medals and the long service and good conduct medal with first and second clasps. And, as you know his record is exemplary. Mr. McGrail has numerous letters of appreciation throughout his career and been commended five times, including once by the Director of the United States Naval Criminal Investigation Service and on another by the Chief Justice of Gibraltar. All the commendations have been for meritorious investigative work leading to prosecutions. He has throughout his career sought to develop personally and professionally and attended the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy Programme for 3 months in Quantico, Virginia 2007 , is a Master of Science in Policing and Public Order with the University of Leicester and in 2013 attended the Strategic Command Course with the UK's College of Policing.

51. What has distinguished Mr McGrail is his dedication to service and ability to innovate and develop new ideas and working practices. In 1995 following the most severe riots in the last twenty years in Gibraltar, Mr McGrail was one of two officers tasked with reviewing and developing the RGP's response to public order situations. He went on to qualify as a public order instructor and also as a public order commander. He created and developed an RGP public order unit, commenced a training and development programme, which continues in the form he devised to this day.

52. His flair for innovation and openness to new working practices saw him create the Corporate Development department. Corporate development being a non-existent concept in the RGP at the time. Mr McGrail was instrumental in creating / drafting policies and guidelines in areas where they were required. In addition, he helped put procedures in place to improve the processes around the detention and custody of persons in police detention.

53. On 1st May 2018, Mr. McGrail was appointed as Commissioner of the RGP for a four-year term of warrant, on the advice of the GPA. In his letter of appointment, it was requested that the GPA conduct a review process against the objectives set out in the vision statement and action plan he provided to the Governor. This was supposed to take place two years into his term, which means it should be taking place now. In his letter, the Governor at the time, His Excellency General Edward Davis, said he looked forward to working closely with Mr. McGrail "as we all do our utmost to protect, progress and promote the Rule of Law in Gibraltar".

54. Since he took up the post of Commissioner, one of the first things he did was present to the Gibraltar Police Authority all the force policies for the Authority to ratify as required in law, something which had not been done previously. This is characteristic of his qualities of openness, transparency and accountability.

55. More recently he has been instrumental in the development of the Force Intelligence Unit, taking it from being a unit of limited capability to professional and proactive unit properly servicing the organisation. Mr McGrail's networking skills have enabled him to draw upon contacts in the U.S., Spain and the U.K. to enhance the RGP's intelligence exchange and law enforcement co-operation mechanisms with all these territories. Very significant cross border operations have been carried under his leadership attracting extensive positive media coverage. These efforts have also been recognised by the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General as it no doubt aids the building of relationships with the Kingdom of Spain in the post-Brexit era. Mr. McGrail is part of the Gibraltar law enforcement delegation to work on delivering the Brexit MOU on law enforcement co-operation with Spain. All these mentioned points have brought improvements to the quality of service delivered by the RGP.

56. In the organisational context Mr. McGrail has pushed for procedural and policy advancements. The RGP's total complement of officers results in officers such as Mr. McGrail having to embark on the tasks described on their own, without the benefit of a supporting team as would be the case in a UK mainland force. Further complicating the task is the distance between the RGP and mainland forces makes it impractical to regularly meet and consult colleagues engaged in similar projects to share experience and knowledge.

57. The year 2019 saw unprecedented levels of demand imposed on the RGP including a total of 85 major events, which included 13 Assemblies/demonstrations, 10 international football matches (including a top 3 with the most ultra-fan base in Europe, who were at the matches in numbers), European Elections, General Elections, Small Island Games that run for a full week, Grace 1 (the first time a vessel had been boarded for contravening EU sanctions), eight large scale music events, major social events such National Day, New Year's Eve Celebrations, the Festival of lights and 14 Public Military Events. Mr McGrail oversaw the planning and execution of all of these events all of which met with the operational aims and objectives. Public security and safety was successfully upheld.

58. He has also been responsible for, in just two years in post:

a. Adopting the UK Home Office counting rules for the recording of crime. The RGP's previous methods had been subject of criticism by HMIC for presenting overly favourable detection rates.;

b. Project Servator which is a community orientated counter-terrorism initiative;

c. Restructuring of the force to release police officers to core policing duties;

d. Restructuring and uplifting of the Economic Crime Unit ('ECU'), to incorporate a fraud and Anti Money Laundering Unit;

e. The creation of the RGP's first ever Wellbeing Strategy 2019/2022;

f. The creation of 16 Wellbeing Champions, spread throughout the force;

g. The creation of a bespoke Mental Health referral procedure with Ocean Views medical facility for all police officers and support staff. No other HMGOG department has this system in place;

h. Significant strides with PSN connectivity this is connectivity with the UK police service;

i. Partnership building and resources obtained through National Police Co-ordination Centre for Brexit contingency planning, Small Island Games & International football matches;

j. COVID-19 policing – which has seen restrictions in freedom of movement as never seen before in modern history.

59. Additionally, under Mr McGrail's leadership, the RGP has developed and implemented the following new policies and reviewed a further number of them. All of these have met the approval of the GPA:

a. 2018: Response Team Leader Policy (new), Gifts and Hospitality Policy (new), Alcohol and Substance Abuse Policy (new), Taser Policy (New)

b. 2019: Transfer Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Management of Exhibits (Reviewed & Amended); Domestic Violence (Reviewed & Amended); Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Mobile Device Policy (New).

c. 2020: Caution policy (Reviewed & Amended), Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Bullying Policy (New); Grievance policy and Procedure (New); Compromised Persons Policy (New); Mental Wellbeing Policy New (No police service in the UK has this).

60. During Mr. McGrail's tenure, there has been an 8.3% reduction in crime, a 33% reduction in repeat victimisation, a 33% reduction in repeat offending and a 54% detection rate. These statistics are enviable to any UK police service. Additionally, during his tenure, a good level of public satisfaction has been maintained and in certain areas improved, according to your own public consultation surveys. He has, most recently, appeared on live television delivering public information bulletins for COVID-19 crisis on four occasions: on 9th April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 21st April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 3rd May and Minister of Justice and on the 10th May with the Minister of Justice again. If the Government or Chief Minister had lost confidence in his abilities you might reasonably ask why he was allowed to give these important briefings to the whole of Gibraltar.

61. Further, and for the sake of completeness, we remind you of Mr. McGrail's success in promoting international law enforcement cooperation, in an area which has been fraught with difficulties in the past, has been recognised by both the Spanish National Police and the Guardia Civil who have nominated Mr. McGrail for the "La Cruz de la Orden del Mérito Policial con distinctivo Blanco" and "La Orden del Mérito de la Guardia Civil con distinctivo" medals respectively. This is of course unprecedented and underscores the high esteem with which Mr. McGrail is held by his international colleagues in Spain.

The incident at sea

62. On 8th March 2020 at around 03:38 an incident occurred involving a collision at sea between an RGP patrol craft and a smuggling vessel. Two people on the smuggling vessel, Dris Mohamed and Abdeselam Ahmed, reportedly both Spanish nationals, died in the incident and two were injured. The incident occurred outside of British Gibraltar Territorial Waters ('BGTW').

63. The March 2020 incident is raised by the 22 May letters in two ways: in itself ("the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction"); and in respect of communication (the Governor "expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you" and raises concerns that he has "no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident... ").

64. As regards the unfortunate incident itself, there is no explanation as to why it is suggested that the actions of individual officers reflect on Mr. McGrail or are indicative of a systemic pattern of acting beyond the remit and jurisdiction of the RGP. There is no particularity at all, meaning it is impossible to respond in any detail save to say that at Mr. McGrail responded to the incident with his usual integrity and transparency. It is simply bizarre to claim that the Governor and Chief Minister have lost confidence in Mr. McGrail because they blame him for the incident itself when (a) at the time of the meeting with the Chair and the 22 May letters the Chief Minister had requested, but had not received, a response to the detailed request for information which was sent to him on 21 May this was the first such request Mr. McGrail has received, and (b) at that time they had not received (and still have not received) the independent report which is being carried out by the Metropolitan Police and was commissioned within days by Mr. McGrail himself or the conclusive report of the independent marine accident expert.

65. A further example is given relating to the RGP being without the use of a vessel, and thus being, "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload". Again, there is no indication as to why this would justify the exceptional step of inviting the Commissioner to retire, and, indeed, this would not address the issue regarding the vessel. In any event, the proposition that the effectiveness of the marine section has been compromised is nonsense. The RGP's Marine Section has resilience. It has other vessels and the fact that one of them has been out of service because of the collision has not hampered capabilities.

66. In any event, it is for the GPA to reach an independent decision in respect of this issue. We submit that it would be highly unfair and contrary to the principles of natural justice for the GPA to pre-emptively blame Mr McGrail for this incident, prior to a detailed consideration of the independent report from the Metropolitan Police. However, and in any event, the fact that the alleged 'loss of confidence' it is so obviously premature and pre-emptive further proves the point we make above that the real motives behind the action by the Governor and Chief Minister are not this incident. Rather, this incident is serving as a pretext, although on any analysis not a convincing one.

67. As regards communication, we understand that the Section 15 reply (sent shortly before these submissions) comprehensively debunks the suggestion that there was inadequate communication. Mr. McGrail messaged the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General within two hours of the emergency response group being convened and kept them fully informed throughout, promptly responding to all requests for information. He subsequently met with the Attorney General on 17th March to develop a working strategy to deal with the consequences of the incident, which the AG agreed to. He further briefed the AG on 18 March on the progress of the Metropolitan Police investigation. The Metropolitan Police team was also in direct contact with the Governor. On 22nd March Mr. McGrail again met with the Attorney General and DPP to discuss the potential civil legal action arising from the incident. The AG did not want to consider further strategy until the Metropolitan Police's report findings had been received. This has still not been received despite many requests to expedite it the Covid 19 Crisis in the UK has taken its toll on policing as in many other areas of business. A marine investigator's report has also been commissioned and is currently being finalised. The simple point here is that it is premature to reach any conclusions in relation to this incident and it would be highly unfair to dismiss Mr. McGrail on the basis of a wholly unparticularised and vague accusation such as this.

68. In relation to the suggestion that Mr. McGrail has misled the Governor, this is not particularised; it is a vague slur, without explanation. We do not know what it refers to. If it relates to the incident taking place in Spanish waters, it is not possible to follow the rationale. In any event, the Governor was promptly and fully briefed by Mr McGrail on that issue and Mr. McGrail understands that the Metropolitan Police team, who were conducting an independent investigation, also briefed the Governor's office.

69. A further slur is included in relation to Mr. McGrail's "probity and integrity," phrased in a hopelessly vague way, without specificity: "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point..." Reference is made to the Attorney General, but as we have submitted above this could only refer to the criminal investigation, as the Chair also informed Mr. McGrail.

The HMICFRS Report

70. The claim that confidence in Mr. McGrail's ability to do his job has been lost to a lack of efficiency on the part of the RGP, based on the findings of the HMICFRS, does not stack up. As can be seen from the above, Mr. McGrail has a long and distinguished career. His term as Commissioner has been busy and successful. It is simply absurd to accuse him of failing to take proactive steps to address systemic issues which were identified in the 2016 report, two years before he commenced in office.

71. As regards efficiency, the inspection report is clear that there are long-standing problems, which were identified in the previous (2016) inspection report, have not been fully addressed by the time of the October 2019 inspection. Mr. McGrail had by that time only been in post for a little over a year, and it is simply not credible to suggest that these flaws can and should be laid at his door. Further, during his short period in office prior to the inspection he had to address the July 2019 arrest and investigation of the Iranian Oil Tanker "Grace 1" which was an extraordinary incident, managed by the RGP and supported by the Royal Marines, and which attracted widespread acclaim (see the brief reference at p. 13 of the report).

72. In addition, the report makes clear in respect of efficiency that the RGP is in need of additional resources, from the Government/ FCO.

73. Insofar as it is suggested that Mr. McGrail did not set up a working group, his response is that as a result of the unprecedented demand placed on the RGP during 2019, the RGP has been addressing the issues raised in the Report by merging them in daily work practices. This can be seen by the initiatives referred to above and the results achieved. In addition, as you know Mr. McGrail has provided the Authority and the Minister of Justice with a comprehensive road map for implementing the 2020 report. These have both been agreed to be the proper procedure and no concerns have been raised. Indeed, some of the recommendations in the Report have since been met and the others are in progress. It would simply be irrational to conclude that this approach would justify forcing him to take early retirement.

74. It is of note that the 22nd May letter was the first Mr. McGrail has heard that either the Chief Minister or Governor or indeed any member of the Government lays blame for any of the issues identified in the report with him. None of the conversations he has had around the report have reflected the 22nd May letter which again raises the strong inference that this issue is being used as a pretence to mask the real reason for attempting to remove Mr. McGrail. For example, the Minister for Justice, Samantha Sacramento MP, messaged him on 29 April to say the report "is shocking reading on the face of it, but if you analyse it deeper it's not that bad, and it's has easy solutions" and "it can all be fixed don't worry". This message reflected the tone and content of the communications around the report. There have also been a number of very recent articles in the press which highlight the exceptional nature of the RGP given the unusually wide range of issues it has to deal with – from drug smuggling and international fraud to world diplomatic incidents involving maritime vessels and the potential unfairness of applying the same standards as apply to other forces to such an unusual jurisdiction.

75. In addition, we note that an article in the Gibraltar Chronicle of the 28th May 2020 by an independent journalist, Mr. James Neish, who is intimately aware of the work of the RGP, suggests that the Report may have unfairly minimised the unique demands made of the RGP and which it responds to successfully for the most part. The article is titled "It's always easier to judge from a distance".

76. As stated above, the GPA must reach an independent conclusion in respect of this issue. It has not carried out the 2-year performance review requested by the Governor at the time of Mr. McGrail's appointment. We submit that there is a complete lack of evidence of Mr. McGrail's culpability for any of the issues highlighted by the inspection report. He has, in any event, taken extensive steps to improve and modernise the RGP. It would therefore be grossly unfair to conclude that, having been in post just over a year before the inspection,

Mr. McGrail is sufficiently blameworthy for the conclusions of the inspection report such that he should be forced to retire "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar". However, and in any event, in order to reach such a conclusion it would be necessary for the GPA to carry out a full and fair review into Mr. McGrail's record during his time in post.

Conclusion

77. For the reasons stated above there is no possible, valid reason for the GPA to exercise its s.34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from office. The only rational decision for the GPA to reach is to dismiss the request of the Governor and Chief Minister. In any event, the defects in this process are already so flagrant that it would not be possible to reach a just result unless it is to allow Mr. McGrail to remain in post.

Yours faithfully,

Charles Gomez

GIBRALTAR POLICE AUTHORITY
(The Community in Policing)

22nd May 2020

Commissioner Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Royal Gibraltar Police
New Mole House

Dear Commissioner McGrail,

Invitation to Retire : Section 34 of the Police Act ('the Act')

Our meeting earlier this morning refers.

Today I expressed to you that the Gibraltar Police Authority was calling upon you to retire under the provisions of Section 34 of the Act.

I told you that the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar. The reasons which the Governor and the Chief Minister have provided the Authority for their loss of confidence are summarised in the paragraphs numbers 1 to 5 below and address the relevant factors set out in Section 34(1) of the Act.

Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief Minister and have taken the view that your position is untenable as Commissioner given that you have lost the confidence of BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister.

Please find below the main issues contributing to the loss of confidence, as expressed to the Authority by the Governor and the Chief Minister.

1. Efficiency:

The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report address 'inefficiency' directly and indirectly. Indeed, the "Overview" of the Report specifically provides a criticism (para 2, page 7) that the Force is not 'as effective or efficient as it could be'.

Unit 25B Casemates Square, Gibraltar
Tel: (+350) 20040918, E-mail: secretary@gpa.gi

In this respect, the position is clear as to responsibility. Under Section 33 of the Act, it is the Commissioner who is responsible for the efficient administration of the Force. That means that responsibility in respect of this failing rests legally, directly with you.

It was also pointed out to the Authority that in your application for the role of Commissioner you would, if successful, immediately set up a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been met by the 1st March 2019. This action point was considered by you to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Not only have the recommendations and action points set out in the 2015/6 reports not been complied with but now, in addition, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The Authority notes that the Chief Minister has written to you directly, under Section 15 of the Act (copied to me as Chairman of the Authority), seeking further information on this matter given that neither he or the Governor seem to have a full picture of what actually transpired. The incident has resulted not just in a diplomatic complaint filed against the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, but also to a vessel being out of action, questions as to standard operating procedures in place and all the other concerns contained in the letter sent to you by the Chief Minister. I do not need to repeat that here, but I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident. Additionally, the Governor expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you about this most serious incident which has resulted in loss of life.

2. Effectiveness:

The issues relating to effectiveness were linked by the Governor and the Chief Minister. Additionally, as a result of the above, the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and the RGP's effectiveness as sea was therefore severely impacted for some time. The effectiveness of the RGP will also now be seriously compromised given the increased legal workload which will arise as a direct result of the claims made and all the corollary effects that they will give rise to.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity:

It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point. This is very serious indeed. I think you need to reflect carefully on this. The situation we are in is one where BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister respectively have expressed this view. It is not one of them that has expressed this view, which would be bad enough, but BOTH of them.

Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings.

The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity.

5. Independence:

This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service.

It is for those reasons that we are calling upon you to retire on the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity and the independence of policing in Gibraltar, but before doing so are giving you an opportunity, as provided for in Section 34(2) of the Act to make representations which we shall consider.

I trust that this serves to clarify matters further.

I look forward to receiving any representations you may wish to make under Section 34(2) of the Act.

Yours,

JJ Britto

Dear all –

I believe you are aware of the investigation we are conducting following a complaint filed by James Gaggero, Chairman of the Bland Group. Yesterday, we carried out executive action on three ex-Bland Group employees and they are now on police bail. Immediate enquires post to our intervention have revealed issues of serious concern which I require to brief you on. Please advise when we could meet - the sooner the better. I would also ask that this request to meet is not shared with anyone other than those copied in this email.

Dear Albert,

Re: Op Delhi - Hacking of NSCIS platform

Amidst the current pandemic crisis, we find ourselves having to also deal with a host of 'normal' matters and it is on this note that I write to you to try resolve and a key issue concerning an on-going investigation the RGP is conducting.

You will recall the investigation the RGP commenced in late December 2018 into an alleged attempt to defraud Bland Limited of the National Security Central Intelligence System ("the NSCIS platform") maintenance contract and computer hacking related offences. In furtherance of this, former employees of Bland Limited, John Perez, Thomas Cornelio and Edward Asquez were arrested on the 10th May 2019.

On the 13th May 2019, you and I attended a meeting with the Chief Minster, together with Minister Costa (the then MoJ), the Director of Public Prosecutions, Mr Rocca, the Chief Secretary, Mr Grech, and Superintendent Richardson. During this meeting I outlined our suspicion that Caine Sanchez may have committed criminal offences and of our intent to arrest him. The Chief Minister mentioned his belief that the ownership of the NSCIS platform was in dispute and that HMGoG should be the complainant in this matter.

On the 17th July 2019 you met with Detective Inspector Wyan and Detective Sergeant Clarke of our Crime Division with regards to a witness statement in support of the investigation. One of the lines of enquiry we needed to close was that of the ownership of the platform, an issue which was discussed at this meeting. On the 17th October 2019 you provided a draft copy of your statement, however, the issue of ownership was not covered. As a result, on the 22nd October, DI Wyan sought clarification as to whether you would consider outlining the position of HMGoG in this regard. You responded on the 27th October 2019, stating that you did not feel it necessary to give a view on ownership, nor that it was the appropriate forum to air any differences. A copy of your response is attached.

During the course of this investigation Bland Limited have made clear the legal basis on which they assert ownership as well providing evidence in support. This includes a master software development and maintenance agreement, which although unsigned, reflected their understanding of the terms and conditions upon which the NSCIS platform was provided to HMGoG. This is further corroborated by monthly payments made by HMGoG to Bland Limited (in respect of the NSCIS platform) under the head "Software Licence Fee." They have also provided additional evidence by way of correspondence in support of their position including correspondence with Caine Sanchez.

The Director of Public Prosecutions has advised that the issue of ownership of the platform is integral to the prosecution of this case. This is based, in part, on statements made on 26th July 2019 by two of the subjects under investigation that the platform is owned by HMGoG. You will appreciate that this point needs clarification in fairness to the accused.

Those arrested continue on police bail. The RGP finds itself in an awkward position - in the absence of a definitive response, and by this I mean a witness statement by HMGoG as to the ownership of the NSCIS platform, we will have to rely upon the evidence provided by Bland Limited, who have emphatically asserted their ownership of the platform from the onset of this investigation and on whose evidence we have based all our activity.

I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Yours,

Ian McGrail OTM MSc

Subject: James Levy
Attachments: Scanned from a Xerox Multifunction Printer.pdf

Dear Attorney

I write on behalf of my firm's senior partner James Levy QC in relation to the attendance of RGP at his home and office addresses earlier today.

The officers who attended informed him that they were investigating the offence of conspiracy to defraud in connection with the dishonest obtaining of a maintenance contract relating to the NCSIS platform. They told him, in terrorem, that they were in possession of a search warrant (although they left with him a copy of a proforma relating to section 21 warrants of arrest, it is plain that the warrant which they claim to have had must have been a section 12 warrant), and told him that unless he cooperated, the warrant would be executed. As you would expect of a person of Mr Levy QC's stature and standing, he agreed to cooperate. He permitted them to enter his home address, and to search it, which they did. Despite threatening to execute the warrant, the police officers declined to provide him with a copy, even though they left the proforma. They seized an ipad, and then left to search his office. At Hassans' offices, they entered his personal office, and asked for his iphone and copies of documents. Again, Mr Levy QC agreed to cooperate, and provided his phone, with the sim card removed (so as to allow him to continue to work).

I am extremely concerned by the apparent gross abuse of power that this conduct amounts to, and that the RGP has seen fit to proceed in this manner. Although Mr Levy has asked me to confirm that the officers in attendance were personally courteous to him at all times, it is absolutely unconscionable that they should have threatened to execute a warrant in order to secure entry so that police search powers could be used. Moreover, it is completely inexplicable how the RGP could have thought that any warrant was proper, let alone that any court could have considered that the statutory pre-conditions for the issue of a warrant were met. The issue of a warrant was unnecessary, oppressive and highly distressing to Mr Levy and his family. It directly impugned Mr Levy's reputation and dignity as an officer of the court, the senior partner of Gibraltar's largest law firm and a highly respected member of the local community. Putting aside the ridiculous notion that he is suspected of having been involved in this serious criminal activity, it is not even clear that a production order under section 13 could have been properly obtained. How could it have even been properly suggested that entry to the premises would not be granted unless a warrant was produced, or that the purpose of a search would be frustrated or seriously prejudiced?

Mr Levy and my firm are, in addition, highly aggrieved at the fact that the RGP have taken Mr Levy's tablet and mobile telephone, which, as you will appreciate, contain a vast amount of privileged and irrelevant information to which the RGP is clearly not entitled as a matter of trite law. Although the RGP undertook to engage an independent counsel in the UK to examine the material for LPP, this completely fails to provide the necessary assurances that LPP material, or unrelated personal, private and privileged information, will be adequately protected. Not only was the material not 'blue-bagged' in his presence (presumably because the RGP intend to copy the device thereafter elsewhere) but the exercise appears to be intended to be carried out outside Gibraltar.

As you know, legal professional privilege is sacrosanct. The prohibition on the production of privileged material in the Criminal Procedure Act and under the general law are total and the firm's many clients are entitled to have the protection of their privileged and confidential affairs guaranteed in any disclosure process.

I am therefore writing to you in your capacity as guardian of the public interest to seek your urgent intervention with a view to ensuring that all the seized material is returned forthwith. Notwithstanding Mr Levy's open and sincere cooperation (which continues), the RGP were simply not entitled to take the material. To the extent that RGP wishes to obtain the material afresh, then consideration should be given by it to the making of a proper inter partes section 13/Schedule 1 production order application.

To that end, I would be grateful if you could give me the opportunity to urgently meet with a view to further discussing the above concerns with you and the RGP. I would venture to say that we are dealing with a serious abuse of law and power here.

Kind regards,

Lewis Baglietto

VOLUNTARY ATTENDANCE FOR POLICE INTERVIEW UNDER CAUTION

You are not obliged to say anything unless you wish to do so, but what you say may be put into writing and given in evidence.

The RGP are investigating offences against Part 15 of the Crimes Act 2011 (Computer Misuse) and Conspiracy to Defraud. This follows a complaint made in 2018.

In October 2018 Bland Limited uncovered evidence of computer misuse within the National Security Central Intelligence System ("NSCIS"). This system is an integral part of the national security of Gibraltar. The evidence suggests that without authority the NSCIS platform had been tampered with so that sensitive information would be diverted to unauthorised servers. In addition the performance of the platform was compromised by sabotage thereby undermining Gibraltar's national security.

A complaint was made to the Royal Gibraltar Police and in May 2019, John Perez, Thomas Corneli [redacted] (all former employees of Bland Limited) and Caine Sanchez (a senior civil servant) were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to defraud Bland Limited of the NSCIS platform maintenance contract and for related offences pursuant to Part 15 of the Crimes Act 2011 (Computer Misuse).

Search warrants were executed at home and business addresses as a result of which numerous digital devices were seized. The evidence recovered has been forensically examined and affords reasonable grounds to suspect that you may have been involved in the said conspiracy, particularly in the planning and preparation stages and by improperly using your influence with a civil servant and others.

The evidence suggests that the conspiracy was to dishonestly obtain the NSCIS platform maintenance contract, and to have it transferred to 36 North Limited. According to Companies House records you are a shareholder of this company by virtue of a company wholly owned by Hassans named Astelon Limited, which owns 33% of the shares in 36 North Limited. You thereby hold over 10% of the shareholding in 36 North Limited and stood to directly benefit from the revenue created by the transfer of the NSCIS maintenance contract.

Whilst the evidence so far indicates that you may have been involved in conspiring to dishonestly obtain the NSCIS maintenance contract, the RGP are keeping an open mind and have a duty to follow all reasonable lines of enquiry.

The topic areas which we seek to explore in formal interview under caution include (but are not limited to) the following:

1. Your role and responsibilities with regard to Hassans International Law Firm
2. 36 North Limited (incl. the company formation / financing / business)
3. Astelon Limited (incl. the company formation / business)
4. Icode Limited
5. Communication / relationship with Thomas Cornelio
6. Communication / relationship with John Perez
7. Communication / relationship with Caine Sanchez
8. The National Security Central Intelligence System (NSCIS)
9. Communication with the Chief Minister in relation to any of the above
10. Evidence gathered from the search of your residence and workplace
11. Any other area relevant to this investigation

You are hereby invited to attend a voluntary interview under caution at New Mole House police station at 1000Hrs on Monday the 18th May 2020.

In the event that you unable to attend at this time please contact Detective Inspector Wyan by email at mark.wyan@royalgibpolice.gi.

The content disclosed in this document has been provided in order to assist you in responding to the police enquiries, and instructing legal representation. This is an ongoing police investigation and the information provided herein must not be disclosed to any third party without authority of the Royal Gibraltar Police.

STATUTORY POWERS OF POLICE TO SEARCH PREMISES AND THE RIGHTS OF OCCUPIERS

THE OCCUPIER SHOULD KEEP THIS FORM IN A SAFE PLACE IN CASE IT IS NEEDED FOR FUTURE REFERENCE. THE STATUTORY POWERS TO SEARCH PREMISES AND OF THE RIGHTS OF OCCUPIERS ARE SUMMARISED BELOW

SUMMARY OF POWERS OF SEARCH UNDER THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AND EVIDENCE ACT 2011

Statutory Powers: The following summaries are taken from the Sections shown.

1. Section 21 (Entry for purposes of arrest, etc): A Police Officer may enter and search any premises for the purpose of:
   a) Executing a warrant of arrest issued in connection with or arising out of criminal proceedings / or a warrant of commitment issued under Section 52 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980;
   b) Arresting a person for an indictable offence; or
   c) Arresting a person for an offence under Section 79 of the Crimes Act 2011 (Prohibition of uniforms in connection with political objects), Sections 532, 533, 539, 540 or 541 of the Crimes Act 2011 (Offences relating to trespass on property), Section 53(3) of the Traffic Act 2005 (Failure to stop when required to do so by a Police Officer in uniform), and Section 62 of the Traffic Act 2005 (Driving, or being in charge, when under the influence of drink or drugs);
   d) Arresting any juvenile who has been remanded or detained under this Act;
   e) Recapturing a person who is, or is deemed for any purpose to be, unlawfully at large while liable to be detained in a prison or other place of detention;
   f) Recapturing a person who is unlawfully at large and whom the officer is pursuing; or
   g) Preventing death or personal injury or serious damage to property.
2. Section 22(1) (Entry and Search after arrest – Inspector's PRIOR written authority required): A Police Officer may enter and search any premises occupied or controlled by a person under arrest for an indictable offence, if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting there is on the premises evidence, other than items subject to legal privilege, that relates to that offence or to some other indictable offence connected with or similar to that offence. Except as provided by Section 22(5) (below), no search may take place under this Section unless an officer of the rank of Inspector or above has given written authority.
3. Section 22(5) (Entry and Search after arrest – Inspector's prior authority not required but MUST be informed as soon as practicable after search): A Police Officer may conduct a search as shown in paragraph 2 above without obtaining the written authority of an Inspector or above where the arrested person has not yet been taken to the Police Station and his/her presence is necessary elsewhere for the effective investigation of the offence.
4. Section 54(2)(b) (Search upon arrest): Where a person has been arrested for an indictable offence at a place other than a Police Station, Police Officer shall have the power to enter and search any premises in which he was when arrested, or immediately before he was arrested, for evidence relating to that offence for which he has been arrested.
5. Reasonable Force: In the exercise of a power to search premises, Police may use reasonable force to enter the premises and carry out the search.
6. With Consent: A Police Officer may enter and search any premises with the written consent of a person entitled to grant entry to the premises.

SUMMARY OF POWERS OF SEIZURE UNDER THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AND EVIDENCE ACT 2011

1. Where a Police Officer is searching premises under the powers conferred by Section 22, he may seize and retain evidence relating to the indictable offence for which the person is under arrest or evidence relating to another indictable offence connected with or similar to the indictable offence for which the person is under arrest.
2. Where a Police Officer is lawfully on premises, he may seize anything which he has reasonable grounds for believing:
   a) Has been obtained in consequence of an offence and that it is necessary to seize it in order to prevent it being concealed, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed; or
   b) Is evidence in relation to an offence which he is investigating, or any other, being concealed, lost, altered or destroyed.
3. Instead of seizing property, an officer may require that the holder of the property retains it. If the holder then disposes, alters or destroys it, he may be liable to civil or criminal proceedings (Para. 7.4 of Code B – Codes of Practice).
4. Normally, no item may be seized which is subject to legal privilege (as defined in Section 14) (Para. 7.2 of Code B – Codes of Practice). There are, however, some exceptions to this rule (e.g. when powers are exercised under Sections 29 to 40 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011).
5. An officer may photograph or copy, or have photographed or copied, any document which he has the power to seize (Para. 7.5 of Code B – Codes of Practice).
6. Where information is held on a computer, an officer may require it to be produced in a legible form so that it can be taken away (Para. 7.6 of Code B – Codes of Practice).

RIGHTS OF THE OCCUPIER / OWNER OF PROPERTY

1. General: Searches must be made at a reasonable hour unless this might frustrate the purpose of the search (Para. 5.2 of Code B – Codes of Practice). If any of your property is kept by the Police, you are entitled, on request, to be provided with a list or description of the property within a reasonable time (Para. 7.16 of Code B – Codes of Practice). If you wish, you, or your representative will be allowed supervised access to your property so that you can examine it or have it photographed or copied. Alternatively you may be provided with a photograph or copy. In either case, you are responsible for the costs. Access, etc, will not be allowed if the officer in charge of an investigation believes that this would prejudice the investigation of an offence or any criminal proceedings (Para. 7.17 of Code B – Codes of Practice).
2. Search Warrant: A copy of the warrant should, if practicable, be given to the occupier before the search begins (Para. 6.8 of Code B – Codes of Practice). If the occupier is not present, copies of the warrant and this Notice should be left in a prominent place (Para. 6.8 of Code B – Codes of Practice).
3. Search with Consent: Consent to a search must be given in writing (Para. 5.1 of Code B – Codes of Practice). Consent must not be obtained under duress (Para. 5.3 of Code B – Codes of Practice). Where consent is withdrawn before the search is completed, the search must stop (Para. 5.3 of Code B – Codes of Practice). If you reside in a lodging house or similar accommodation, your landlord can consent to your room (or rooms) being searched if you are unavailable at the time and the matter is urgent (Note for Guidance 5A to Code B – Codes of Practice).
4. Compensation for Damage: Compensation may be payable in appropriate cases for damage caused in entering and searching premises. An application for compensation may be made in writing to: The Commissioner of Police; Police Headquarters; New Mole House Police Station; Gibraltar.
5. Codes of Practice: A copy of the "Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises" – Code B, is available for you to consult at any Police Station. This Notice is a summary only of the main provisions of the Code, which should be consulted if you require further details (Para. 6.7(e) of Code B – Codes of Practice).

The contents of this document will be processed in strict compliance with the Royal Gibraltar Police's policy on Data Protection, which has been complied in accordance with the provisions of the Data Protection Act 2004.

Subject:	OFFICIAL - SENSITIVE RE: James Levy

Dear AG,

Further to my email this morning I now able to provide the substantive response that I promised.

Mr Baglietto is incorrect in the sequence of events and we would also argue incorrect with the conclusions that are drawn from them. Body worn video footage was taken yesterday and this will provide an accurate record and corroborate the following version of events:

1. Mr Levy was requested to attend his office in order to execute a warrant issued by the Magistrates' Court. He initially refused to attend stating that he was busy that day and offered to try and meet on the following day asserting that the officers did not know what they were doing and that there would be serious repercussions. The execution of the warrant was planned and executed in the most tactful and least intrusive way possible and all persons were treated with the utmost respect and courtesy. After initially refusing to attend, Mr Levy asked for time to consider and agreed to revert to the officers in due course. After some fifteen minutes he capitulated and agreed to attend his own office.

2. On his arrival Mr Levy was cautioned as is required by law and a prepared summary of the relevant facts on which it was suspected that he may have taken part in a criminal conspiracy were read over to him and this recorded on a body worn camera. It was stressed that the police were keeping an open mind and that any explanation that he provided may cause the investigation to proceed in a different direction.

3. The purpose of the warrant and the material searched for was discussed and Mr Levy declared that as an officer of the court he would of course comply but needed to consider the rights of his clients as the material we sought was subject to legal privilege. The means by which legally privileged material is seized and handled was discussed and his views were sought as to whether local or UK counsel should be chosen to examine the content seized and he declared a preference for UK counsel.

4. Mr Levy pressed for an explanation as to why we had not simply obtained a production order and therefore not need to use a warrant; the reasons are as follows:
    a. Search warrants were used for all other suspects in this case and he was subject to the investigation as an individual and this does not necessarily imply that Hassan's as an entity were suspect of criminal liability.
    b. There was a need to seize his devices at that time, not ask for them to be handed over on request.
    c. Production Orders are obtained through an inter-party application and this would involve disclosing details of the investigation to an interested party in advance of any formal police interview and thereby potentially compromise any line of questioning.

5. Although Mr Levy asserted his willingness to cooperate he asked to consult privately with Mr Chincotta and left the room with him. Some twenty minutes later they returned and advised that they had consulted with a top UK Silk and that even though he had been advised that the execution of a warrant was an abuse of process the means to challenge it was by judicial review. He therefore wanted to cooperate but was still uncertain as to whether to handover the items voluntarily or be compelled to do so by warrant.

6. After much discussion with Javier Chincotta it was decided to try and come to an arrangement with Hassan's IT technician and the RGP IT forensic examiner to extract the items required from Hassan's servers on a voluntary basis. As this involved technical cooperation Mr Levy asked that in the meantime that his office was searched, assuring the officers that he never used the computer located there. Insp Wyan sought clarity as to whether this would amount to a voluntary search or whether the warrant would be executed and Mr Levy stated that he wanted the search to be on a voluntary basis and would sign the relevant sections of the warrant after the issue of extracting the emails was resolved. He asked that only Supt. Richardson accompany him to his office and this was agreed. In the office he opened the cupboards and drawers and declared that nothing concerning 36 North was held within. A cursory visual examination satisfied the officer that it was unlikely that the material sought was there.

7. Once back in the boardroom it was noted that the IT staff were still trying to determine the best way to address the problem and both men left to pursue this. As they left, and at the request of Mr Levy, Supt. Richardson and Mr Levy left for a search of his home office. Once again the terms of the search were discussed and again Mr Levy asserted that he wanted the search to be on a voluntary basis and that he would sign the relevant form once the email situation was concluded. Inside his office a rudimentary search was conducted with Mr Levy opening drawers and storage areas and explaining their content. Nothing was removed from the office and Mr Levy was asked to produce his iPad and a telephone which had been used to send messages to the other persons subject to this investigation. After initially declaring that he did not recognise the telephone number subject to the investigation (a UK based number) he asked his family who informed him that it was a number that he had previously used for WhatsApp as his Blackberry (which he previously used) did not have that function. He was however unable to remember what had happened to that phone and could not provide it.

8. The ipad was handed over to him by his wife and he volunteered the PIN code. The device was not taken into police custody at that stage as Mr Levy had still not formally agreed to hand over the items on a voluntary basis by signing the necessary form.

9. Once Mr Levy and Supt. Richardson returned to the board room at Hassans, Mr Levy agreed that he would provide the items on a voluntary basis and signed the relevant forms in the presence and with the agreement of Mr Chincotta.

10. The warrant has been obtained pursuant to schedule 1 paragraph 12 the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011. Mr Baglietto appears to be confused by the copy of the form provided to Mr Levy entitled "Statutory Powers of Police to Search Premises and the Rights of Occupiers which caters for warrants other than the one in issue and includes a reference at paragraph 6 to the With Consent searches. Mr Levy signed to consent to a search by consent at 1700 and at this point handed over his IPad. He retained his iPhone until he had made arrangements with his own IT specialist to obtain a backup copy. The phone was handed over to police, again on a voluntary basis at 2100Hrs at NMH.

11. The issue of the emails is still live given that Hassans declared that they had over 80,000,000 emails and the time to extract the relevant ones may take several days. At the time of writing we are under the belief that these would be hand over voluntarily, however given the contents of Mr Baglietto's letter to the Clerk of the Magistrates' Court this would seem to be unlikely.

12. The warrant was issued by the Magistrates' Court and followed the correct process where a substantial affidavit was produced and examined by the Magistrate over a period exceeding 90 minutes having been provided with a copy of it in advance. You will note that Mr Baglietto is seeking to obtain a copy of the information laid before the Magistrate and making the absurd allegation that there has been misfeasance in public office. This investigation will be severely prejudiced should this information be is provided at this stage and the DPP and the Clerk to the Magistrates' Court has been informed.

13. Finally I am informed that no copy of the warrant was provided and neither was it asked for. This is because it was not relied on as the items were handed over voluntarily.

I hope the chronology of events as recorded by the team and explained above provides you with the details you require fro our meeting in a short while.

Sincerely,

Ian McGrail OTM MSc

Dear AG –

I have now had an opportunity to discuss the contents of your email sent at 2312Hrs yesterday and which I only read this morning. I am confident that Mr Baglietto is incorrect in some of the facts he sets out and the conclusions that he draws from them. I have seen nothing to suggest that the investigating team have acted improperly and refute in the strongest terms that there has been a serious abuse of law or power.

My response will be on the understanding that is in your capacity as guardian of the public interest, as this is how Lewis Baglietto has sought urgent intervention from yourself, in what is a protracted and serious live criminal investigation.

In my view, it would not be appropriate for the Commissioner of Police and the Attorney General to meet with counsel representing a person under investigation to discuss matters concerning a live investigation and which may be subject a legal challenge at later date. This is particularly so as Mr Levy has indicated that he is likely to ask Mr Baglietto to represent him in the formal police interview under caution scheduled for next week. That said it would be appropriate for you and I to meet and discuss the preparation of legal arguments to defend any possible legal challenge following on from yesterday's intervention.

I am working to provide a substantive response and would ask for your patience whilst I prepare this: I aim to revert to you by close of play today if not earlier.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sir,

I have been forwarded a copy of your letter addressed to Detective Superintendent Paul Richardson dated 13 May 2020 the contents of which have been noted.

I have been fully briefed as to the conduct of the investigation and given the seriousness of the allegations made and the matters raised. I have seen fit to respond directly.

At the outset I must point out that the sequence of events are not as you have described and I do not agree with you that there were reasonable grounds to believe that Mr Levy would have simply handed over his devices and documents.

Notwithstanding the fact the police attended with a search warrant issued by the Magistrates Court, an attempt was made to try and deal with the matter by consent. This involved Mr Levy consulting with 'senior silk' in private and informing the officers that he would consent to handing over the items sought as long as the interests of his clients were protected. Once the means in which they would be achieved was clear Mr Levy signed the relevant form after reading it and consulting with Mr Chincotta. Accordingly the search warrant was not executed but rather Mr Levy chose to hand over his devices voluntarily, albeit after some time and after extensive consultation.

I do not agree with you that warrant was excessive, unjustified or unlawful and in my view the action taken was both legitimate and proportionate in the circumstances. I do not think it would serve any purpose to enter into a discussion on the use of Productions Orders as opposed to a Search Warrant.

In relation to the items that you have requested I have attached a copy of the search warrant to this email. I am unable at this time to comply with your request for a copy of the application for the search warrant or any other written evidence as this could potentially compromise an ongoing investigation as Mr Levy has yet to be interviewed. The same applies to point 4 (any notes taken by the RGP of the hearing). The only order or ruling that I am aware of made by the Stipendiary Magistrate was the warrant itself. Although the DPP has been consulted on various non-operational issues concerning this investigation including the status of various parties he has not provided advice on the application of a search warrant which remains an operational matter.

Please rest assured that the RGP has not copied or downloaded any material so far and in fact the devices remain sealed and I have assumed safe custody of them. I remain convinced of the legality of our course of conduct but undertake to postpone their submission to be examined for seven days from the date of this letter in the event that you may wish to make any legal challenge to this decision.

I would also ask you to please note that it is not a question of me refusing to meet with you and the Attorney General, but rather I view it as inappropriate given the circumstances in which we find ourselves which I trust you understand.

I enclose a copy of a notice regarding voluntary attendance for police interview. This sets out the topic areas which we seek to explore in the formal police interview. I should point that we have not shared this document with any other party. It would be very helpful if Mr Levy brings any material with him that may support his account or provide it in advance of his attendance. Additionally, as would be normal practice counsel will be provided with a pre-interview briefing

Finally, as you will no doubt be aware, Mr Levy undertook to voluntarily extract the relevant emails and other documents from Hassans servers and provide these to police along with all files concerning Astelon Ltd and 36 North Ltd. Grateful if you advise when these will be supplied to assist with our investigation.

Yours faithfully

VOLUNTARY ATTENDANCE FOR POLICE INTERVIEW UNDER CAUTION

You are not obliged to say anything unless you wish to do so, but what you say may be put into writing and given in evidence.

The RGP are investigating offences against Part 15 of the Crimes Act 2011 (Computer Misuse) and Conspiracy to Defraud. This follows a complaint made in 2018.

In October 2018 Bland Limited uncovered evidence of computer misuse within the National Security Central Intelligence System ("NSCIS"). This system is an integral part of the national security of Gibraltar. The evidence suggests that without authority the NSCIS platform had been tampered with so that sensitive information would be diverted to unauthorised servers. In addition the performance of the platform was compromised by sabotage thereby undermining Gibraltar's national security.

A complaint was made to the Royal Gibraltar Police and in May 2019, John Perez, Thomas Cornelio [redacted] (all former employees of Bland Limited) and Caine Sanchez (a senior civil servant) were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to defraud Bland Limited of the NSCIS platform maintenance contract and for related offences pursuant to Part 15 of the Crimes Act 2011 (Computer Misuse).

Search warrants were executed at home and business addresses as a result of which numerous digital devices were seized. The evidence recovered has been forensically examined and affords reasonable grounds to suspect that you may have been involved in the said conspiracy, particularly in the planning and preparation stages and by improperly using your influence with a civil servant and others.

The evidence suggests that the conspiracy was to dishonestly obtain the NSCIS platform maintenance contract, and to have it transferred to 36 North Limited. According to Companies House records you are a shareholder of this company by virtue of a company wholly owned by Hassans named Astelon Limited, which owns 33% of the shares in 36 North Limited. You thereby hold over 10% of the shareholding in 36 North Limited and stood to directly benefit from the revenue created by the transfer of the NSCIS maintenance contract.

Whilst the evidence so far indicates that you may have been involved in conspiring to dishonestly obtain the NSCIS maintenance contract, the RGP are keeping an open mind and have a duty to follow all reasonable lines of enquiry.

The topic areas which we seek to explore in formal interview under caution include (but are not limited to) the following:

1. Your role and responsibilities with regard to Hassans International Law Firm
2. 36 North Limited (incl. the company formation / financing / business)
3. Astelon Limited (incl. the company formation / business)
4. Icode Limited
5. Communication / relationship with Thomas Cornelio
6. Communication / relationship with John Perez
7. Communication / relationship with Caine Sanchez
8. The National Security Central Intelligence System (NSCIS)
9. Communication with any other person in relation to any of the above
10. Evidence gathered from the search of your residence and workplace
11. Any other area relevant to this investigation

You are hereby invited to attend a voluntary interview under caution at New Mole House police station at 1000Hrs on Monday the 18th May 2020.

In the event that you unable to attend at this time please contact Detective Inspector Wyan by email at mark.wyan@royalgibpolice.gi.

The content disclosed in this document has been provided in order to assist you in responding to the police enquiries, and instructing legal representation. This is an ongoing police investigation and the information provided herein must not be disclosed to any third party without authority of the Royal Gibraltar Police.

Our Ref: IM166

Mr Lewis Baglietto QC
PO Box 199
Madison Building
Midtown, Queensway
Gibraltar

Dear Mr Baglietto,

Re - Mr James Levy QC

Thank you for your letter dated 20th May 2020, the contents of which are noted. Given some of the matters of law raised in your letter I have sought advice from the DPP.

I do not propose to repeat the RGP's position regarding the legality of the search warrant, suffice to say that our position remains that the warrant was properly and lawfully obtained.

You are correct to say that the RGP has objected to the disclosure of the documents used in support of the application of the warrant and that continues to be the RGP's fundamental position regarding full provision of all material. Notwithstanding this, I have instructed my officers to consider, if possible, making available a redacted version of those documents which may satisfy you regarding the basis upon which the application was made. Additionally, you have had made available to you substantial information in the pre-interview disclosure information. I hope that this combined will make the application to the Magistrate unnecessary. However, I must reiterate that any application for full disclosure of the documents will be resisted on the basis previously set out. Our view is that our objection is encapsulated within the Criminal Procedure Rules provisions identified by you in your letter.

As already explained, the DPP's advice was not sought in relation to whether a warrant should be applied for or how it would be executed. Such matters are operational in nature. The DPP's advice was however sought at various times in relation to status of all persons subject to the investigation. In this regard we remain convinced that the RGP's actions were lawful.

I note your request for further assurances from me regarding the examination etc of the material voluntarily provided by your client. In this regard, I can assure you that the material will not be examined without my giving you 7 days notice in advance of our intention to do so. This will give you ample opportunity to take whatever action you may deem necessary in the event that you are put on notice given that already 8 days since the items were handed over voluntarily.

Whilst on the matter of the material provided, I note that you have failed to respond to the point raised in earlier correspondence, namely that the material was provided voluntarily by your client and the warrant was not executed. On that basis I would be grateful if you would clarify the relevance of the challenge of the warrant. You will appreciate that this is an important issue for a number of reasons and clarity is required. Any suggestion that Mr Levy was coerced in to acting against his will and under threat of the execution of a warrant is strongly denied and will be apparent from any viewing of the Body Worn Video footage that was taken at the time.

Finally, for the avoidance of doubt, your client continues to be a suspect in this investigation. Your client has been given an opportunity to provide a prepared statement which may assist in the RGP's enquiries and clarify any involvement he may have had in the matter under investigation. Needless to say, the RGP must reserve the right to interview Mr Levy under caution at any time and it is a matter for you to advise your client on the effect of any statements he may or may not provide to the RGP. I must repeat that notwithstanding the above the RGP have an open mind and will review our position as and when evidence becomes available to us.

Yours sincerely

Subject: OFFICIAL: Letter before action - damages claim

Dear Attorney General,

The Commissioner of Police is in receipt of correspondence with regard to a claim for damages following a collision at sea on the 8th of March this year. I understand that the Director of Public Prosecutions has raised the issue of who should represent the RGP to defend the claim. The DPP and I met yesterday to discuss whether it would be appropriate for the Office of Criminal Prosecution and Litigation to do so. We concluded it would not for the following reasons which potentially apply:

1) Prosecuting European Arrest Warrants issued by Spain to extradite the officers crewing the vessel.
2) Prosecuting criminal charges against the officers crewing the vessel.
3) Prosecuting disciplinary charges against the officers crewing the vessel.
4) Defending civil actions against the organisation or the individual officers in Spain.

Should you agree with our views I would be grateful for your authority to appoint counsel and your advice on who would be best placed to represent the RGP. Finally our experience is that claims made against the RGP have been generally handled by Government. Do you wish this to be the case in this instance or should we manage it ourselves together with appointed counsel?

Best regards,

Dear Michael

Thank you for copying me into the below.

I think it is entirely inappropriate for this matter not to have been raised with me in the first instance by the Commissioner.

This matter raises issues of fundamental human rights, the right to life, potential payment of huge amounts of damages, the potential extradition and liberty of serving police officers being at stake, the issue of Standard Operating Procedures which may be in place and the management thereof. All of that is in addition to the huge potential political exposure that arises for Gibraltar as a result thereof and the concomitant (and dangerous) issues of sovereignty and the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.

Indeed, it is difficult to think of an issue as fundamental as this affecting the RGP, certainly in the time I have been in office. There is no consideration in the email below of claims or offences going beyond "the officers crewing the vessel", which is also, in my view an issue that may also need further consideration.

As you know, it comes against the backdrop of the very unflattering report from the HMICFRS.

I am therefore surprised and greatly disappointed that these issues have not been the subject of a detailed submission to me by the Commissioner in respect of the events in question and the issues which now arise.

I shall therefore be writing directly to the Commissioner on this and all other aspects of this matter. In the interim, I do not authorise the incurring of any expenditure in briefing out of this matter at this stage.

Please refer both the DPP and Superintendent Yeats to my response.

Best wishes

Dear CM –

I refer to the below thread which includes you response to the AG and which has been forwarded to me.

You are evidently very disappointed but I want to reassure you that it has never been my intention to withhold anything from you concerning this very serious matter. I provided you with an overview on the day of the incident, then engaged with the AG as per your suggestion and have been doing so ever since. I will hopefully be in a better position to brief you on the full details of the incident once I receive the report of the findings of independent investigation team we called in. This team had to return early to the UK because of the COVID-19 crisis and because of the lockdown in UK, they have been unable to progress the matter as expeditiously as we all would have wanted.

The letter from local counsel representing the families and suggesting a future claim for damages was only received a few days ago which is what triggered our enquiry with the DPP only yesterday concerning legal representation.

I am of course available to discuss all the points you allude to at your earliest convenience.

Best wishes

Subject: Replies re former Commissioner

Answer: The Chief Minister

Mr Speaker, the honourable gentleman has asked 20 questions about the retirement, performance or other aspects of a contract of employment an individual.

It is not appropriate for the House to be considering any matter related to the personal circumstances of an individual, especially an individual who data the government holds as a Data Controller.

This is not a question of not wanting to answer, but a case of what it is appropriate to address in this House.

In preparing this answer, the government has confirmed with the former Commissioner, Mr McGrail, as a relevant Data Subject, that he does not wish matters related to his retirement to form the subject of Government statements or answers in this house.

For the avoidance of doubt, however, Mr McGrail has authorised the Government to disclose that there are no compromise or confidentiality agreements entered into by him and the government other than the usual arrangement for early retirement of any government officer.

Additionally, some of the questions the Honourable Gentleman has asked are out of order as they relate to matters which are public or matters for which the government is not answerable.

For example, the Government is not answerable for the actions of the Governor or the Police Authority.

Another example relates to the Honourable Member's question about whether or not the Chief Minister has exercised any power under section 15 of the Police Act. This is entirely contrary to the rules given that I have already answered - in question xx - that I exercised the power in section 15 of the Police Act.

I refer the honourable gentleman to that answer

Finally, Mr Speaker, I would refer to the House and commend the recent statement from His Excellency the Governor appointing Mr Richard Ullger as Commissioner of Police.

I very much look forward to working with Commissioner Ullger, as I have with all Commissioners of Police with whom I have coincided in office, in the areas on which we will constitutionally jointly endeavour to apply the responsibilities of our respective offices to delivering the safety, security and prosperity of our people.

Dear Attorney General,

The ex-commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police, Mr. Ian McGrail has asked me to reply to the email below directly to you.

Your draft does not reflect Mr. McGrail's position.

Mr. McGrail considers that the matter of the termination of his appointment is a matter of major public importance and agrees that all parliamentary questions should be answered candidly and fully so that the people of Gibraltar have the full information that they deserve and as befits a mature Parliamentary democracy.

To the extent that there may be any Data Protection issues Mr. McGrail hereby waives them in the confidence that Parliament will be given with full, frank, fair and candid answers and that the misguided behaviour of the Gibraltar Police Authority which led to his agreement to retirement should be clearly stated, if reference has to be made to the huge personal stress which Mr. McGrail was put under.

Mr. McGrail believes and has been advised that any complaints against him of not having provided information in relation to the accident at sea which the GPA tried to rely on to force his retirement have no merit. You know this because you were party to emails and WhatsApp messages where Mr. McGrail provided timely and full information in relation to that unfortunate accident.

Similarly as Her Majesty' Inspectorate of Constabulary and Fire and Rescue services will confirm to you their criticisms of the incomplete implementation of the previous year's recommendations were not of a level of seriousness to merit the GPA's conduct in issuing a section 34 notice. You yourself are aware of the extraordinary demands put on the RGP in 2019 including, but not limited to the well-known arrest of the "Grace 1".

Please therefore reassure the Chief Minister that he is free to answer the questions in Parliament fairly and in full.

Having seen his career end in such an unfortunate manner Mr. McGrail wishes to get on with his life but does not want to interfere with the democratic process of the City at whose service he has spent an entire life working.

Yours sincerely,

Charles Gomez

Answer: The Chief Minister

Mr Speaker, the honourable gentleman has asked 20 questions about the retirement, performance or other aspects of a contract of employment an individual.

It is not appropriate for the House to be considering any matter related to the personal circumstances of an individual, especially an individual who data the government holds as a Data Controller.

This is not a question of not wanting to answer, but a case of what it is appropriate to address in this House.

In preparing this answer, the government has confirmed with the former Commissioner, Mr McGrail, as a relevant Data Subject, that he does not wish matters related to his retirement to form the subject of Government statements or answers in this house.

For the avoidance of doubt, however, Mr McGrail has authorised the Government to disclose that there are no compromise or confidentiality agreements entered into by him and the government other than the usual arrangement for early retirement of any government officer.

Additionally, some of the questions the Honourable Gentleman has asked are out of order as they relate to matters which are public or matters for which the government is not answerable.

For example, the Government is not answerable for the actions of the Governor or the Police Authority.

Another example relates to the Honourable Member's question about whether or not the Chief Minister has exercised any power under section 15 of the Police Act. This is entirely contrary to the rules given that I have already answered - in question xx - that I exercised the power in section 15 of the Police Act.

I refer the honourable gentleman to that answer

Finally, Mr Speaker, I would refer to the House and commend the recent statement from His Excellency the Governor appointing Mr Richard Ullger as Commissioner of Police.

I very much look forward to working with Commissioner Ullger, as I have with all Commissioners of Police with whom I have coincided in office, in the areas on which we will constitutionally jointly endeavour to apply the responsibilities of our respective offices to delivering the safety, security and prosperity of our people.

Dear Attorney-General,

I note with surprise that you have not acknowledged my email below.

I think it proper, however, given the highly politicised nature that this matter has developed into to take you to task for the manner in which you caused the Chief Minister's draft statement to be sent to our client via the current Commissioner of Police.

As and when the matter of Mr. McGrail's retirement is dealt with by an independent inquiry, this email thread will undoubtedly figure large in the inquiry's assessment of your involvement in it.

That said, our client is eager to ensure that no further damage is caused to the reputation of and adherence to the rule of law in Gibraltar.

We consider the manner in which you got the current Commissioner of Police involved as kind of "messenger of the messenger" to be wholly inappropriate and a breach of established constitutional conventions and limitations. Your own understanding of your constitutional position as Attorney-General and the distance that Her Majesty's Attorney-General for Gibraltar should keep from elected politicians is a matter which we would ask you to reflect on carefully.

However, your involvement of the current Commissioner of Police in what is effectively a parliamentary and therefore a political matter was inappropriate.

You have at all times been aware that we represent Mr. McGrail and it is therefore surprising to say the least that you should forward the Chief Minister's email message to you, to Mr. Ullger, a serving police officer and indeed the Crown's principal law enforcement officer in Gibraltar.

Please ensure that all further communications with our client are channelled through us.

We reserve all of Mr. McGrail's rights and look forward to hearing from you by return.

Yours faithfully,

Charles Gomez

Subject: Re: Public Inquiry

Importance: High

Dear Attorney-General,

I refer to our meeting earlier.

In the draft proposed statement which you handed to me you included the words "it was also Mr. McGrail's position that no further statements be made".

As I mentioned to you there and then, I found this sentence surprising because Mr. McGrail had never suggested that he did not want further statements to be made. Indeed, when you sent me the draft statement initially intended to be read out by the Chief Minister on Monday, I wrote back in the clearest terms, on instructions stating that Mr. McGrail did not wish to curtail any parliamentary discussion on the crucially important matter of the termination of his employment.

I have just spoken to Mr. McGrail to inform him that the Chief Minister's position is a demand for what is tantamount to unconditional surrender whereby Mr. McGrail merely withdraws his call for a public inquiry.

Mr. McGrail has asked me to make it very clear to you that at no time has his position been that "no further statements be made" and expects that the Chief Minister will not tell Parliament otherwise.

For the sake of good order, I will add that the Chief Minister appears to have completely misunderstood the principled position that Mr. McGrail has taken. When Mr. McGrail asked us to call for a public inquiry he did not do so for effect but on the basis of substance i.e. that at the very least his name should be completely cleared following the vicious campaign mounted against him during the months of May and June.

To ask him to withdraw that request without exonerating him fully is to completely misunderstand Mr. McGrail's motivation and principled position.

When you telephoned 30 minutes ago to tell me that the Chief Minister would accept nothing short of an unconditional surrender, I asked you to let me have a copy of the Chief Minister's intended statement this afternoon and you told me that this was not yet ready.

I appreciate that our meeting earlier was not without prejudice and expect that if the Chief Minister is to make reference to it, which if course he is entitled to, he should make reference to everything that was said including the fact that you called us to meet up with you and that we laid down Mr. McGrail's position clearly in terms of the requirement for an express exoneration as a pre-condition of any withdrawal of his request for a judicial inquiry.

Finally and for the sake of completeness, I should add that from the very substantial amount of documentation which we have, it is clear that all criticism (poorly articulated as it has been) is completely lacking in substance and extremely unfair.

I take it that as lawyer for His Excellency the Governor, you will keep him fully informed of what has transpired today.

MLL2/13

I reserve all my client's rights.

Yours sincerely,

Charles Gomez

Joey

I was thinking about the best way forward in terms of maintaining (or not) my role/interest in the GPA as Governor and have a suggestion for you.

Why don't you send an email to all GPA members save me, stating that for as long as I am Governor, you intend to omit me from general GPA correspondence etc but that I have offered to continue to attend GPA meetings, recusing myself as necessary or at anyone's request. I'd put it as a suggestion and ask for their views. One objection to my attendance should be enough to preclude it. This gives the GPA a say in how it operates.

Regardless of what the GPA's view is, we should keep our current channels open. I'm a big believer in consulting as much as we need to before a course of action is considered or recommended and I'm more than happy to give you a steer on any issue.

I'm happy to meet you and Darren for a breakfast, lunch or dinner or even just start with a coffee at the office to talk through things. Happy to leave that to you and Darren as to format and timing - I'm more flexible than you may think.

Dear Nick,

Please ignore my previous email below.

I think that discussing potential amendments with you and the CS beforehand would work much better.

Apologies for confusion - I realise how extremely busy you must be.

Kind regards

Nick,

Congratulations on your appointment as interim Governor!

I'm going to circulate my first thoughts on potential 'tweaks' to Police Act - one section only, this covers, essentially the main role and responsibility of the Authority.

They will not seem to be significant but to my mind, they have the effect of reflecting what actually happens currently but going forwardI think the new wording will helps the Police take more 'ownership' esp. in areas such as community engagement (they already undertake this but my wording would make it more 'official' etc.

I realise that you will not be in a position to reply or provide feedback at this point in time. If you are OK with my doing so, I can omit you from the circulation and send this to you separately? Just let me know what you prefer - you may even not wish to see anything or even involve yourself at this point in time.

Note that these are my suggestions and I have not discussed with anyone else - I felt it appropriate to see what GPA members feel, first before even considering next steps.

Let me know.

Kind regards,

Joey

Informal Record of Meeting with HE the Governor and the Chief Minister, Monday 18th May 2020.

The Governor called on the Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority to meet with him and the Chief Minister.

The purpose of the meeting was to express grave concerns about certain aspects of policing in Gibraltar which had come to a head in the week before.

The first is the publication of the HMICFRS Report into the RGP.

The second is the publication of news of the filing of legal claims in Spain by the relatives of the Spanish citizens killed in an incident at sea (which undoubtedly happened outside of BGTW).

The Governor expressed his view that the Chief Minister should introduce the subject for both, as both had already spoken, as required under the Police Act.

The Chief Minister said that the position was that BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister had lost confidence in the Commissioner of Police.

The Chief Minister set out what his concerns were by reference to the provisions of Section 34 of the Police Act given that this is the provision that allows for the GPA, after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister, to call upon the Commissioner to retire – and that these are the best objective criteria of 'confidence' available.

Ahead of that the Chief Minister noted that Section 13 (1) (f) of the Police Act also gives the Governor authority to call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the Authority has failed to discharge its responsibility.

The Chief Minister explained that both the Governor and he were particularly alive to the not so subtle differences between a 'retirement' (S.34) and a 'resignation' (S.13). The effect may be the same, but the route and signposting is markedly different. Both have recorded that the power of the Governor is much more explicit, for good reason.

The Chief Minster further explained that the GPA have power to "remove" a Commissioner (as per the heading of S.34, which is not relevant to interpretation) by inviting "retirement". The GPA would do so in the interests of policing in Gibraltar when seen through the prism of 5 key elements.

The GPA are therefore being invited by the Governor and the Chief Minister together to consider whether they believe that all OR any (note it is a disjunctive, not a conjunctive list) of the following 5 have been impacted.

The Chief Minister's view on the five criteria were clear.

1. The first criteria is Efficiency:

(a) The HMICFRS Report ('the Report') could not be clearer in the Chief Minister's view in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report go directly to efficiency directly and indirectly. It is, however, shocking to see the explicit reference in the first sentence of the second paragraph of the Report, marked 'Overview' on page 7 of the Report, to both 'efficiency' and 'effectiveness' (see item 2 below). This makes out a clear basis for serious concern on this issue (and item 2) given the rank the Commissioner held in 2016 and the fact that he has held the helm at the police since 2018. Additionally, it is equally explicitly stated under S.33(1)(a) of the Act that the buck stops with the Commissioner on efficiency:

> S.33(1)The Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service thereof.

Indeed, in his application for the role of Commissioner, the Chief Minister reminded, the now Commissioner had set out (as his 'Key Action 10') that he would immediately upon appointment establish a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been implemented by the 1st March 2019. This date had not been met and it is not clear if the working group had even been established. This 'Key Action' was considered by the Commissioner to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Despite that, not only have the 2015/6 reports not been complied with, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

(b) The incident at sea is further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The effect of the events at sea will create great financial and operational difficulties for the RGP. The RGP has already had to expend funds (which it has sought as supplementary or additional funds from Government) in an external report into the incident at sea. This is being provided by the Met Police in London. Additionally, the RGP is now facing the potential for its officers to be investigated and prosecuted in Gibraltar and / or Spain, officers potentially be legally extradited to Spain for homicide, the resulting high level of legal fees to be incurred and the potentially huge payments of damages to the families which will arise as a result and which will have to be met by the Gibraltar tax payer. An investigation will also be required into what Standard Operating Procedures are in place – approved by senior management – in respect of operations at sea. All of this vitiates efficiency entirely. The issue is a pressing one. The Metropolitan Police are already carrying out an investigation. The delay in that report being provided, and Spanish press reports of claims already filed, may lead to the Chief Minister exercising his powers udner S.15(1)(a) powers to seek a factual report or assessment. The Chief Minister has already raised this with the Governor. A note verbal complaint has been filed by the Spanish authorities on these events which the Chief Minister is waiting to see before he decides whether to exercise his powers, given he as received scant information until now from the Commissioner . It would be the first time since the Police Act came into effect that this power has been exercised.

2. Effectiveness:

(a) In respect of the HMICFRS Report, on this limb of the considerations, the points in re 1 above are linked, in particular in the sentence at the beginning of paragraph 2 of the 'Overview'. The report is similarly laced with matters referring to this aspect of the interest of policing in Gibraltar.

(b) In respect of the incident at sea, the effectiveness of the RGP is impacted as already set out in point 1 above. Additionally the RGP found itself without a key marine asset for some time and its effectiveness as sea was therefore even more severely impacted. Effectiveness of the RGP will now be seriously under threat given the onslaught of legal work which will be required in order to address the claims made, as well as those likely to be made, in respect of this incident.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity: The Chief Minister felt it was best to consider limbs 3 & 4 together as, in his view, they are inextricably linked.

(a) & (b) In the context of the Report (in particular its references to a failure to even understand the potential for, let alone the actual instances of, corruption) and the matters relating to the reporting to us of the events at sea involving the death of two Spanish nationals, this is an area of huge concern to both the Governor and the Chief Minister. Both feel that their respective dealings with the Commissioner have left them with the sense that he is lacking in both probity and integrity in his dealings with them. The Chief Minister indicated that he had held discussions with the Attorney General which led him to believe that Mr Llamas felt the same way, although he obviously could not speak for him.

(c) The Chief Minister also shared another event occurring last week which had left him also in a situation where the Commissioner had expressly misled him and which left him unable to believe the Commissioner.

The Chief Minister stated that for him this is possibly the issue of deepest concern as it goes to the integrity and probity of a key individual in the maintenance of the respect for the Rule of Law. Additionally, that individual, as Commissioner is, in the Chief Minister's view, at the head of the organisation that is institutionally one of the guardians of the Rule of Law alongside the Executive and the Judiciary. For the Chief Minister, to an extent the police becomes a fourth branch of government in the maintenance and preservation of the Rule of Law. The Chief Minister stated that without the Rule of Law we are unrecognisable as a nation. The Chief Minister said that he can imagine no greater concern than this in the context of his ability to discharge his oath to the Crown and to the People as Chief Minister.

5. Independence:

(a) This area of concern is highlighted in the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given the answers set out in the Report, is clearly not even understood in the RGP. Again, these concerns can cut across the Rule of Law in a meaningful way. It is not possible for the RGP to assert that it is acting independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of the Commissioner's service to date – despite his assertions of wanting to address the issues in his application.

His Excellency then expressed his views.

The Governor said that the Chief Minister had expressed views he entirely shared.

His Excellency stated that, in addition, he had felt misled when the incident at sea had occurred and that he felt he had not received all information available to the RGP in respect of that event. He said that there had been no proactivity in addressing the events especially given the serious outcome which had resulted in loss of life. He felt he had been left with no choice but to seek further information when this should have been forthcoming without the need with persistent enquiry from him. He said he felt this left a lot to be desired.

As a result, the Governor and the Chief Minister consider that, given the views that they have now expressed it is for the GPA to take this forward in the first instance.

They ask the GPA to consider these extremely serious concerns and issues and that the GPA should engage its powers under Section 34 of the Act which specifically provides that the GPA's action to "call upon" the Commissioner to retire cannot be commenced until BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister have been consulted and ONE of has agreed. (The part of the clause that relates to consultation is conjunctive and the part that relates to agreement is disjunctive). BOTH in fact agree that the Commissioner should be invited to retire by the GPA.

It is now a matter for the GPA to decide how to act and to decide that they want to engage the S.34(1) power.

If the GPA decide to go down this road, the first step is to allow the Commissioner to make representations, if he wishes, under S.34(2).

It will of course be necessary for the GPA to consider any representation the Commissioner might make.

Thereafter, if the GPA are of the view that the Commissioner should be invited to retire, then that is when they would need to consult BOTH of the Governor and the Chief Minister and then seek the agreement of ONE of them. The Governor and the Chief Minister would then also have the benefit of any representation that the Commissioner might have made under S.34(2) in expressing a final and firm view.

Record of emergency meeting of Thursday 21st May at 9.30am

In attendance:

Joey Britto (Chair)
Darren Grech
Ernest Gomez
Frank Carreras
Nadine Collado

Apologies: Claire Pizarello
Edgar Lavarello
Julio Alcantara
Rebecca Figueras

Purpose of the meeting:

1. An emergency meeting was called to discuss a meeting to which the Chair had been called to on Monday 18th May.
2. The Chair explained that he had been called to a meeting by the Governor at the Convent and told that the Chief Minister would also be present.
3. The Chair explained to the members what had transpired at the meeting with the Governor and relayed the information, as expressed to him, by both the Governor and Chief Minister. He explained that both the Governor and Chief Minister, in no uncertain terms, had expressed that they had lost all confidence in the Commissioner. The reasons for this are given in the file note and this was read to all present.
4. After the chair read out the file note and fully explained what had been discussed, including the fact that the Commissioner had claimed at a previous meeting, that 'they' were trying to interfere in an investigation in which, allegedly, a senior partner in a law firm was, allegedly, involved. It was felt that the Commissioner would find it very difficult to continue to work with Government and the Governor given their lack of confidence in him and for the reasons expressed to the Chair. The GPA felt that the maritime incident seemed to be far more serious in its repercussions, overall, than we had previously been alive to and felt that this was the major factor in our decision.
5. After discussion and based on what had been expressed by the Governor and Chief Minister and the contents of the file note, it was felt that the best course of action would be to activate Section 34 of the Act and invite the Commissioner to retire but always affording him the opportunity to make representations to GPA so we could arrive at a firm and final decision and able to make recommendations to Governor. The GPA felt that this recourse was better and 'gentler' than the Governor potentially activating Section 13 which allows him to seek his resignation.
6. It was also agreed that it would be more dignified for the Chair to seek a meeting with the Commissioner rather than summon him to GPA offices.
7. It was agreed that the Chair would also consult the members not present and if they were in agreement, GPA would proceed with Section 34.

22nd May 2020

Commissioner Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Royal Gibraltar Police
New Mole House

Dear Commissioner McGrail,

Our meeting earlier this morning refers.

In view of the grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you as Commissioner, the Authority feels that it is left with no option but to exercise the powers afforded to the Authority under Section 34 (1) of the Police Act.

Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire, in the interests of policing in Gibraltar.

Please note that Section 34 (2) states that you shall have an opportunity to make representations before the Authority and that these shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view.

Should you wish to avail yourself of this provision please make your submission within seven working days from the date of this letter. If you require more time, please indicate this in writing.

GIBRALTAR POLICE AUTHORITY
(The Community in Policing)

22nd May 2020

Commissioner Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Royal Gibraltar Police
New Mole House

Dear Commissioner McGrail,

Invitation to Retire : Section 34 of the Police Act ('the Act')

Our meeting earlier this morning refers.

Today I expressed to you that the Gibraltar Police Authority was calling upon you to retire under the provisions of Section 34 of the Act.

I told you that the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar. The reasons which the Governor and the Chief Minister have provided the Authority for their loss of confidence are summarised in the paragraphs numbers 1 to 5 below and address the relevant factors set out in Section 34(1) of the Act.

Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief Minister and have taken the view that your position is untenable as Commissioner given that you have lost the confidence of BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister.

Please find below the main issues contributing to the loss of confidence, as expressed to the Authority by the Governor and the Chief Minister.

1. Efficiency:

The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report address 'inefficiency' directly and indirectly. Indeed, the "Overview" of the Report specifically provides a criticism (para 2, page 7) that the Force is not 'as effective or efficient as it could be'.

Unit 25B Casemates Square, Gibraltar
Tel: (+350) 20040918, E-mail: secretary@gpa.gi

In this respect, the position is clear as to responsibility. Under Section 33 of the Act, it is the Commissioner who is responsible for the efficient administration of the Force. That means that responsibility in respect of this failing rests legally, directly with you.

It was also pointed out to the Authority that in your application for the role of Commissioner you would, if successful, immediately set up a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been met by the 1st March 2019. This action point was considered by you to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Not only have the recommendations and action points set out in the 2015/6 reports not been complied with but now, in addition, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The Authority notes that the Chief Minister has written to you directly, under Section 15 of the Act (copied to me as Chairman of the Authority), seeking further information on this matter given that neither he or the Governor seem to have a full picture of what actually transpired. The incident has resulted not just in a diplomatic complaint filed against the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, but also to a vessel being out of action, questions as to standard operating procedures in place and all the other concerns contained in the letter sent to you by the Chief Minister. I do not need to repeat that here, but I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident. Additionally, the Governor expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you about this most serious incident which has resulted in loss of life.

2. Effectiveness:

The issues relating to effectiveness were linked by the Governor and the Chief Minister. Additionally, as a result of the above, the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and the RGP's effectiveness as sea was therefore severely impacted for some time. The effectiveness of the RGP will also now be seriously compromised given the increased legal workload which will arise as a direct result of the claims made and all the corollary effects that they will give rise to.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity:

It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point. This is very serious indeed. I think you need to reflect carefully on this. The situation we are in is one where BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister respectively have expressed this view. It is not one of them that has expressed this view, which would be bad enough, but BOTH of them.

Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings.

The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity.

5. Independence:

This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service.

It is for those reasons that we are calling upon you to retire on the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity and the independence of policing in Gibraltar, but before doing so are giving you an opportunity, as provided for in Section 34(2) of the Act to make representations which we shall consider.

I trust that this serves to clarify matters further.

I look forward to receiving any representations you may wish to make under Section 34(2) of the Act.

Dear Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority,

RE: Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act

We write on behalf of our client, Ian McGrail, Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police, in response to the communications to him from the Chair of the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') on 22nd May 2020 which set out the Chair's decision to exercise powers under section 34(1) of the Police Act 2006 ('the 2006 Act'), calling on him to retire and seeking any representations from him under section 34(2). The three communications in question were (1) at a meeting that morning, (2) in a letter ('the first letter') handed to him at the 22 May meeting, and (3) in a further letter, sent to him late that evening ('the second letter').

We thank the Gibraltar Police Authority ('GPA') for giving us the opportunity to make representations. We will explain below why the exercise of the s.34 power vested in the GPA would be wholly unjustified and grossly procedurally unfair. Moreover, there is an extremely troubling aspect to this, of which the Chair is fully aware, and which concerns the rule of law in Gibraltar, and which touches on the fundamental principle of the freedom of the Royal Gibraltar Police ('RGP') to carry out criminal enquiries without interference from politicians or the Attorney General.

At the outset, we wish to impress on the members of the GPA your solemn duties under the Constitution and the 2006 Act. The GPA is one of the few bodies created under the Constitution. The Constitution requires the GPA to "be independent in the exercise of its functions". These functions include, under the 2006 Act, that you must "ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar". You must also, because you are a constitutional body, act in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties including the European Convention on Human Rights. It should therefore be self-evident that the GPA plays an essential role in protecting the separation of powers between the executive and police, the rule of law and the rights of the citizens of Gibraltar.

It is in this light that you must make the decision whether to call on Mr. McGrail to retire – a decision which (because of section 34(3)) means he "shall" retire. You will therefore not just be making a request but giving him an instruction to prematurely end his distinguished 36-year policing career, and you will be removing from office the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar. In order to fulfil your constitutional duties, you must make the decision independently from the Governor and Chief Minister. You must not be directed by them. That would be quite wrong, and in violation of your obligations under the 2006 Act and the Constitution.

As set out below, we are deeply concerned by the approach of the Chair in the meeting he had with Mr. McGrail on 22 May. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that if he refused to comply with the invitation to retire then the Governor would use his powers under s.13(f) of the 2006 Act to call for his resignation. The decision was presented to Mr. McGrail as a fait accompli. The Chair said in effect that it did not matter how he responded – the result would be the end of his career either because he would be forced to retire in accordance with your request or would be called to resign by the Governor using his power under s.13(f). This is not how your power under s.34 works. It only applies if the GPA considers it is "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing" to request that the Commissioner retire, following consideration of any representations made by him. If you do not properly consider these representations and do not make an independent decision you will be acting unlawfully and your decision will be vulnerable to a judicial review challenge.

The damage to Gibraltar as a jurisdiction which claims to adhere to the Rule of Law would be incalculable. As people of standing in our community it will be immediately obvious to you already that the removal of the Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police in the way in which the GPA is being pushed to do is a travesty which will bring shame to Gibraltar and international derision when we are always trying to prove our democratic, non-colonial attributes in every international forum up to the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonization.

The background and motivations which we will proceed to explain (subject to the sensitivities of what is ultimately an ongoing very serious criminal investigation) uncover an abuse of power which is possibly unprecedented in Gibraltar.

The approach the Chair has taken thus far has been for the reasons explained below clearly unlawful. This could potentially be remedied by taking a fully independent decision now and concluding that Mr. McGrail should not be removed from office. This must be a decision of the full GPA, not the Chair alone, as the section 34 power vests in "the Authority". The GPA must also carefully consider whether any of its members has a conflict of interest which would exclude them from taking part in the decision-making process.

In light of the errors made to date, we respectfully suggest that you seek independent legal advice in order to assist you in making a lawful decision. We emphasise that it would be inappropriate to take advice from the Attorney General because he has already expressed a view on the substantive issues, as is clear from the second letter of 22nd May, and, moreover, he has played a key role in the issues we refer to in Section (d) below, as the Chair is already aware. We respectfully suggest that it may be prudent for you to take advice from lawyers in the United Kingdom given the multiplicity of local interests arising from this unfortunate case (as, indeed, Mr McGrail has done; he is represented by an expert counsel team from Gibraltar and London).

This letter is divided in to five sections:

(a) Preliminary Point – Recusal Issue;

(b) The legal framework;

(c) The invitation to retire;

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Failings; and

(e) Response to the substantive issues raised by the GPA.

(a) Preliminary point – Recusal Issue

1. There are two preliminary matters concerning recusal.

2. First, Mr. Nick Pyle is currently named as the member of the GPA appointed by the Governor.[1] He has been the interim Governor since February 2020 and he has had personal involvement in the background to this matter, as we summarise in these submissions. He should play no part in decision-making of the Authority under section 34 in any event, given the distinct role of the Governor under that section. We ask for an assurance that the GPA Chair will ensure that Mr. Pyle is not involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34.

3. Second, and related, we wish at the outset to raise an issue of very significant sensitivity and concern. It relates to a current police investigation. It would therefore be inappropriate to provide specific details of that investigation save as to the limited extent set out below (we address this further in section (d), as it is relevant to this invitation to retire). We know that the Chair is already aware of the background as it was discussed at his and Mr. McGrail's meeting on 22nd May, when he told Mr. McGrail it was discussed at the meeting when the Chief Minister and Governor said that they and the Attorney General had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. You will understand that it would not be appropriate for Mr. McGrail to provide more detail of a live investigation. However, we can say that it relates to national security and involves an alleged criminal conspiracy which potentially reaches to the highest levels of the community.

4. This is a further reason why it is essential that the Chair provide reassurance to us that Mr. Pyle will not be involved in the GPA's decision-making under section 34. In addition, we suggest that it would be prudent for a further member of the GPA, Ms. Claire Pizzarello, to recuse herself from decision-making in this matter. We do not provide further details at this stage, and we trust that the Chair will agree that this would be a sensible course of action in the circumstances. (Should further information be required by the Chair, he should inform us of this.) We emphasise that there is no suggestion whatsoever of Ms. Pizzarello having any personal involvement in the matters in question, and this approach is suggested out of an abundance of caution.

[1] http://gpa.gi/about-the-gibraltar-police-authority.html.

(b) The legal framework

The Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 ('The Constitution')

5. Chapter 1 of the Constitution protects fundamental rights and freedoms. The Preamble states that the people of Gibraltar's right to self-determination must be "promoted and respected in conformity with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and any other applicable international treaties". The European Convention on Human Rights is an "applicable international treaty".

6. The Constitution protects, amongst other rights, the right to privacy (section ('s') 7) and the right to freedom of expression (s.10).

7. The Constitution provides that there shall be a Police Authority for Gibraltar which "shall be independent in the exercise of its functions" (s.48(1)).

The Police Act 2006

8. The 2006 Act establishes the GPA (section 3(1)).

9. Part 1 sets out the responsibilities and powers of the GPA. s. 5 relevantly includes responsibilities: "to secure the maintenance of an efficient and effective police force for Gibraltar", "to ensure high standards of integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar", "to establish, operate and supervise the process for investigating complaints against police officers under this Act" and "to hold the Commissioner to account for matters which are the responsibility of the Authority.

10. Part II sets out the Governor's and the Government's responsibilities for policing. Section 13 provides for the Governor's powers "in default by the Authority", which are exercisable only where the Authority "has failed to discharge or perform a responsibility imposed on the Authority under this Act". The powers include "where in the opinion of the Governor the integrity, probity or independence of the police has been compromised or is at risk, to direct the Force to take appropriate action to remedy the situation or avoid the risk" and "to suspend from duty, or call for the resignation of the Commissioner".

11. Section 15(1) provides that the Chief Minister may exercise various powers on behalf of the Government, including (a) require factual or assessment reports from the Force or the Authority on any policing matter, provided that there may be withheld from any such report any fact disclosure of which is likely to prejudice the effective operation of the Force.

12. Part IV provides for the establishment of the Royal Gibraltar Police Force. Section 32(1) provides for the appointment of the Commissioner of Police by the Governor, acting on the advice of the Authority, subject to any provision of the Constitution; for such that the Authority may advise and as shall be set out in the instrument of appointment.

13. Section 33(1) provides that the Commissioner shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, have command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force, and shall be responsible for the efficient administration and government of the Force and for the proper expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the service. (section 33(2)).

14. Section 34 provides for the removal of the Commissioner by the GPA. It is set out in full below:

> "34.(1) The Authority acting after consultation with the Governor and the Chief Minister and with the agreement of either of them, may call upon the Commissioner to retire, in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar.

(2) Before seeking the approval of the Governor and the Chief Minister under subsection (1), the Authority shall give the Commissioner an opportunity to make representations and shall consider any representations that he makes.

(3) Where the Commissioner is called upon to retire under subsection (1), he shall retire on such date as the Authority may specify or on such earlier date as may be agreed upon between him and the Authority."

Human rights

15. The European Convention on Human Rights protects the right to respect for private and family life under Article 8 and the right to freedom of expression under Article 10. Both rights can be interfered with by the state by certain situations but only where that interference is lawful, necessary and proportionate in pursuance of a legitimate aim.

16. The European Court of Human Rights and the Council of Europe (which oversees the European Court) have repeatedly emphasised that corruption threatens the rule of law. There have been a number of cases where sanctions imposed on whistleblowers have been found to breach Article 10 ECHR – in cases involving the dismissal of public servants this has sometimes been articulated as an attack on reputation protected by Article 8 ECHR. As you will see below, the law relating to whistleblowers is relevant.

17. In Guja v. Moldova (No. 1)[2] the Grand Chamber held unanimously that there had been a violation of Article 10 (freedom of expression). The applicant was Head of the Press Department of the Moldovan Prosecutor General's Office. The case concerned his dismissal for giving a newspaper two letters received by the Prosecutor General's Office which disclosed interference by a high-ranking politician in pending criminal proceedings.

[2] (2011) 53 E.H.R.R. 16.

The Court balanced the conflicting factors under Art.10 and concluded there had been a breach.

> [72] ... The Court thus considers that the signalling by a civil servant or an employee in the public sector of illegal conduct or wrongdoing in the workplace should, in certain circumstances, enjoy protection. This may be called for where the employee or civil servant concerned is the only person, or part of a small category of persons, aware of what is happening at work and is thus best placed to act in the public interest by alerting the employer or the public at large.

18. Article 8 ECHR includes the right to protection of reputation.[3] As stated in Axel Springer AG v. Germany[4], judgment (Grand Chamber) of 7 February 2012, paras. 83-84:

> "... [T]he right to protection of reputation is a right which is protected by Article 8 of the Convention as part of the right to respect for private life ... In order for Article 8 to come into play, however, an attack on a person's reputation must attain a certain level of seriousness and in a manner causing prejudice to personal enjoyment of the right to respect for private life ...

19. The Council of Europe's Criminal Law Convention on Corruption ('the Corruption Convention") of 27th January 1999 states[5] in its pre-amble that "corruption threatens the rule of law, democracy and human rights, undermines good governance, fairness and social justice, distorts competition, hinders economic development and endangers the stability of democratic institutions and the moral foundations of society".

20. Each Party to the Corruption Convention shall adopt measures to ensure that persons or entities are specialised in the fight against corruption. They shall have the necessary independence in accordance with the fundamental principles of the legal system of the Party, in order for them to be able to carry out their functions effectively and free from any undue pressure.

21. The preamble to the Council of Europe Code of Police Ethics[4] states that "the criminal justice system plays a key role in safeguarding the rule of law and that the police have an essential role within that system". Paragraph 15 provides:

> The police shall enjoy sufficient operational independence from other state bodies in carrying out its given police tasks, for which it should be fully accountable.

22. Paragraph 34 states:

> Public authorities shall support police personnel who are subject to ill-founded accusations concerning their duties.

23. The Committee of Ministers' Recommendation on the protection of whistleblowers adopted on 30th April 2014 relevantly states in the preamble that "freedom of expression and the right to seek and receive information are fundamental for the functioning of a genuine democracy" and recognises that individuals who report or disclose information on threats or harm to the public interest, i.e. whistleblowers, can contribute to strengthening transparency and democratic accountability. Paragraph 21 states:

> Whistleblowers should be protected against retaliation of any form, whether directly or indirectly, by their employer and by persons working for or acting on behalf of the employer. Forms of such retaliation might include dismissal, suspension, demotion, loss of promotion opportunities, punitive transfers and reductions in or deductions of wages, harassment or other punitive or discriminatory treatment.

[4] Adopted 19th September 2001: https://rm.coe.int/16805e297e.

24. Protection from retaliation is clearly a matter of fundamental importance particularly when the potential victim is none other than the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar.

(c) The invitation to retire

25. On the morning of 22nd May 2020 Mr. McGrail met with the GPA Chair, when the Chair invited him to retire pursuant to s.34(1) of the 2006 Act.

26. The Chair told Mr. McGrail that he had met with the Governor and the Chief Minister on Monday 18th May and they had told him they had lost confidence in Mr. McGrail. He said that he had taken notes of the meeting. It began with the Governor and Chief Minister taking him through the various options under the Police Act and focussing on section 13 (the power of the Governor to suspend from duty or call for the resignation of the Commissioner where the GPA has failed to discharge its duties) and section 34 (the GPA's power to remove the Commissioner from post).

27. The Chair made it very clear that he did not make this decision himself and that in his view the decision was entirely for the Governor and the Chief Minister to make. Although he said Mr. McGrail could make representations, it was made clear to him that if he does not take the offer of retirement then the Governor will trigger his power under s.13 to call for his resignation. It is in effect, an 'offer he can't refuse' – or, to put it another way, it is the equivalent, for an office-holder, of constructive dismissal.

28. It was also made clear to Mr. McGrail that the issue of his handling of the investigation referred to above was an important factor in the decision making by the Governor and Chief Minister. He said that the AG had all lost confidence in him because he had "lied" about the particular operation – which he strenuously denied.

29. At the time of the meeting none of the alleged issues with Mr. McGrail's conduct had been put in writing. When Mr. McGrail highlighted that this was unfair, the Chair offered to provide him with his notes of the 18th May meeting. Mr. McGrail asked for the reasons to be put in writing so he could properly respond.

30. At the meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed a letter containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s. 34(1) power ('the first letter'). This was a short letter which provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"), however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to s.34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". Mr. McGrail was given 7 days to respond to the initial letter (i.e. by today, 29th May – a period which included a long weekend) and invited to seek more time if required.

31. Mr. McGrail received a second letter late on Friday night, 22nd May, which provided more detail, relevantly stating:

    a. "the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar."

    b. "Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief

    c. Five "main issues" (in reality, these are four issues as two run together) were set out "contributing to the loss of confidence", including:

i. Efficiency: "The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear (sic) damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP...."

ii. "Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction."

iii. "I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident... [he has] expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you..."

iv. Effectiveness: that the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and will now be "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload".

v. Probity and integrity "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point...

vi. "additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings"

vii. "The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity."

viii. Independence: "This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service."

(d) Fundamental Unfairness, Abuse of Process and Procedural Flaws

32. This process has been tainted from the outset by conspicuous unfairness, and it is grossly procedurally unfair. These flaws fall into the category described by Lord Bridge in Calvin v. Carr [1979] UKPC 1, [1979] 2 All ER 440: "when the defect is so flagrant, the consequences so severe, that the most perfect of appeals or rehearings will not be sufficient to produce a just result." The approach adopted here amounts to an attack on the Constitution, the rule of law and human rights principles, and it subverts the principle of separation of powers in a number of respects.

*i. The Vanishing Reason for the Invitation to Retire

33. First, we indicated at the outset of this letter, when addressing the preliminary matter of recusal, that there is a sensitive matter concerning an ongoing criminal investigation, the detail of which Mr. McGrail does not address herein. The relevance of this issue to the invitation to retire is as follows. This matter was discussed in the 22nd May meeting as forming part of the reasoning behind the Chief Minister and the Governor informing the GPA Chair that he should invite Mr. McGrail to retire. Indeed, Mr. McGrail indicated at that meeting that he understood it to be the real and central reason for the request. However, this reason is, oddly, not cited in the second, detailed letter of 22nd May. Instead, that letter refers expressly only to two other matters – the incident at sea in March 2020 and the inspection report following the inspection in October 2019.

34. The two matters which are mentioned have been known to the Chief Minister, Governor and Attorney General ('AG') for months. As is explained below, Mr. McGrail has kept them fully informed in respect of both issues. The important point is that in respect of both issues, at all stages Mr. McGrail has received no criticism at all about his approach. The incident at sea is being investigated independently by the Metropolitan Police, at Mr. McGrail's request, and that report is yet to be received. Mr. McGrail has met regularly with the AG to discuss strategy towards this serious incident – the AG has been nothing but supportive. Equally, when the inspection report came out, Mr. McGrail received no public or even private criticism from authority figures at all – until the 22nd May invitation to retire.

35. By contrast, in recent months, and particularly the past fortnight, Mr. McGrail has received very significant and at times intemperate private criticism from the Chief Minister and Attorney General about a separate matter, namely how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled. For many months the AG has been trying (unsuccessfully, we might add) to persuade Mr. McGrail to change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted. Mr. McGrail has rebuffed these attempts and has treated this investigation as he would any other – characteristic of his probity and professionalism. The operational decisions in respect of this investigation have, in any event, been taken by individual officers below Mr. McGrail's rank, acting professionally and appropriately.

36. On 12th May, out of courtesy, Mr. McGrail notified the Chief Minister, the AG and the Minister of Justice of a certain operational action which was taken by the RGP in the case. Both the Chief Minister and AG immediately messaged him to say, in no uncertain terms, that they disapproved of the action. He was immediately called into a meeting with the Chief Minister and the AG. He was very severely criticised for the action that had been taken. The Chief Minister told him that, in his view, Mr. McGrail had handled the investigation "very very wrongly". He was told by the AG that he had to this point approved of his work but from that day he could not "entertain" Mr. McGrail again. The emotional response from both the Chief Minister and the AG is startling.

37. This was followed by two subsequent meetings with the AG and Director of Public Prosecutions (on 13th and 15th May respectively) where pressure was put on Mr. McGrail by the AG to change the RGP's investigative approach to the operation and he was given the strong impression that the AG was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and "Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words).

38. It is grossly inappropriate in a jurisdiction under the Rule of Law for politicians to interfere with any live criminal investigation in this way. It tramples over the separation of powers which is an integral feature of our Constitution. However, in this case the Chief Minister has a personal connection to the outcome of the investigation, which makes his intervention even more inappropriate. Not only should he not attempt to influence the investigation, he should completely recuse himself for any decisions or conversations which touch upon it.

39. The reason it is relevant to your decision is that we submit to you that the timing of the use of the s.34 process, which was triggered by the Chief Minister and the Governor and, we understand, came as a complete surprise to the GPA Chair, strongly suggests that the incident at sea and inspection report are fig leaves for the real reason Mr. McGrail is being pressured to retire, i.e. his (proper and reasonable) handling of a live criminal investigation.

40. It is unnecessary for us merely to rely on an inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point. The GPA Chair confirmed to Mr. McGrail at their meeting on 22nd May that his handling of the criminal investigation referred to above was spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail. The Chair told Mr. McGrail he took a note of his meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor, which we assume he can provide to you for your consideration. It is wholly unclear why this matter is then omitted from the letters sent to Mr. McGrail on 22nd May – although a simple explanation is that it was obvious to those writing the letters that if it were included it would invalidate the entire process. This is a clear breach of the requirements of fairness in itself – this was a factor cited in the meeting on 22nd May, at which no written documents were given to Mr. McGrail, yet the letters omit this material factor.

41. Further, we note that a factor which is cited in the Chair's 22nd May second letter is the Attorney General being said to have "lost confidence" in Mr. McGrail, for an unspecified reason: "Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings". The Chair made clear to Mr. McGrail at the 22nd May meeting that this was entirely because of the criminal investigation matter referred to above and it reflects the comments made to Mr. McGrail by him directly at the meeting on 12th May. In reality, it is clear that this incident is at the heart of this request under section 34, despite it not appearing in the second letter.

42. We note that in the Chair's second letter it is stated "the Governor and the Chief Minister ... consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised". Unfortunately, we agree with that statement, and that statement alone, but for significantly different reasons. If the GPA decides to exercise its s.34 power, in the full knowledge that background involves the Chief Minister and AG seeking to interfere with a live criminal investigation, this would indeed be an affront to the rule of law and a breach of your duties under the Constitution. This would be a gross violation of the rule of law, and not the actions of an independent body in a mature democracy.

ii. Independence

43. There are further serious procedural failings. It was made clear to Mr. McGrail at the meeting on 22nd May 2020 that the Chair was proceeding on the basis that this is a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and he has taken his lead from them. This is also clear from the first letter, which followed the meeting. This is a fundamental misunderstanding of the statutory scheme: the section 34 decision is for the Authority. It also disregards the vital importance of the independence of the Authority, enshrined in the Constitution, s. 48(1).

iii. A Settled Decision

44. The process followed on 22nd May is not compliant with section 34. The statute makes clear that submissions must be sought under section 34(2) before the section 34(1) process is followed. The Commissioner is entitled to be given an opportunity to make representations, and for them to be considered. For this to be a meaningful opportunity, the Authority must not have a closed mind. In this instance, however, the Authority Chair has called upon the Commissioner to retire (under section 34(1)), indicating that this decision has been reached already: "the Authority feels that it is left with no option but to exercise the powers afforded to the Authority under section 34(1)..." The wording used is unambiguous. This was clear at the meeting on 22nd May, and it is expressly set out in the first letter of that date.

45. The first letter is instructive. At this meeting, Mr. McGrail was handed this short letter, containing a formal notification of the exercise of the s.34(1) power. This was very brief and provided no detail save for referring to "grave concerns expressed by both the Governor and the Chief Minister, in respect of certain aspects of policing that have led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in you". It was clear from the letter that a decision had already been reached to invite Mr. McGrail to retire based on the Governor and the Chief Minister's views ("Given the above, the Authority invites you to retire"); however, confusingly, the letter also invited representations pursuant to section 34(2) which "shall, of course, be fully taken into consideration to allow the Governor, the Chief Minister and the Authority to express a firm and final view". This language, promising to take the submissions into consideration, cannot be squared with the fact that definitive language making clear that the Authority has already set out an invitation to retire under section 34(1).

46. This not only raises concerns under section 34. It also results in a process which is not compliant with the concept of natural justice. Mr. McGrail cannot be penalised by a decision which would have such a devastating impact upon him without him being given prior notice of the case he has to answer, and a fair opportunity to answer it. This has not been the case here.

iv. The Relevance of Section 13

47. At the meeting of 22nd May, the Chair informed Mr. McGrail that this was not a decision for him, but a decision for the Chief Minister and the Governor, and that if he did not invite Mr. McGrail to retire under section 34 then the Governor would exercise his power under s. 13. The Chair made clear that this had informed the decision to trigger section 34. However, this is an extraordinary situation, raising very serious concerns, and it taints the section 34 decision. The entire point of section 13 is that it only applies when Authority is in default; it is not a mechanism for the Governor to simply use when he disagrees with the Authority, or when he disagrees with an action by the Police Commissioner, and nor is it a power which should be pre-emptively threatened in order to lean on the Authority to trigger section 34.

(c) Response to the issues raised in the letter

48. We have addressed above why we believe that this attempt to remove Mr. McGrail from post is a pretence which would not have occurred but for the Chief Minister and AG's criticism of his handling of a particular live investigation. However, it is of course important and necessary to respond directly to the two issues which are directly mentioned in the 22 May letter. We should emphasise that our client takes both the incident at sea and the inspection report extremely seriously, as can be seen by his immediate and continuing actions in response to them, however we do not accept, even arguably, that either issue could be the basis of the use of the section 34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from his post in the interests of "efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar".

Mr. McGrail's career to date

49. Before addressing the substantive issues, we want to give you some background about Mr. McGrail's career as a police officer. This is so that in considering the issues, you can do so in the context of his record, which can only be described as exemplary. Mr. McGrail has had a long, unblemished and distinguished career in the RGP for 36 years, having joined in 1984. In the first decade of his career he served in front-line policing, and following the "fast launch" public disturbances in the mid-1990s he had particular responsibility for uplifting RGP's capacity and capability in order and personal safety.

50. In 2006, he became the youngest and most junior inspector at the time to be promoted to Chief Inspector. From 2012 he was a Superintendent. In 2015 he was included in the Queen's Birthday State Honours list and was awarded the Overseas Territories Police

Medal for meritorious service. He has been awarded the Queen's Golden and Diamond Jubilee medals and the long service and good conduct medal with first and second clasps. And, as you know his record is exemplary. Mr. McGrail has numerous letters of appreciation throughout his career and been commended five times, including once by the Director of the United States Naval Criminal Investigation Service and on another by the Chief Justice of Gibraltar. All the commendations have been for meritorious investigative work leading to prosecutions. He has throughout his career sought to develop personally and professionally and attended the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy Programme for 3 months in Quantico, Virginia 2007 , is a Master of Science in Policing and Public Order with the University of Leicester and in 2013 attended the Strategic Command Course with the UK's College of Policing.

51. What has distinguished Mr McGrail is his dedication to service and ability to innovate and develop new ideas and working practices. In 1995 following the most severe riots in the last twenty years in Gibraltar, Mr McGrail was one of two officers tasked with reviewing and developing the RGP's response to public order situations. He went on to qualify as a public order instructor and also as a public order commander. He created and developed an RGP public order unit, commenced a training and development programme, which continues in the form he devised to this day.

52. His flair for innovation and openness to new working practices saw him create the Corporate Development department. Corporate development being a non-existent concept in the RGP at the time. Mr McGrail was instrumental in creating / drafting policies and guidelines in areas where they were required. In addition, he helped put procedures in place to improve the processes around the detention and custody of persons in police detention.

53. On 1st May 2018, Mr. McGrail was appointed as Commissioner of the RGP for a four-year term of warrant, on the advice of the GPA. In his letter of appointment, it was requested that the GPA conduct a review process against the objectives set out in the vision statement and action plan he provided to the Governor. This was supposed to take place two years into his term, which means it should be taking place now. In his letter, the Governor at the time, His Excellency General Edward Davis, said he looked forward to working closely with Mr. McGrail "as we all do our utmost to protect, progress and promote the Rule of Law in Gibraltar".

54. Since he took up the post of Commissioner, one of the first things he did was present to the Gibraltar Police Authority all the force policies for the Authority to ratify as required in law, something which had not been done previously. This is characteristic of his qualities of openness, transparency and accountability.

55. More recently he has been instrumental in the development of the Force Intelligence Unit, taking it from being a unit of limited capability to professional and proactive unit properly servicing the organisation. Mr McGrail's networking skills have enabled him to draw upon contacts in the U.S., Spain and the U.K. to enhance the RGP's intelligence exchange and law enforcement co-operation mechanisms with all these territories. Very significant cross border operations have been carried under his leadership attracting extensive positive media coverage. These efforts have also been recognised by the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General as it no doubt aids the building of relationships with the Kingdom of Spain in the post-Brexit era. Mr. McGrail is part of the Gibraltar law enforcement delegation to work on delivering the Brexit MOU on law enforcement co-operation with Spain. All these mentioned points have brought improvements to the quality of service delivered by the RGP.

56. In the organisational context Mr. McGrail has pushed for procedural and policy advancements. The RGP's total complement of officers results in officers such as Mr. McGrail having to embark on the tasks described on their own, without the benefit of a supporting team as would be the case in a UK mainland force. Further complicating the task is the distance between the RGP and mainland forces makes it impractical to regularly meet and consult colleagues engaged in similar projects to share experience and knowledge.

57. The year 2019 saw unprecedented levels of demand imposed on the RGP including a total of 85 major events, which included 13 Assemblies/demonstrations, 10 international football matches (including a top 3 with the most ultra-fan base in Europe, who were at the matches in numbers), European Elections, General Elections, Small Island Games that run for a full week, Grace 1 (the first time a vessel had been boarded for contravening EU sanctions), eight large scale music events, major social events such National Day, New Year's Eve Celebrations, the Festival of lights and 14 Public Military Events. Mr McGrail oversaw the planning and execution of all of these events all of which met with the operational aims and objectives. Public security and safety was successfully upheld.

58. He has also been responsible for, in just two years in post:

a. Adopting the UK Home Office counting rules for the recording of crime. The RGP's previous methods had been subject of criticism by HMIC for presenting overly favourable detection rates.;

b. Project Servator which is a community orientated counter-terrorism initiative;

c. Restructuring of the force to release police officers to core policing duties;

d. Restructuring and uplifting of the Economic Crime Unit ('ECU'), to incorporate a fraud and Anti Money Laundering Unit;

e. The creation of the RGP's first ever Wellbeing Strategy 2019/2022;

f. The creation of 16 Wellbeing Champions, spread throughout the force;

g. The creation of a bespoke Mental Health referral procedure with Ocean Views medical facility for all police officers and support staff. No other HMGOG department has this system in place;

h. Significant strides with PSN connectivity – this is connectivity with the UK police service;

i. Partnership building and resources obtained through National Police Co-ordination Centre for Brexit contingency planning, Small Island Games & International football matches;

j. COVID-19 policing – which has seen restrictions in freedom of movement as never seen before in modern history.

59. Additionally, under Mr McGrail's leadership, the RGP has developed and implemented the following new policies and reviewed a further number of them. All of these have met the approval of the GPA:

a. 2018: Response Team Leader Policy (new), Gifts and Hospitality Policy (new), Alcohol and Substance Abuse Policy (new), Taser Policy (New)

b. 2019: Transfer Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Management of Exhibits (Reviewed & Amended); Domestic Violence (Reviewed & Amended); Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Mobile Device Policy (New).

c. 2020: Caution policy (Reviewed & Amended), Travel Policy (Reviewed & Amended); Bullying Policy (New); Grievance policy and Procedure (New); Compromised Persons Policy (New); Mental Wellbeing Policy – New (No police service in the UK has this).

60. During Mr. McGrail's tenure, there has been an 8.3% reduction in crime, a 33% reduction in repeat victimisation, a 33% reduction in repeat offending and a 54% detection rate. These statistics are enviable to any UK police service. Additionally, during his tenure, a good level of public satisfaction has been maintained and in certain areas improved, according to your own public consultation surveys. He has, most recently, appeared on live television delivering public information bulletins for COVID-19 crisis on four occasions: on 9th April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 21st April with the Deputy Chief Minister, on 3rd May and Minister of Justice and on the 10th May with the Minister of Justice again. If the Government or Chief Minister had lost confidence in his abilities you might reasonably ask why he was allowed to give these important briefings to the whole of Gibraltar.

61. Further, and for the sake of completeness, we remind you of Mr. McGrail's success in promoting international law enforcement cooperation, in an area which has been fraught with difficulties in the past, has been recognised by both the Spanish National Police and the Guardia Civil who have nominated Mr. McGrail for the "La Cruz de la Orden del Mérito Policial con distinctivo Blanco" and "La Orden del Mérito de la Guardia Civil con distinctivo" medals respectively. This is of course unprecedented and underscores the high esteem with which Mr. McGrail is held by his international colleagues in Spain.

The incident at sea

62. On 8th March 2020 at around 03:38 an incident occurred involving a collision at sea between an RGP patrol craft and a smuggling vessel. Two people on the smuggling vessel, Dris Mohamed and Abdeselam Ahmed, reportedly both Spanish nationals, died in the incident and two were injured. The incident occurred outside of British Gibraltar Territorial Waters ('BGTW').

63. The March 2020 incident is raised by the 22 May letters in two ways: in itself ("the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction"); and in respect of communication (the Governor "expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you" and raises concerns that he has "no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident...").

64. As regards the unfortunate incident itself, there is no explanation as to why it is suggested that the actions of individual officers reflect on Mr. McGrail or are indicative of a systemic pattern of acting beyond the remit and jurisdiction of the RGP. There is no particularity at all, meaning it is impossible to respond in any detail save to say that at Mr. McGrail responded to the incident with his usual integrity and transparency. It is simply bizarre to claim that the Governor and Chief Minister have lost confidence in Mr. McGrail because they blame him for the incident itself when (a) at the time of the meeting with the Chair and the 22 May letters the Chief Minister had requested, but had not received, a response to the detailed request for information which was sent to him on 21 May – this was the first such request Mr. McGrail has received, and (b) at that time they had not received (and still have not received) the independent report which is being carried out by the Metropolitan Police and was commissioned within days by Mr. McGrail himself or the conclusive report of the independent marine accident expert.

65. A further example is given relating to the RGP being without the use of a vessel, and thus being, "seriously compromised given the increased legal workload". Again, there is no indication as to why this would justify the exceptional step of inviting the Commissioner to retire, and, indeed, this would not address the issue regarding the vessel. In any event, the proposition that the effectiveness of the marine section has been compromised is nonsense. The RGP's Marine Section has resilience. It has other vessels and the fact that one of them has been out of service because of the collision has not hampered capabilities.

66. In any event, it is for the GPA to reach an independent decision in respect of this issue. We submit that it would be highly unfair and contrary to the principles of natural justice for the GPA to pre-emptively blame Mr McGrail for this incident, prior to a detailed consideration of the independent report from the Metropolitan Police. However, and in any event, the fact that the alleged 'loss of confidence' it is so obviously premature and pre-emptive further proves the point we make above that the real motives behind the action by the Governor and Chief Minister are not this incident. Rather, this incident is serving as a pretext, although on any analysis not a convincing one.

67. As regards communication, we understand that the Section 15 reply (sent shortly before these submissions) comprehensively debunks the suggestion that there was inadequate communication. Mr. McGrail messaged the Governor, the Chief Minister and Attorney General within two hours of the emergency response group being convened and kept them fully informed throughout, promptly responding to all requests for information. He subsequently met with the Attorney General on 17th March to develop a working strategy to deal with the consequences of the incident, which the AG agreed to. He further briefed the AG on 18 March on the progress of the Metropolitan Police investigation. The Metropolitan Police team was also in direct contact with the Governor. On 22nd March Mr. McGrail again met with the Attorney General and DPP to discuss the potential civil legal action arising from the incident. The AG did not want to consider further strategy until the Metropolitan Police's report findings had been received. This has still not been received despite many requests to expedite it the Covid 19 Crisis in the UK has taken its toll on policing as in many other areas of business. A marine investigator's report has also been commissioned and is currently being finalised. The simple point here is that it is premature to reach any conclusions in relation to this incident and it would be highly unfair to dismiss Mr. McGrail on the basis of a wholly unparticularised and vague accusation such as this.

68. In relation to the suggestion that Mr. McGrail has misled the Governor, this is not particularised; it is a vague slur, without explanation. We do not know what it refers to. If it relates to the incident taking place in Spanish waters, it is not possible to follow the rationale. In any event, the Governor was promptly and fully briefed by Mr McGrail on that issue and Mr. McGrail understands that the Metropolitan Police team, who were conducting an independent investigation, also briefed the Governor's office.

69. A further slur is included in relation to Mr. McGrail's "probity and integrity," phrased in a hopelessly vague way, without specificity: "It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point... " Reference is made to the Attorney General, but as we have submitted above this could only refer to the criminal investigation, as the Chair also informed Mr. McGrail.

The HMICFRS Report

70. The claim that confidence in Mr. McGrail's ability to do his job has been lost to a lack of efficiency on the part of the RGP, based on the findings of the HMICFRS, does not stack up. As can be seen from the above, Mr. McGrail has a long and distinguished career. His term as Commissioner has been busy and successful. It is simply absurd to accuse him of failing to take proactive steps to address systemic issues which were identified in the 2016 report, two years before he commenced in office.

71. As regards efficiency, the inspection report is clear that there are long-standing problems, which were identified in the previous (2016) inspection report, have not been fully addressed by the time of the October 2019 inspection. Mr. McGrail had by that time only been in post for a little over a year, and it is simply not credible to suggest that these flaws can and should be laid at his door. Further, during his short period in office prior to the inspection he had to address the July 2019 arrest and investigation of the Iranian Oil Tanker "Grace 1" which was an extraordinary incident, managed by the RGP and supported by the Royal Marines, and which attracted widespread acclaim (see the brief reference at p. 13 of the report).

72. In addition, the report makes clear in respect of efficiency that the RGP is in need of additional resources, from the Government/ FCO.

73. Insofar as it is suggested that Mr. McGrail did not set up a working group, his response is that as a result of the unprecedented demand placed on the RGP during 2019, the RGP has been addressing the issues raised in the Report by merging them in daily work practices. This can be seen by the initiatives referred to above and the results achieved. In addition, as you know Mr. McGrail has provided the Authority and the Minister of Justice with a comprehensive road map for implementing the 2020 report. These have both been agreed to be the proper procedure and no concerns have been raised. Indeed, some of the recommendations in the Report have since been met and the others are in progress. It would simply be irrational to conclude that this approach would justify forcing him to take early retirement.

74. It is of note that the 22nd May letter was the first Mr. McGrail has heard that either the Chief Minister or Governor – or indeed any member of the Government – lays blame for any of the issues identified in the report with him. None of the conversations he has had around the report have reflected the 22nd May letter which again raises the strong inference that this issue is being used as a pretence to mask the real reason for attempting to remove Mr. McGrail. For example, the Minister for Justice, Samantha Sacramento MP, messaged him on 29 April to say the report "is shocking reading on the face of it, but if you analyse it deeper it's not that bad, and it's has easy solutions" and "it can all be fixed don't worry". This message reflected the tone and content of the communications around the report. There have also been a number of very recent articles in the press which highlight the exceptional nature of the RGP given the unusually wide range of issues it has to deal with – from drug smuggling and international fraud to world diplomatic incidents involving maritime vessels – and the potential unfairness of applying the same standards as apply to other forces to such an unusual jurisdiction.

75. In addition, we note that an article in the Gibraltar Chronicle of the 28th May 2020 by an independent journalist, Mr. James Neish, who is intimately aware of the work of the RGP, suggests that the Report may have unfairly minimised the unique demands made of the RGP and which it responds to successfully for the most part. The article is titled "It's always easier to judge from a distance".

76. As stated above, the GPA must reach an independent conclusion in respect of this issue. It has not carried out the 2-year performance review requested by the Governor at the time of Mr. McGrail's appointment. We submit that there is a complete lack of evidence of Mr. McGrail's culpability for any of the issues highlighted by the inspection report. He has, in any event, taken extensive steps to improve and modernise the RGP. It would therefore be grossly unfair to conclude that, having been in post just over a year before the inspection,

Mr. McGrail is sufficiently blameworthy for the conclusions of the inspection report such that he should be forced to retire "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar". However, and in any event, in order to reach such a conclusion it would be necessary for the GPA to carry out a full and fair review into Mr. McGrail's record during his time in post.

Conclusion

77. For the reasons stated above there is no possible, valid reason for the GPA to exercise its s.34 power to remove Mr. McGrail from office. The only rational decision for the GPA to reach is to dismiss the request of the Governor and Chief Minister. In any event, the defects in this process are already so flagrant that it would not be possible to reach a just result unless it is to allow Mr. McGrail to remain in post.

Yours faithfully,

Charles Gomez

Gibraltar Police Authority

Minutes of the meeting of Monday 1st June at 9.30am

In attendance:

Joey Britto (Chair)
Darren Grech
Ernest Gomez
Julio Alcantara
Frank Carreras
Rebecca Figueras (left the meeting at 10.50am as had another meeting)
Nadine Collado
Edgar Lavarello

Purpose of the meeting:

The meeting was called by the Chair to discuss the letter received by Charles Gomez ('CG') of Charles Gomez & Co, Barristers at Law, acting for Ian McGrail ('IM'), Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police. This letter was in response to two letters sent by the GPA to IM.

1. The Committee discussed at length the letter from IM making his representations.
2. The Committee unanimously decided that prior to responding to the letter independent legal advice be sought in relation to the following:
   - GPA's powers in inviting IM to retire.
   - Is it correct to use the power considering all of the Parts?
   - Advice in whether the GPA reply to the letter and if so, how.
   - Any other conflicts?
3. The Chair, along with another member of the GPA, to meet with the Chief Minister to request funding to secure legal representation for the GPA and its members.

4. On the question of potential conflicts, other potential conflicts of interest among Authority members were discussed and a unanimous view expressed that no such conflicts exist.

5. It was also agreed that, not only does the Authority categorically (via GPA's legal representatives) refute that the Chair introduced the issue of the investigation into his conversation with IM, but also that he should have subsequently opted to omit it in his letter for the surreptitious reason alleged by IM's lawyer. This is considered by the Authority to be a very serious allegation by the lawyer and a potential misrepresentation of what actually transpired.

The meeting closed at 11am.

Dear Mr. Chairman

Re: Invitation to Retire – section 34 Police Act.

I would like to thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29 May 2020 sent to you by Mr Charles Gomez, acting on behalf of the Commissioner of Police ("CoP"), on the above-captioned matter (the "Letter").

A number of matters and allegations in the Letter concern me, either directly or indirectly. My position within the GPA (paras 1-4 of the Letter) is one which I assume you will be addressing yourself in the GPA's reply to Mr Gomez. In any event, as you are aware, I wrote to you on 19 February 2020 explaining how I thought we could proceed during such time as I was acting as Governor. For clarity, all my communications with you since 19 February 2020 have been as Governor and NOT as a member of the GPA.

With regard to the remaining contents of the Letter, I would like to address only two specific points at this stage. What I say is without prejudice to further information that I would be happy and able to provide if it were considered necessary to do so. Silence on any point made in Letter is not be interpreted as my acquiescence to any of them.

1. The relevance of the ongoing criminal investigation and its timing.

The first issue is the offensive assertion that my lack of confidence in the CoP, and therefore my conviction that he lacks both probity and integrity, is based on the RGP's handling of the so-called ongoing criminal investigation.

My deep concerns with the CoP's leadership qualities have absolutely nothing to do with that investigation. The already-existing concerns that I have had with the CoP were confirmed by the incident at sea (March 2020) and the HMIC Report (published in May 2020).

In relation to the former, the seriousness of the incident of 8 March 2020 does not require explanation. By its own, it has raised grave concerns with wide-reaching political, financial, reputational and sovereignty implications. They raise very serious concerns about the leadership at the RGP.

Furthermore, I suspected at the time of the immediate aftermath of the incident that the CoP's disclosure of information to me was evasive in particular in relation to the critical issue of whether or not the incident had occurred within BGTW. I know that when the CoP was telling me that it was not clear where the incident had occurred, he was informing the Chief Minister that the incident had indeed occurred outside BGTW. Indeed, it occurred some 7.5 nautical miles beyond Gibraltar's baseline and therefore well outside BGTW. I find this evasiveness on a key issue to demonstrate a total lack of respect to the office of Governor particularly since the CoP knew that this was the crucial issue for me and for both the UK and Gibraltar Governments as far as diplomatic relations with Spain were concerned.

In relation to the latter, on 30 April 2020, after having seen a draft of the Report, I wrote to the Chief Minister saying that I found the Report to be "quite damning". Indeed, the day before, I had written to you saying that I did not think that the Report should be published.

I was informed, for the first time, of the very existence of the criminal investigation referred to in the Letter on 15 May 2020 (when the matter was raised with me for information by the Chief Minister, as he thought it right to disclose this to me as we considered matters related to the RGP and CoP).

I want to be clear, therefore, that my lack of confidence in the CoP's probity and integrity, and my conviction that the rule of law is compromised by the fact that I have lost confidence in him, therefore clearly arose well before I was aware of that criminal investigation. It is incorrect and untrue for anyone to suggest otherwise.

For Mr Gomez to therefore suggest, through conjecture and assumption, that the incident at sea and the HMIC Report were "fig leaves for the real reason Mr McGrail is being pressured to retire" (para 39) is an outrageous accusation which I bitterly resent and strongly object to. It is clearly not borne out by the facts and chronology as expressed above. In addition, for Mr Gomez to suggest that I had been aware of the incident at sea and the HMIC Report "for months" (para 34) is a wholly inaccurate statement which may mislead the GPA.

As a final point on this issue, I would also like to reiterate that these two incidents occurred on the back of a growing unease that I had been feeling over the months, in particular with the numerous allegations of bullying and mismanagement that I had picked up on. I have also been gravely concerned by the potential for corruption identified in the HMIC Report which has, tellingly, remained unaddressed by the CoP, despite his lawyer's response casting aspersions and allegations of corruption against others.

The CoP is the person who is ultimately responsible and accountable for all the actions and behaviour of the RGP, including those stated above.

2. The contents and allegations made in the Letter.

The second issue I must address is the tone and content of the Letter. I must place on record that the allegations made in the Letter that I am (or may be) interfering with the independence of the GPA, that I am (or may be) compromising the rule of law in Gibraltar and participating in a plot to discredit the CoP or influence the ongoing criminal investigation are entirely untrue and nothing short of a most scurrilous attack on my integrity. I find such allegations to be malicious and entirely misplaced. I strenuously refute them and hold each one up as a further demonstration of good reason for my lack of confidence in the CoP and my concerns about his probity and integrity.

To conclude, I communicate to you as Governor that, for all the above stated reasons, the content, tone and style of the Letter have done nothing but cement my lack of confidence in the CoP and my concerns about the integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar in addition to the matters I have already communicated to you as Governor.

Yours sincerely

05th June 2020

Dear Joey,

Re: Commissioner of Police - Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the letter dated 29th May 2020 that you have received from Charles Gomez and Co representing the Commissioner of Police ("COP"), Ian McGrail ("the letter").

I have no formal role under the Police Act in relation to the matters currently before the Authority for consideration. Therefore, whilst my views about the COP are relevant only in so far as the Authority wishes to have regard to them, I cannot allow the Authority's record to stand unrebutted on the basis of the untrue and scurrilous allegations made by the COP. Thank for giving me the opportunity to do so.

The letter makes important and very serious allegations against me, namely, that I have improperly, corruptly and in abuse of my powers "interfered" with an ongoing criminal investigation by:

(i) privately subjecting the COP to "significant and at times intemperate private criticism" about how the criminal investigation has been handled; and

(ii) trying "for many months" to persuade COP to "change his and the RGP's approach to the investigation which would either lead to it being dropped entirely or certain suspects not being prosecuted".

In support of those statements it is said that I have feigned loss of confidence in the COP as a means of disguising my alleged real objective which is said to be, effectively, to "nobble" the investigation and prosecution to which the investigation relates, and that in some way, this should be deduced from

HM Government of Gibraltar • 40 Town Range • Gibraltar GX11 1AA
t +350 20051731 e michael.llamas_QC@gibraltar.gov.gi w gibraltar.gov.gi

issues relating to "timing" of actions by others and the allegation (also denied by me) that I have reacted with "startling" emotion and consequential insinuation that this is apt to sustain the fantastic allegations made against me by the COP. I hasten to say that each of them is untrue and without merit or justification.

Part of the narrative of the COP's allegations against me is that I apparently gave him "the strong impression that I was primarily concerned with protecting the Chief Minister and 'Gibraltar PLC" (the AG's words)". I am not aware that the Chief Minister is a person in need of protection in the context of the criminal investigation in question. In so far as concerns the fact that I was primarily concerned with protecting "Gibraltar PLC' (which is vernacular for the public interest of Gibraltar) that is absolutely correct. That is my constitutional role and my job (a fact that the COP, and those advising him appear to overlook).

At a personal level, I deeply regret (because I have always enjoyed excellent working and personal relations with him) to have to say that I cannot recognise the truth in the statements and allegations that COP now makes in the letter. They are untrue.

I have a constitutional role both in relation to prosecutions (I have ultimate responsibility and control over them) and for the rule of law (I am the guardian of the laws of Gibraltar and compliance with them). This is important because it renders proper interventions by me which may not be proper if engaged in by others. What the COP is effectively doing, on the basis of pure speculation and assumption on his part, is to cast the gravest aspersions on my motives for my statements, views and actions.

I should comment also that, in any event, the COP is not (as he appears to believe) immune to having his actions "strongly disapproved of" or being "severely criticised for them". Yet he equates both to the improper interference with the conduct of a criminal investigation and a violation of police independence. This, worryingly, shows lack of understanding and judgment by the COP.

Because of my roles described above, and also the fact that I am the Crown's (in all its facets, including the RGP) principal legal adviser in Gibraltar, it has always been customary for the COP and the RGP to seek the Attorney General's advice and to discuss ongoing investigations with him, whenever that is required. Mr McGrail has done so, both before and after becoming COP.

Contrary to what the letter says, I have never said that the COP lied to me. What I have told him is that he has incurred in a serious breach of my trust (which I explain below) as a result of which I have lost confidence in him.

I turn now to what has actually occurred. I first became aware of this criminal investigation on the 11 May 2019, when I received an email from the COP (sent also to the Chief Minister, Minister of Justice, the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the DPP) asking to meet with us urgently to brief us in relation to certain information that they had obtained in that criminal investigation. That meeting took place on Monday 13 May 2019. At that meeting, or shortly thereafter, I became aware that James Levy QC had shares in one of the companies involved in that dispute and that he was mentioned in communications with the three suspects and was potentially a person of interest to the investigation.

Far from seeking to intervene or interfere for that reason, I had no further involvement with the criminal investigation until over 11 months later when, in early-April 2020, the DPP called me to discuss the Government's position in relation to the ongoing issues about the ownership of a computer platform and its software that HMGOG uses, to which the criminal investigation related.

During that discussion the DPP explained to me that the RGP had drawn up a list of 76 charges (some of which could be impacted by the question of ownership of the platform) and that the RGP were thinking of issuing search warrants against Mr James Levy QC. I was alarmed, both by the number of charges (which would be quite inappropriate in any prosecution) and also by the proposal to obtain and issue a search warrant against a senior lawyer without first seeking voluntary co-operation or voluntary production of evidence. My concern was not because of any sense that lawyers should be exempt from this mechanism, rather it was (as would be the case of any person) that such warrants should reflect the reality of the risk of destruction of evidence unless the person is taken by surprise, or the refusal of the person to provide the evidence voluntarily. Not only can that not be assumed against any person, still less a practising lawyer, but Mr Levy had been aware of the RGP's interest in him for many months, and had had plenty of opportunity to destroy evidence if he were minded or inclined to do so. I have a legitimate public interest role and function (indeed, a responsibility) in respect of both these matters.

I asked to meet with the COP in relation to these two matters, and we did so on 7th April 2019. In that meeting I advised him of my concern about the need to obtain clarity on the issue of ownership of the computer platform since it was clear that that issue would likely have an impact on at least some of the proposed charges, and I also told him that I was worried about the overall number (76) charges, which seemed wholly excessive, not to say absurd. I reminded him of the general wisdom of focusing the charges appropriately. We also discussed, in the terms that I have described above, the proposal to obtain and execute a search warrant against Mr Levy.

The outcome of that discussion was that we reached a clear understanding that the the RGP would not take any further action until they had considered my advice about the rationalisation of the charges, and then the COP would come back to see me again. It was clear beyond peradventure that nothing would happen until we met again. The next I hear (from COP himself, as it was happening) was that RGP officers were in the process of executing search warrants against Mr Levy at the offices of Hassans and at his home.

I have never said anything to the COP which can be interpreted as anything other than advice and assistance, as has always been the practice. The COP is of course free to take whatever action he considers lawful and appropriate regardless of any advice that I may give him on the matter, and he did so. He unquestionably has that right. What the COP cannot do, and also expect to retain my personal confidence, is to act contrary to an understanding reached between us, as he has done. This, and not my disapproval of his actions (even though I think that they were ill advised), is the reason for my loss of confidence in him.

I have made it explicitly clear to the COP throughout that the conduct of the investigation (including the seeking and execution of search warrants) are, whatever I may advise him, operational matters entirely for him. Nothing that I have ever said to the COP or any other member of the RGP has been even remotely open to the possible (mis)interpretation that I have advised or encouraged, still less that I have interfered to bring about or try to bring about, the curtailment of the investigation, how it is carried out by the RGP or to prevent any person from being charged. It is outrageously wrong and unfair for the COP to allege that I have (let alone that I have done so repeatedly over an extended period of time) and I am shocked and deeply resent that he has done so. This necessarily deepens my loss of confidence in him going forward.

I remain at the Authority's disposal for anything with which I may be able to assist it further by way of clarification or further explanation.

Yours Sincerely,

Michael Llamas QC
Attorney General

HM Government of Gibraltar

THE CHIEF MINISTER

Dr J J Britto
Chairman
Gibraltar Police Authority
Unit 25B Casemates Square
Gibraltar

5th June 2020

Dear Joey,

Re: Letter dated 29th May 2020 from Charles Gomez & Company, on behalf of the Commissioner of Police to the Members of the Gibraltar Police Authority ("the Letter").

Thank you for providing me with a copy of the Letter. Your having done so serves two purposes. Firstly, it fairly provides me with an opportunity to respond to the very serious and vile allegations made against me by the Commissioner of Police ("COP"). Secondly, it gives the Authority the opportunity to have whatever regard it considers appropriate to my response when it makes its further decisions (if any) in relation to its invitation to the COP to retire.

Let me say at the very outset that serious as they are, the COP's allegations against me are completely untrue. Like any other person who values the rule of law (of which the independence of operational policing is a key element), I would be the first to admire the courage of a COP who fearlessly makes a stand in defence of the independence of policing and its freedom from political interference. It would be a relief to know that our police force was under such leadership.

+350 20070071 • +350 20076396 • cm@gibraltar.gov.gi • w gibraltar.gov.gi

However, this does not provide the COP with licence to elevate the product of his apparently fertile imagination, and the consequent speculative inferences which it leads him to make, to the status of fact, as he does. Still less does it entitle the COP to make (on the basis of such speculation as to the motives of each of them), the very grave allegations that he makes against all of His Excellency the Governor, the Chief Minister, the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions. It seems to me that such allegations could only properly be made and justified if supported by credible evidence. They are not, as they cannot be because they are untrue. For that reason, they are a fanciful nonsense which self evidently serves to vividly illustrate why the COP is undeserving of my confidence.

I wish to make clear that I stand by and ratify everything that I have previously said to you about my loss of confidence in the COP, and the reasons for it. To those reasons I would now add the extraordinary nature and content of the Letter, on the basis of which my loss of confidence in the COP is further increased and cemented. Furthermore, it is not immediately clear to me how the COP can preside over the efficiency and effectiveness of the RGP in the light of the obvious breakdown of his relationship with each of the Governor, the Government (myself and all other members of my Cabinet), the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions that necessarily results from the contents of the Letter.

You will have seen in this regard the letter dated 3 June 2020 addressed to you by His Excellency the Governor which His Excellency has shared with me. Of further significance arising from this letter is the entirely unjustified and reckless nature of the allegation against the Governor, who was not at the material time even aware of the criminal investigation interference which is alleged to justify the COP's allegations against him. Yet, such is the nature of the Letter. I made His Excellency aware of that investigation at the same time as I referred the matter to you. I did so in a spirit of complete transparency.

I am, of course, not accountable to the Authority for my conduct as Chief Minister. Nevertheless, from a position of institutional respect for the GPA as the statutory body responsible for ensuring the independence of policing in Gibraltar, your role in respect of section 34 of the Police Act, and indeed deference to its members, I set out below my response to the COP's allegations in so far as they concern me.

The allegations levelled against me by the COP could not be more serious in nature. He accuses me of corruptly (see para 16- 22) interfering with the conduct by the RGP of a criminal investigation, in an unprecedented "abuse of power", motivated by a wish to retaliate against him (see paras 23 and 24) and a "personal connection with the outcome of the investigation" (para 38). He further accuses me of lying to the Authority about the "real reasons" for "pressuring" the COP to retire which he describes as a "a pretence" (para 48), "a pretext" (para 66) and "fig leaves" for the real reason which he declares to be a desire on my part to impede the COP's proper and reasonable handling of a live criminal investigation (para 39) and, which latter (asserted by him) reason is (as candidly stated by Mr Gomez at para 33) "the real and central reason for the request". In other words, I stand accused by the COP of all of outright dishonesty, wholly improper (indeed potentially unlawful) interference with the RGP and corruption.

Not content to level these grave allegations against me without a shred of evidence to support them, the COP has the temerity to declare that it is unnecessary for him "merely to rely on any inference raised by the timing of the s.34 letter to make this point" because (according to the COP) during your meeting on 22 May you confirmed to him that I had told you that his handling of "the criminal investigation" was "spoken about at the Chair's meeting with the Chief Minister and Governor and was one of the reasons they had lost confidence in Mr McGrail." This is relied on as some sort of "smoking gun" that puts his grave accusations beyond doubt or somehow justify his making them (para 40).

In the context of all the above, that he also accuses me of undermining the rule of law, that my conduct is 'an affront to the rule of law' and of seeking to "direct you" in your decisions (second para on page 2), serious as they are in themselves, pale into relative insignificance.

The COP's allegations are entirely untrue, and the manner in which he describes such interaction as there has been between us is so distorted as to be obvious that it would mislead the Authority.

Let me be absolutely clear, I have at no time or in any manner sought to interfere with the RGP's conduct of the criminal investigation in question in any manner of for any purpose, including (but not limited to) my alleged "personal connection with the outcome of the investigation". That personal connection is, presumably, the fact that Mr James Levy QC, whose conduct is apparently under investigation, is the senior partner of Hassans, a law firm of which I am also a partner although presently on a sabbatical.

At no time have I sought to intervene in or interfere to prevent Mr Levy being investigated or to prevent a search warrant being obtained and executed against him at the offices of Hassans, facts which I first learned about as they were already happening, that is, as the search warrant was being enforced at the offices of Hassans and at Mr Levy's home. This can be best illustrated by reference to the fact that at 12:25 pm on the 12th May 2020 I received a "Whats App" from the COP in which he said to me "C M before you hear it from anyone else I want to inform you that detectives are executing a search warrant at Hassan for (JL) in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez".

I responded at 12.34 in the following terms:
"Ian, Thank you for the courtesy of this information. I think that is a bad decision. A search should only have been sought if you believed that the person in question was not going to cooperate and will try to destroy evidence. If, as you say, you are hoping for cooperation, especially in a case involving a senior Silk and head of Gibraltar's largest legal firm, you should, in my vie w first have sought to contact that person and obtain cooperation. Given my close personal relationship with JL, I won't comment further."

The COP replied at 12:35 as follows: "Noted CM".

I repeated that view to the COP during a meeting at my office in No 6 later on the same on day, coinciding with his presence in No 6 in connection with a Covid planning meeting in the basement of No 6. I also made it abundantly clear to him that my reaction would have been identical had he taken the same action against any other senior member of the Gibraltar Bar, all of whom, like him, are officers of the court with the legal and ethical obligations consequent to that status. These are the messages and the meeting to which the COP refers, in terms that I do not recognise, in paragraph 36 of the Letter.

The above is the full extent of my communications with the COP or the RGP in relation to the "criminal investigation" since then.

In so far as concerned my alleged motives for doing so, i.e. my personal connection with the outcome of the investigation, the accusation made against me is not sustainable even on the COP's case. In his Whats App at 12:25 (as the events were occurring) he told me that the warrant obtained and executed against Mr Levy was "in relation to the case against Perez, Cornelio & Sanchez". So, when I expressed the view that I did 9 minutes later at 12:34, I had no reason to believe that the investigation was of Mr Levy.

In fact, I am clearly entitled to express the views that I did in the above manner. That does not constitute interfering with the investigation in the grave manner of the allegations made, or at all. I am entitled to express my views to the COP on matters of policing policy in Gibraltar. I did not prevent the obtaining or the execution of the search warrant, both of which had already occurred. I have made no attempt to secure an end to those investigations, against Mr Levy or anyone else. Indeed, when I discovered that one of the persons under investigation was a civil servant, I directed the Chief Secretary that HMGOG should be a complainant to the police in the investigation, which duly occurred. Therefore, the notion that I was motivated by concern for the outcome of the investigation in so far as concerned my alleged personal connection with it is therefore simply unsustainable, as the COP well knows. This was an investigation in which I had insisted my Government should be a complainant (ie the entity whose interests may have been criminally damaged) and in respect of a National Security facility which I had been instrumental in creating in the public interest of Gibraltar. It is remarkable that the COP could even believe, less still suggest to others, that I might want to interfere with such an investigation.

In my opinion, the obtaining and execution of a search warrant which the COP referred me to in his Whats App in such circumstances (such as I described in my own Whats App response to the COP) is of dubious legality, abusive, unprecedented in policing in Gibraltar, incompatible with public confidence in policing and the good name and reputation of Gibraltar as a business and finance centre. It is noteworthy in this regard that these are policy matters in which, as Chief Minister, I have a legitimate interest, and that in the event of the RGP being sued for the unlawful obtaining and execution of a search warrant, it is HMGOG that has to bear the financial consequences.

Be all the above as it may, serious as they are, and as the COP also well knows, those are not the reasons why I have further lost confidence in him by virtue of this criminal investigation. I have not lost confidence in him because he obtained and executed a search warrant in circumstances in which I believe it was inappropriate to do so. Nor is the reason "how the criminal investigation we refer to above has been handled" (para 35, and elsewhere in the Letter). The primary reason is that the COP has clearly lied to me.

During the meeting to which I refer above, the COP stated to me in explicit terms, in response to my concerns about the propriety of the warrant, that he had obtained and executed the search warrant against Mr Levy in reliance on legal advice from the Director of Public Prosecutions who had confirmed that it was appropriate to seek such a warrant and proceed in that way. I have since determined that this categorical statement from the COP, clearly designed to suggest to me that my views as to the law were wrong and he / his officers had acted properly (and not compromised the investigation or exposed HMGOG to potential claims for civil damages) was wholly untrue. In fact, it is now clearly established that at no time did the COP or the RGP obtain legal advice from the DPP to that effect, a fact which the COP has now acknowledged in writing to Hassans (and has been separately confirmed to me by the DPP). This is unacceptable to me and goes to the COP's probity and integrity in his dealings with me, and to my ability to have confidence in him. This is unrelated to the nature, direction or conclusion which the investigation might take or reach (which I have been supportive of from the beginning, continue to be and have caused my Government to be a complainant for), as that continues to take its course. The COP has understood that, as evident from the fact that the investigation in question has not been affected in any way and has, rightly, continued unabated.

Additionally, I cannot accept the COP's statements in relation to his briefings to me about the "incident at sea". This was an incident with extremely serious external political consequences and very material potential financial consequences to the Government. I have, since our original discussion, already had to answer questions in the Parliament on this matter and there has been additional media reporting related to it both before and arising from my answer (including on the Spanish national broadcaster, RTVE). It has been the established practice for at least 50 years that Commissioners of Police keep the Chief Minister of the day fully, timeously and spontaneously informed, in detail about incidents of that kind. Had COP properly done so in this case it would not have been necessary for me to exercise the Chief Minister's powers under section 15 of the Police Act for the first ever time, as I confirmed to the Parliament. His Excellency the Governor has complained of the very same thing.

I have already taken you through my deep concerns in relation to the report from HM Inspectorate of Constabulary, which are also deeply concerning to me and relate to the efficacy and effectiveness of the RGP, both of which are the direct, legal responsibility of the COP under the Police Act.

Nothing in the Letter from the COP raises any real issue of interference with the independence of policing in Gibraltar, and the COP cannot raise imaginary allegations to escape the fact that he has lost the confidence of every relevant authority in Gibraltar, and the proper consequences thereof. His allegations are untrue and are based entirely on speculation on his part as to everyone's motives for forming the views of him that they have. It is in itself wholly improper that he should make such spurious and damaging allegations without evidence commensurate with their gravity (or indeed any evidence). This now also goes to my further lack of confidence in the COP.

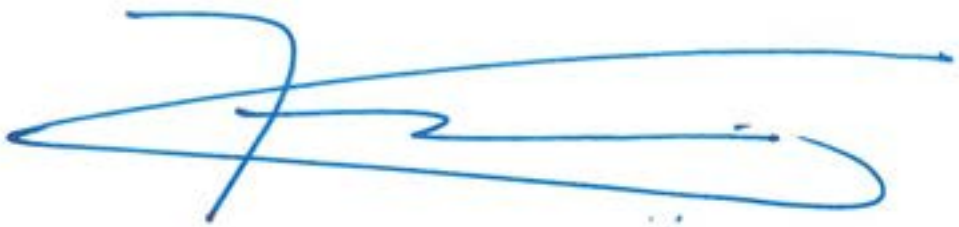
Please do not hesitate to ask me to clarify any matter that it would be of assistance to the Authority that I explain further.

With very best wishes,



Fabian Picardo QC MP
Chief Minister

Dear Sirs

Re: Invitation to Retire: Section 34 of the Police Act

We are instructed by the Gibraltar Police Authority to reply to your letter of 29th May, 2020.

Our Client acknowledges that certain procedural errors have been made and is accordingly withdrawing the current process initiated under section 34 of the Police Act. However, the complaints made against your Client by the Governor and Chief Minister remain live and our Clients will consider how it will proceed in respect of them.

We will not address the substantive points raised in your letter save to state that we are instructed to dispute what your Client alleges was said to him by the Authority's Chairman about the ongoing police investigation. Our Client maintains that it is your Client who repeatedly raised this matter and that other than what he had been told by your Client, the Chairman's knowledge of this matter was confined to the allegation that your Client had lied to the Chief Minister and the Attorney General.

Yours faithfully

Importance: High

Dear Sir,

We refer to your letter of today's date received after close of business at 16:28. This brief response has been prepared at speed given the timing of receipt of your letter.

We note the withdrawal of the flawed Section 34 process, and the recognition that there have been procedural flaws in the process.

Our client denies "lying" to the Chief Minister or the Attorney General in relation to the "on-going police investigation", or over any other matter.

Your clients are well aware that no particulars have been given to our client of any alleged lies. Our client has therefore had no opportunity to address the allegations which at the moment can only be classified as vague slurs.

An accusation of lying against the principal law enforcement officer of the Crown in Gibraltar is a matter of the highest gravity. Mr. McGrail's service has been recognised by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II herself.

We note that your client's Chair now admits to having been informed by the Chief Minister and Attorney General that Mr. McGrail "lied" to them about a police investigation. We also note that your client (we assume deliberately) omitted this allegation, which was plainly central to the Chief Minister's decision-making, from the second letter of 12 May purportedly setting out the detail of the complaint against him. We suggest that the strong inference is that your client knew the matter was constitutionally improper and for that reason left it out.

An allegation of lying in any circumstances is one of the utmost gravity yet our client has no understanding of the specifics of the allegation and has not had the chance to address it. We remain entirely unclear what your clients, the Authority, propose to now do.

Our client is gravely concerned by how he has been treated during this process, and I welcome your frank acknowledgment that there have been procedural flaws. He is an officer of the highest standing, with an impeccable record over the past 36 years. In these circumstances, given how unfairly he has been treated and the improper pressure put upon him to alter the course of a live criminal investigation, our client feels he must apply for early retirement from the Royal Gibraltar Police.

All of Mr. McGrail's rights are reserved.

Yours faithfully,

Charles Gomez.

GIBRALTAR POLICE AUTHORITY

Unit 25B Casemates Square
Gibraltar

5th June, 2020

The Hon Fabian Picardo QC MP
The Chief Minister
HM Government of Gibraltar
6 Convent Place
Gibraltar

Dear Chief Minister

Re: Complaints made by you and Governor against the Commissioner of Police

I refer to the complaints made verbally to me as Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority on 18th May, 2020, by you and the Governor against the Commissioner of Police.

The Authority commenced a process under section 34 of the Police Act in accordance with a decision taken at a meeting of the Authority held on 21st May, 2020. The decision was taken by five members of the Authority personally present at the meeting and four others by telephone after the meeting. The only member who did not participate was Mr N Pyle, who as Governor, was one of the complainants. Pursuant to this decision, on 22nd May, 2020, I, on behalf of the Authority, invited the Commissioner to retire. I did this at a meeting with him held on 22nd May, 2020, at the Commissioner's office followed up by two letters to him that same day. In my second letter I stated the grounds advanced to me by you and the Governor for your respective loss of confidence in him. I also invited him to make representations which we would consider before taking a final decision.

On 29th May, 2020, Charles Gomez & Company wrote to the Authority attacking the process on the grounds of fundamental unfairness, abuse of process and procedural flaws. Bias was not expressly alleged but it was impliedly so given that the Authority was accused of effectively doing what you and Governor wanted and reaching a decision without considering representations by the Commissioner.

We have taken independent legal advice and have been advised that the process which we have adopted under section 34 of the Police Act is fundamentally flawed and should be withdrawn. However, we are also advised that the complaints by you and Governor remain live and have to be determined. We have also been advised that the Authority, as presently constituted, is vulnerable to challenge on the grounds of bias. The Authority considers that as presently constituted it is unable to process the complaints without being vulnerable to legal challenge and is not therefore prepared to do so.

Yours faithfully

Chairman

RETIREMENT OF THE FORMER COMMISSIONER OF POLICE

ISSUE OF COMMISSION

LN.2022/034

WHEREAS the Government has committed to issue a commission for an Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act into the matters more particularly detailed below;

AND WHEREAS the Government has requested that His Excellency the Governor, Vice Admiral Sir David Steel KBE, DL, identify a retired High Court Judge of the jurisdiction of England & Wales to carry out such an Inquiry;

AND WHEREAS His Excellency the Governor has, with his consent, identified Sir Charles Peter Lawford Openshaw, DL, formerly a judge of the High Court of England and Wales, Queen's Bench Division;

THE GOVERNMENT NOW HEREBY, in exercise of the powers conferred on it by Section 3 of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, appoints the aforesaid Sir Charles Peter Lawford Openshaw, DL, as Commissioner to inquire, as he shall in his absolute discretion consider appropriate, into the reasons and circumstances leading to Mr Ian McGrail ceasing to be Commissioner of Police in June 2020 by taking early retirement.

The Commissioner is to ascertain the facts and report to the Government on the above matters.

Save as the Commissioner may in his discretion determine, the Inquiry is to be held in public at a venue, and to commence on a date, to be specified by the Government by notice in the Gazette.

Dated: 4th February 2022.

VICE ADMIRAL SIR DAVID STEEL KBE, DL,
Governor,
For the Government,
At the request of the Chief Minister.

By Hand and By Email

Dear Sir,

We act for Mr Ian McGrail.

The Chief Minister has intimated that he will shortly announce the commencement of an inquiry into the termination of our client's employment as Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police.

Mr McGrail wants to ensure that the Commission of Inquiry achieves best evidence.

We have therefore been instructed to draft a Witness Statement for our client to submit at the earliest possible opportunity.

Many of the issues that the Inquiry will be concerned with, involve you.

Similarly, many of the matters that Mr McGrail wants to bring to the Commission's attention relate to exchanges and conversations which Mr McGrail had with you either on a one-to-one basis, or with others.

We wish to avoid as many factual disputes as we can, and we have therefore been instructed to provide you with proposals for agreement as per below.

The matters which we now proceed to deal with are not conclusive and we reserve the right to provide you with further notices to admit facts.

In view of the extraordinarily serious matters in question, we have no doubt that you will want to cooperate in this exercise, and we look forward to hearing from you by return.

Since what follows relates to interactions between Mr McGrail and you personally, we can think of no reason why you should share the contents of this letter with anybody other than such independent legal advisor as you might want to retain. Your interactions with Mr McGrail and others are significant and may become a focal point in the inquiry and that is why we have no hesitation in recommending that you take independent legal advice without delay.

If there is anything in what follows that you do not understand, feel free to ask and we will clarify, but this should not prevent you from responding in a full, frank and candid manner immediately to all of those points that you do understand.

For the avoidance of any doubts, please rest assured that we will be producing this document and any responses to the Inquiry.

Proposal for Agreement of Facts

General issues –

Confirmation that;-

- His Excellency the Governor (HE) appointed Ian McGrail (IM) as Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) with effect from 1st May 2018 for a four-year term of warrant in this role on the advice of the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA) and after having consulted with the Chief Minister even though the latter consultation was not a pre-requisite in the Police Act 2006.

- The GPA was asked by HE to review IM's progress against the objectives set out in IM's application for the post at the mid-point of IM's tenure as Commissioner, the mid-point for this review being May 2020.

- That the said review was not carried out by the GPA.

- During one of your initial meetings with IM, you were told by IM that during the selection for the post by the GPA at the time he had not enjoyed the support of GPA members Nick Pyle (NP) and Albert Danino, but that the remaining seven members were in agreement that IM was to be appointed as Commissioner. That IM told you that NP had suggested the vacancy for the post should have been advertised in the UK.

- The relationship between the GPA and IM was a rather a good and constructive one. That IM was open and transparent with the GPA in manner which was welcomed by the GPA.

- Communications between IM and yourself were very fluid.

- On occasions, the GPA via yourself as the Chairperson, provided views and advice to IM which he took on board, particularly when dealing with matters relating to the Gibraltar Police Federation (GPF).

- You expressed to IM and other RGP senior officers that you strongly perceived the conflictive behaviours of the GPF convenors were personal against IM.

- If the GPA (including the Deputy Governor and Chief Secretary) had any concerns about how IM was discharging his functions as head of the RGP, that any concerns would have been brought to the notice of IM but none were.

- You congratulated IM on a number of occasions praising the work he was doing in respect of addressing the work force on ethics and standards, recruitment, the handling of the pandemic and other matters.

- You were very supportive of IM during a campaign mounted against him by the daily newspaper Panorama.

Report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and Fire and Rescue Services (HMICFRS)

- That in seeking to be transparent and progressive, IM asked the GPA via you to request HMICFRS to conduct an inspection of the RGP. This in addition to the independent study commissioned by IM and carried out by a private firm of consultants called AAP Associates to provide recommendations on how to deal with the issues arising from the GPF staff survey.

- That this request by IM to the GPA for the HMICFRS came only 6 months after IM commenced his commissionership of the RGP.

- IM maintained very close contact with you in preparing the ground for the inspection including discussions to formulate its "Terms of Reference". That after discussing the said terms with the HMICFRS inspection lead, Mr Paul Holewell, you felt that IM's aim for the inspection to look at how "effective is the RGP at keeping Gibraltar Safe" was not possible because that was too wide a remit which would constitute a full inspection, something which the GPA/HMGoG would not be able to fund.

- You together with Darren Grech, Chief Secretary, during an unrelated work trip to London, visited Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies, Matt Parr, at his office in London and discussed with him the impending inspection. That following on from that meeting, you informed IM that Matt Parr had expressed no issue of concern with the standards of policing services in Gibraltar unlike the reservations he had of other British Overseas Territories in the Caribbean.

- You received the draft HMICFRS report in April 2020 and wrote to Mr Holewell expressing disappointment regarding the language and tone which you said was unfortunate and unconstructive. You were also disheartened that the draft report was very critical of the GPA per se and to a degree of HMGoG too. That you challenged parts of the draft report as inaccurate and that you responded with feedback to HMICFRS.

- You discussed the public dissemination of the final report with the GPA, IM, NP and the CM and possibly even the Minster of Justice, Ms Sacramento who had responsibility for policing.

- IM told you he had no issues with making the final report public.

- You informed IM that NP was also in agreement with the report being made public. At no point did you mention any contrary view expressed by NP to IM.

- You encountered difficulty in obtaining the views of the Chief Minister (CM) on the public dissemination of the report. That you tried various ways to achieve this and finally got "direct" confirmation on 6th May 2020 that all parties were in agreement that the final report should be made public. That you did not receive any feedback on the report from the CM at that time. That you asked that press releases be coordinated.

- You asked IM to copy in The Convent and No 6 Convent Place press offices the press notice releasing the final report and that you would do likewise with the GPA press statement.

- IM shared with you all his responses to questions from the press on the HMICFRS report. That you asked IM not to be critical of HMGoG given that HMICFRS saw as a bad thing the provision of supplementary funding when this was needed by the RGP.

- That you expressed views to IM that the Gibraltar Chronicle's article covering the HMICFRS report was "a bit sensationalist".

- That you had some thoughts which you wanted to share with IM relating to what you thought may be the reasons behind the tone and style of the report.

- You and IM met with Minister Sacramento to discuss the HMICFRS report and that in summary, the Minister said there was not much to be concerned about and pledged her full support to IM and the RGP in seeing through the recommendations contained in the report.

- You complimented IM for his responses to press questions concerning the HMICFRS report during the then daily COVID-19 public briefings which were broadcast 'live' on GBC. That IM was accompanying Minister Sacramento on this particular briefing and that you told IM that she had followed up IM's response reaffirming her support of the RGP in respect of dealing with the recommendations in the report.

- That on the 29th April 2020 IM wrote to you with a comprehensive road map of how the RGP intended to address the recommendations in the HMICFRS Report. That IM also provided you with the rationale explaining the lack of progress in the "Areas For Improvement" of the previous HMICFRS inspection report.

Operation Kram – the collision at sea with fatalities

- IM provided you with timely and detailed briefings of how he was handling this critical incident.

- That IM advised you on the importance of having independent oversight of the investigation into the deaths of two Spanish nationals arising from a collision with an RGP patrol craft.

- That you fully understood accepted IM's method of approach to deal with the matter.

- That you formed part of a "WhatsApp" group chat opened by the CM for this incident under the title "Maritime Incident". The members of this WhatsApp group were the CM, yourself, Frank Carreras who is the Chairman of the Police Complaints Board, the Chief Secretary Darren Grech and IM.

- That you read all the exchanges in the group including the message by the Chief Minister at 17:09Hrs on 12th March 2020 saying "Thank you Ian. Location does not worry me so much. Helps us in a way. Will discuss directly with you." This in response to IM's update on the incident and informing the group that ...."in terms of the investigation proper the evidence points at the pursuit and collision occurring outside BGTW. Not the best news we wanted to hear."

- At no time have you had any concern about IM's handling of the incident and that you have never expressed any concerns to him.

- You are not aware that the independent team of the Metropolitan Police Service which reported in 2021 had anything adverse to comment about the manner in which IM handled the critical incident.

Operation Delhi – 36North/Bland/HMGoG/Perez/Cornelio/Sanchez

- That at 14:20Hrs on 12th May 2020, IM contacted you saying that he needed to speak to you urgently.

- You met with IM and Assistant Commissioner Richard Ullger in IM's office at New Mole House Police Headquarters later that same day where IM briefed you on Operation Delhi, an investigation into the hacking of the National Security Central Intelligence System (NSCIS) and the intervention on Jaime Levy QC (JL), who was a suspect in this investigation. That IM explained what he termed as an inappropriate interference by the CM and the Attorney General (AG) with a live criminal investigation when he had been severely reprimanded for the actions taken. IM further told you that he felt threatened by the CM who had said that he hoped IM was found to be right in his actions as otherwise there "would be consequences". That IM told you he felt duty bound to bring this to your notice as Chair of the GPA with responsibility of ensuring the independence of police actions in criminal investigations. That IM also told you that he felt that the good relationship he had with the AG and CM had been severely damaged because of this and that this was a regrettable situation because all the RGP were doing was discharging their lawful functions. That you acknowledged what IM had told you and understood his concerns. That you told IM that you hoped the importance of this issue would fade away with time.

The GPA invitation to retire under s.34 Police Act 2006

- That at 11:46Hrs on 21st May 2020, IM asked whether he could meet with you the following morning.

- That you responded to this request saying you were planning to call a meeting yourself.

- That you and IM arranged to meet at IM's office at 09:00Hrs on 22nd May 2020.

- That at this meeting you stated that you were supposed to have called IM to the GPA and there tell him that the GPA was inviting him to retire.

- That you told IM that you had been called to a meeting with the NP Governor and the CM but that the meeting had been initiated by the CM in the Convent. That on being asked by IM to state this again you rectified saying NP had contacted you telling you the CM would also be there.

- That you told IM that between both of them they had told you that they had lost complete confidence in IM's ability to lead and manage the RGP.

- That you told IM that you asked NP and the CM what they were basing this on. You explained to IM that their reply was that it was to do with the collision at sea and the HMICFRS report.

- That you told IM that the meeting with NP and the CM the provisions of the Police Act that deal with the removal of the Commissioner, i.e. section 34 where a Commissioner can be invited to retire and section 13 where the Governor can suspend or call for the Commissioner's resignation were explained to you. That you informed IM that NP/ CM had said Gibraltar had been put in a very poor position because of the incident at sea and you were told not to delve too much on this because they were going to write to IM separately on this matter. That they said the incident at sea was very, very grave and that it put Gibraltar in a very bad position with Spain and Britain. You said that you would not go in further detail because technically it was not something the GPA could do anything about. That they said that the HMICFRS report led them to believe that the RGP had regressed rather than progressed. That you told them that there were matters you could not answer because you felt it was for IM to do so. That you didn't want to mention previous commissioners either.

- That you told IM that you were asked by NP / CM whether you knew the reasons why there were recommendations still pending from the previous inspection and that you mentioned that there were probably explanations.

- That you told IM that NP / CM went through the report with you, bringing up the issue of the RGP not being alive to corruption and how this damaged the reputation of Gibraltar resting on the police. That they also said the independence of the police could be tainted by not being alive to corruption, something which you told IM you had never personally seen that way. That NP / CM said the report put the RGP in disrepute.

- That you told IM that NP / CM recognized that IM may have explanations to offer which is why they asked you to invoke section 34 of the Police Act 2006. You told IM that unfortunately you had been asked to hand a letter to IM and did not want to do this in front of the whole of the GPA.

- That you told IM that the GPA felt they had no option and that all the GPA were in agreement. That the preference was retirement as this was not the same as resignation, describing the latter as the "nuclear" option.

- That IM told you that his initial reaction to this news was that this was a complete travesty because there were underlying issues.

- That you told IM that the GPA were bound do something about NP / CM losing confidence in IM because they had been told to.

- That you gave IM 7 days to respond if he wanted to, even though you said the Police Act 2006 did not make reference to any specific period to respond with any representations.

- That you told NP / CM that IM had already started working on the recommendations contained in the report and you said to IM "I think what has triggered this, apart from anything else, from what they said, is actually the incident at sea, according to HE."

- That IM asked you when was the said meeting between you, NP / CM held.

- That you told IM that it had been held on Monday 18th May 2020 – that you had been called on the Sunday 17th May to attend the meeting. You then rectified to state that you had been called to the meeting on the same day, Monday 18th May.

- That IM asked you what the position of the GPA was and whether the GPA had any concerns about him. That to this you responded "No, no wait, we would have told you" and you advised IM that he could use this as part of his submissions in response to the invitation to retire.

- That you told IM that NP / CM were claiming not to have been fed information relating to the incident at sea.

- That IM explained to you what in his view was the reason that had triggered the issue, this being that the RGP had received a letter of an intended claim by counsel representing the families of the deceased / injured and IM had instructed Superintendent Cathal Yeats to engage with the Office of Criminal Prosecution and Litigation (OCPL) to seek crown counsel representation for the RGP as has been the case in other civil claims. That the Director of Public Prosecutions, Mr Christian Rocca QC (DPP) felt his chambers could be conflicted and could therefore not represent the RGP. That the DPP had written to the AG explaining the situation and that in turn the AG had communicated this to the CM who reacted in a manner which stunned IM suggesting that IM had not been keeping the CM apprised of developments – a matter which is not correct as IM explained to you that the RGP acted on the said letter of claim as soon as they received it.

- That you misconstrued the request for crown counsel representation of the RGP with a request for funding of independent counsel which is not what IM was at that stage considering.

- That you acknowledged to IM that the process of the Section 34 letter had been done the wrong way round.

- That IM asked you whether he had to hand in everything and leave his post, to which you said that IM was not suspended but would lose the job if NP invoked his powers

- That IM again stated that what was happening to him was a serious travesty.

- That you told IM that under the Act either the Governor or the CM can trigger the section, although you then said that, in fact "both can pull the trigger but one of them alone could take the final decision".

- That you told IM that the GPA had to act on this as otherwise it would be in default.

- That IM told you that he had been threatened by the CM and that you said not to say this to you but to mention it to the GPA.

- That IM told you he had never received any indication from NP expressing any concerns about IM as Commissioner. That IM had received feedback from the CM arising from the intervention on JL which he had briefed you on but that nothing negative had been received by IM from NP. That IM believed the catalyst behind the whole matter was the Operation Delhi intervention.

- That you told IM that NP / the CM had brought to your notice that in IM's application pack for the post, he had stated that he would immediately set up a working party to address the pending recommendations of the previous HMICFRS report and that this was a question the GPA had been asked to ask IM.

- That you told IM that NP / CM were clearly worried about international reputation.

- That IM asked you whether you would engage with HMI Matt Parr to find out if the HMICFRS report warranted IM's departure from the post. That in response to this you said that IM could ask this himself as the report talked about the RGP. You advised IM to take his time and read the letter that you had handed over to him adding that in 40 years of working in Government that you had never had to do anything like this before.

- That IM told you he was shocked.

- That you confirmed to IM that you knew he was shocked because of IM's reaction. You explained that a firm and final view had yet not been determined.

- That you said that if IM opted not to accept the invitation, then the Governor in all likelihood would invoke section 13 of the Act by suspending IM or calling for his resignation.

- That IM asked what would happen after he made his representations. You replied that the GPA would consider them and then go back to NP and the CM as they would have the final say.

- That IM told you this could cause a constitutional crisis but that you said you were doing what you had been obliged to do which was serve IM with the letter inviting him to retire.

- That IM said all this was an injustice and that he told you that the only thing he had at peace was his conscience and that his ethics remained high. That IM further told you that he was being muscled out because of other underlying issues and that he was toying with whether to defend himself and bring everything out in the open and cause reputational issues for Gibraltar during these crucial times.

- That you advised IM that he could completely be open with the GPA.

- That IM asked you whether you had the concerns of NP / the CM in writing and you replied that you did not.

- That IM read the letter you handed and told you it was extremely scant in detail and did not show the reasons for concern expressed by NP / CM. That the letter merely stated

"certain aspects of policing that had led to a serious and regrettable loss of confidence in IM as Commissioner."

- That IM insisted that you provide him with the particulars of the policing aspects referred to. That you tried to persuade IM to accept your notes of the meeting (which incidentally you did not have on you) as valid enough information of the concerns. That IM told you that he deserved those aspects of concern to be formally put in writing in order to consider responding to them.

- That you reiterated the reasons why the loss of confidence had happened being "the way its been handled apparently. The maritime incident." That IM told you that "apparently" was not good enough for him, that he needed all the details.

- That IM told you how could NP / the CM say they had lost confidence in the way IM had handled the collision at sea incident when IM had not yet answered to the request under section 15 of the Police Act 2006 requested by the CM the day before, on the 21st May 2020 on that matter.

- That you confirmed to IM that the final say as to whether he remained in post or not rested with NP / CM and not with the GPA. That IM then questioned you on the matter of the constitutional independence of the GPA but that you said it was the Governor who had appointed IM and therefore the Governor could also "dis-appoint" him.

- You mentioned to IM that you and all the other members of the GPA were equally surprised by the approach taken by NP / the CM and that the GPA being placed in this position.

- That IM asked you how it would leave him if he were to make representations, and these were not accepted – whether the invitation to retire still stood. That you told IM that it would most likely not stand meaning the avenue left for IM was to resign.

- That you told IM to seek advice on the matter.

- That IM again asked you who initiated the whole process. That IM asked you whether you had actually asked who of either NP and the CM had initiated the concerns. That IM asked you whether there was any reason why you did not ask this question and that you said you assumed it was NP because it was he that called you to the meeting.

- That you reiterated to have been asked to invoke section 34 because the default position was section 13 which would be triggered.

- That IM mentioned to you the trigger for the matter stemmed from the fact that the CM and AG had not been in agreement with the way the case involving JL had been handled. That he had been called up and threatened by CM who also said he would call up the RGP's Senior Management Team, adding this was a total interference with a live police operation.

- That you told IM that you had even told NP / the CM that you and IM had met with the Minister of Justice to discuss the contents of the report. You told IM that NP / the CM told that the MoJ did not feature in any of the Police Act 2006. That IM told you that as minister with responsibility for the police she did have a crucial role to play in terms of recruitment and resources.

- That IM kept on stating that this was all a travesty.

- That IM again queried what his situation would be if his representations were not accepted – would he be "fired as opposed to retiring?" That at that point you said you were unclear as to the process and that you would have to ask about it. IM asked you how were you going to find about this and you simply said you would have to ask "someone."

  That IM yet again asked you about the GPA's position should the GPA agree that IM's representations convinced them that he should refnain in post, but that NP / the CM did not agree with the GPA. IM asked you whether the GPA could go against the views of NP / the CM to which you replied "we may be put in such position that we have to stand down if there is a direct conflict." That IM asked you whether the GPA would do that to which you replied that you could not speak for others and had not made your own mind up.

- That you told IM that NP / the CM were the two principal parties that had to have confidence in the police.

- That IM told you that he had been totally open and transparent with the maritime incident, brining over an independent investigating team, accident investigators speaking to the Spanish authorities, speaking with the AG on numerous occasions asking him to agree to a Gibraltar strategy, but that the AG had stated that he would consider strategy once the investigation report by the Metropolitan Police was received. That IM told you he had done everything the way it should be done.

- That IM again asked you if the GPA had concerns about him, you would have told him and you agreed.

- That IM asked you why NP / the CM had taken these drastic measures to which you replied saying that possibly Gibraltar does not operate in a bubble and whatever occurs here affects Spain and Britain and possibly our reputation.

- That IM again stated that he had been airing his concerns to the AG and that he had been told by him that the CM was not too concerned that the incident had occurred outside BGTW. That the AG and CM would portray the incident in the context of cross border law enforcement which is one of the strands arising from the Brexit discussions.

- That IM told you that he felt pushed into a corner having to decide whether to save his own skin because he is a man of integrity and is getting trampled all over. That he felt he did not deserve this simply for the RGP doing its job in executing a warrant at the chambers of an individual suspected of having been involved in criminality. That IM asked you why this matter had not been spoken about at the meeting with NP / CM given the CM's dissatisfaction to which you replied that the subject had been spoken about. You alluded to NP seemingly being in the know because they spoke at the meeting about how IM had handled the case, also mentioning that the AG had also lost faith in IM. You said that as they were not talking to you about this, you had not taken down any notes. That IM told you of the significant importance of what you had just said because that was reference to Operation Delhi which was being discussed. That IM insisted that you tell him everything that was said by NP / CM about the alleged mis-handling of the investigation in question and that you said you would provide the details in writing but that NP / the CM had not provided you with written explanations of their concerns.

- On further insistence by IM you told him that the CM was very critical of IM's handling of the case because IM had basically lied to the CM, or omitted the truth. On IM asking you what it was alleged that he had lied about, whether it was to do with collision or the criminal investigation in question, you replied "in everything, in everything."

- That at 19:59Hrs on 22nd May 2020 you emailed IM a further letter about the invitation to retire with more explanations as to the reasons to invoke section 34. In this second letter, and even before IM provided the GPA with his representations you stated that the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by NP and the CM and had taken the view that IM's position as commissioner was untenable because IM had lost the confidence of BOTH NP and the CM.

- That on the 29th May 2020 we made legal representations to the GPA on IM's behalf explaining why the process initiated was misconceived.

- That on 5th June 2020, lawyers instructed by the GPA wrote to us acknowledging that procedural errors had been made in the process and that the GPA were withdrawing IM's invitation to retire.

- That in response to the GPA's lawyers' letter of 5th June, we wrote back asking what processes the GPA were now considering after their withdrawal of the section 34 process. That we received no response to this communication.

- That you provided a copy of the representations made by us on behalf of IM to NP, the CM and AG and that it was only after they digested these representations that they provided the GPA with their own written reasons as to why they claimed to have lost confidence in IM.

Dear Sir

Re: Inquiry into the Retirement of the Former Commissioner of Police

We draw your attention to Legal Notice No.34 of 2022 in the Second Supplement to the Gibraltar Gazette on 4 February 2022 (Attachment A), which gave notice that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar ('the Government') has commissioned an Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act 1888 ('the Inquiry').

Sir Peter Openshaw DL, a retired judge of the High Court of England and Wales, has been appointed as Commissioner for the purposes of the Inquiry. The Commissioner is appointed pursuant to section 3(1) of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, which states that:

> "The Government may, whenever he (sic.) shall deem it advisable so to do, issue a commission under his (sic.) hand and the public seal appointing one or more commissioners to inquire into any matter in which an inquiry would, in the opinion of the Government, be for the public welfare."

Stephen Catania of this firm has been instructed as Solicitor to the Inquiry, and will be principally assisted by Sunil Chandiramani and Jemma-Louise Emmerson also of this firm. Julian Santos of 5RB has been appointed as Counsel to the Inquiry.

Under the same Legal Notice, the Commissioner is appointed to inquire, as he shall in his absolute discretion consider appropriate, into:

> "the reasons and circumstances leading to Mr Ian McGrail ceasing to be Commissioner of Police in June 2020 by taking early retirement" ('the Terms of Reference').

The Commissioner is required to "ascertain the facts and report to the Government on" the Terms of Reference.

Pursuant to section 8 of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, the Inquiry may require by summons the attendance of any person whose evidence may be material to the subject matter of the

First Floor Suites, 39 Irish Town, P.O. Box 466, Gibraltar, Tel: +350 200 72150, Fax: +350 200 74986, Email: info@attlev.gi, www.attlaslevy.com

Inquiry, and/or to produce all such books, papers and writings as "may appear necessary for arriving at the truth of all matters".

We have now had the opportunity to review publicly available information on Mr McGrail's retirement, including:

(a) debates in the Gibraltar Parliament on 27 July and 31 July 2020 (Attachments B and C), during which the Chief Minister was asked several questions about Mr McGrail's retirement, including about the role of the Chief Minister, the former Governor and the Gibraltar Police Authority ('the GPA') in the events.

(b) media coverage of the events, including the public statement made by Mr McGrail on 28 July 2020.

We have also had regard to the relevant provisions of the Police Act 2006 ('the Police Act'), namely:

(a) Section 34(1), which provides that the GPA may call upon the Commissioner to retire "in the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of policing in Gibraltar", after consultation with the Governor and Chief Minister and with the agreement of either of them. Before seeking the approval of the Governor and Chief Minister, the GPA is required to give the Commissioner an opportunity to make representations: s34(2).

(b) Section 13(1)(f), which provides that the Governor may suspend the Commissioner from duty or call for his/her resignation where the GPA has failed to discharge or perform a responsibility imposed on it by the Police Act. By section 13(2), the Governor is required to keep the Chief Minister informed of any exercise of power under this section.

In light of the material above, we consider that you are an individual whose evidence is likely to be of central relevance and importance to the Inquiry, and are seeking evidence from you in the first instance.

We therefore request you to cooperate with the Inquiry by preparing and producing:

(a) A statement under oath addressing the subject-matter of the Inquiry: namely, your knowledge of the reasons and circumstances leading to Mr Ian McGrail ceasing to be Commissioner of Police in June 2020 by taking early retirement; and

(b) Any documents (including but not limited to electronic documents such as emails, word documents, PDFs and SMS, WhatsApp or other instant messages) in your possession or control relevant to the subject-matter of the Inquiry.

In requesting your cooperation, we draw your attention to sections 8(2) and 10 of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, which provide that:

(a) where a person attends before the Inquiry pursuant to a summons, they must answer questions put to them by the Commissioner and produce all books, papers and writings required by the summons. This is subject to the proviso that: "no statement by any person in answer to any question put by such commissioners shall, except in cases of indictment for perjury committed in such answers, be admissible in evidence in any proceeding civil or criminal." (Section 8(2))

(b) more generally, "No person who shall give evidence upon any inquiry under this Act shall be liable to any civil proceedings or criminal prosecution for or in respect of any statement or discovery made by such person concerning any matter connected with such inquiry, and no person shall be excused from answering any question put to him by the commissioners on the ground of any privilege, or on the ground that the answer to such question will tend to incriminate such person." (Section 10)

Please provide us with the requested statement and documents by 25 April 2022. We would be willing to consider reasonable requests for additional time, if so required.

Next steps

As a starting point, we are seeking evidence from individuals and bodies who had a statutory role in Mr McGrail's retirement through the provisions of the Police Act. However, depending on the accounts received from those individuals and bodies, we are likely to need to widen our investigation and seek evidence and/or documents from other individuals and bodies. We anticipate that we may need to seek further evidence or documents from you based on any information that we obtain.

In due course, the Inquiry will fix a date for a preliminary hearing at which procedural matters and planning for the substantive Inquiry hearing can be addressed. We will inform you of the details for this hearing as soon as they are arranged.

In the meantime, if you have any queries or concerns please do not hesitate to contact us.

Yours faithfully

Subject: OFFICIAL - CONFIDENTIAL Gibraltar Police Federation

Dear Darren –

Yesterday, I met with the CM to discuss the terms and conditions of the role of the two convenors of the Gibraltar Police Federation (GPF). The reason I met with him was because Michael Crome and Min Costa had mentioned that all negotiations for these posts had been personally dealt with by the CM. In this regard, the CM stated that he had only assisted in the forming up of the GPF but that the advice on remuneration and terms had been provided by Michael Crome and the two recently retired convenors themselves. It is the uncertainty of these arrangements that I would like to air out with you.

I would start by dispelling a common misconception held by many, both in RGP management and GPF, that the latter is a totally independent creature of statute. Yes, the GPF has been created in law (Police Act sec 49 & Police Federation Regulations 2018) but there is no reference to the GPF being independent from the RGP - the fact that the conveners continue to have and enjoy all the rights, powers, authorities, privileges and immunities of a constable [reg 5(3) of the Police Federation Regs 2018] clearly suggests that they fall under the governance and superintendence of the Commissioner of Police – there cannot be any interpretation other than this one. What the law does state, however, is that the GPF "shall be entirely independent of and unassociated with any body or person outside the Force" (sec 52(1) Police Act) – the spirit of this being to prevent the GPF from associating with trade unions and the likes. It is evident that this is where the misunderstanding has originated from. The unfortunate misconceived expectation of independence is probably the precursor to a wide range of issues, not least the negotiations that led to the [unwritten] terms and conditions of the two conveners.

You will find out that there is no binding agreement in place to explain what the terms and conditions of the convenors are or indeed the basis on which they were agreed upon, though I do have my theories. What I can say is that RGP management were not consulted at all on these – conditions which in the view of my Command Team and all inspecting ranks (& more) are totally unjustified and unfair. You will grasp the reasons for our dissenting views further along. The question of governance, management and administration of the two conveners is as blurred as it gets. It would be worthwhile understanding a proper regime of terms and conditions for audit purposes eg, who supervises that conveners' work their required hours? who approves their leave? can they be used as operational officers? who manages any time in lieu? who authorises this ? who keeps an eye on what we suspect are extravagant travel arrangements? etc

In my efforts to reel in and educate the expectations of the GPF I feel duty bound to argue that there is sound rationale for a full review of the terms and conditions of the conveners. My argument is evidence based and whilst the CM saw much logic in them he felt the need to step back and leave these to your adjudication. I feel it is only proper that the CM adopts this stance and therefore I will articulate my argument for your subsequent perusal and consideration. His views though were that whilst the previous two conveners did enjoy the very enhanced perks, these could be attributable to the effort required to establish the GPF but that not necessarily did these conditions have to prevail, more so if there was argument to suggest the contrary.

The two recently appointed conveners, PS Maurice Morello and PC Leif Simpson, are lobbying at HRD for the same terms and conditions their predecessors enjoyed. These were as follows;

- The conveners pay to be set to the equivalent of a chief Inspector (3 spine points starting from £72K to £75K & pensionable if retirement occurs whilst they are in post).
- Entitlement of the high competency threshold allowance of £[redacted] per year pertinent to their current junior rank but also climbing the spine points of the Chief Inspector scale.
- On call allowance of approx. £[redacted] each per year.
- Entitlement of 'Time in Lieu' for any extra hours worked.

The final salary for the convenors will reach the £[redacted] when housing allowance of £[redacted]pa is also factored in.

These conditions far supersede those for inspector and chief inspector ranks. For starters, an inspector and chief inspector's role carries far more responsibilities than that of the conveners. An officer promoted to inspector or chief inspector would have to prove high levels of competency a year after reaching the 3rd spine point before they are entitled to the pensionable threshold allowance - the convenors do not have this qualifying period. Inspectors and chief Inspectors are salaried and therefore are not entitled to accrue time in lieu, yet the conveners are allowed to do so. These points bring about discontent and affect the morale of inspectors and chief inspectors who understandably feel very hard done by. The on-call criteria applied by the GPF contravenes RGP policy in that their application of the requirement is not seen as justified in our view.

The GPF's case for this inordinate level of remuneration is based on a comparison/alignment with the UK's National Police Federation Chairman who represents 120,000 police officers in England and Wales. Can you imagine if I used the same analogy and requested the same salary as the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police = £276k+ !!! It would be totally absurd to draw comparisons with UK national portfolios. Our research on the matter suggests that even the smallest of county forces, the likes of Cambridge and Warwickshire, who themselves are 8-10 times larger than the RGP, do enjoy having a force federation chair/secretary earning the salary pertinent to their rank with a non-pensionable allowance of approx. £225 to compensate for extra responsibilities assumed. In fact each of the 43 UK county forces all have different configurational full time representation of the Fed but for obvious reasons none align themselves to the UK National Board in terms of remuneration and working arrangements. The latter have 8 principal officers employed as full time office bearers who look after the whole of England and Wales piece. They are in turn supported by a further 22 pax who form the National Council which is representative of 8 joint regional branch boards of the 43 county/metropolitan forces https://www.polfed.org/about-us/structure/structure-of-the-federation/ & https://www.polfed.org/about-us/structure/principal-officers/ Smaller forces more akin to ourselves like Guernsey, Jersey and Isle of Man do not remunerate their federation reps in this way and neither do they have full time conveners. The attached briefing paper explains the UK set-up in some detail. I really struggle to understand how the GPF can claim any similarity with the UK Fed's structure and conditions, it is simply ludicrous.

We recently brought in consultants to help contextualise the very damning federation survey results and they were themselves startled at how over-resourced and over-funded the GPF were, expressing the view that the workload the conveners were facing was not overbearing in the slightest. Amongst the consultants was a retired UK Police National Fed Chairwoman who echoed our views on the unjustified remuneration. They did not report on these views to avoid antagonising the GPF as their reemit was to actually build bridges with them rather can create animosity. The consultants are, however, ready to engage with HMGOG to impart they views should you feel the need for this. What I submit as totally disproportionate and unfair is that the GPF conveners who represent 219 officers are expecting to be treated the same as the UK National Board Chair who represents 120,000 officers.

To address this lack of justification I propose the following 3 options which takes into consideration cost efficiencies where these can be made;

Option 1 – the two conveners to remain as full time appointees with their remuneration set commensurate with the rank they hold. That they receive a monthly honorarium of £[redacted] for PC Simpson and £[redacted] for PS Morello. Based on current pay scales an initial cost saving of approx £38k would be made in year one, this increasing to approximately £44K per annum by year three and increasing with the public sector increases for consecutive years.

Option 2 – Only one of the conveners remains full time in the role with salary commensurate to existing rank plus monthly honorarium; the other convener returns to main stream policing with 1 day 'facility' time for Fed work per week, retaining existing rank salary plus honorarium. There would be a requirement to employ an admin assistant to provide office support to the GPF. However, there would no longer be a requirement to have the two supernumerary posts we currently carry and therefore a constable post would be deducted from the HR business case submitted to HMGoG. Savings of £88k rising to £94k per annum after year three and for consecutive years would be made in this regard. The cost of an AA would need to be factored @ £26k so a net saving of approx. £68k per year would be made for successive years.

Option 3 - Both conveners revert to main stream policing and retain their salary according to their rank plus an honorarium and 1 day each of 'facility' time per week for Fed matters. The need for the existing two supernumerary posts would no longer be required and therefore two constable posts from the HR business case would no longer be required thus making savings of £100k for these two posts plus the no longer entitled Ch Inspector top-up of between £38k and £44k per annum. Total savings per year after three years (applying current scales) would be approx £144k per annum for successive years. It would be appropriate to assign an admin grade as office manager at the cost of £26K. Further facility time could be agreed upon by mutual understanding.

NB - Options 2 and 3 would require amendment to the extant regulations but the CM did allude to these changes, if applicable, once the accepted proposal was signed. Amending regulations is not too an elaborate process.

Our preferred options would work in reverse order i.e. 3-2-1

Happy to explain the mathematics in finer detail &/or further discuss the above contents if so required.

Best wishes
Ian

Dear Chairman,

RE – GIBRALTAR POLICE FEDERATION

In light of recent developments and particularly the involvement of the trade unions regarding our ongoing difficulties with the Chair and Secretary of the Gibraltar Police Federation, I feel it is imperative that I set out the official position of the Royal Gibraltar Police, and the reasoning behind it.

The Commissioner of Police and the command team recognise the importance and value of the RGP having a body like the Gibraltar Police Federation to represent the interests of members and address issues concerning officers' pay, allowances, hours of duty, annual leave, working conditions and other conditions of service. We are keen for the Federation to pursue a policing environment where officers can speak and raise concerns through an open and accountable system that demonstrates fairness, by means of a transparent conduct which is independent of other union organisations.

To provide some historical context, police officers have been banned from striking in UK since 1919 and do not have the same employment prerogatives enjoyed by other workers because of the nature of the work we do on behalf of the public. Following a spate of strikes in London and Liverpool when constables and sergeants refused to go on duty, it was the then Prime Minister Lloyd George who established the Federation, not as a union but as a statutory grouping with responsibility to represent its members in matters affecting their welfare and efficiency.

It is clearly stated in the 2014 Normington Report, an independent review into the workings of the Police Federation of England and Wales commissioned by the latter, that its members remain under the discipline of and answerable to their respective Chief Constables. Page 27 of the report states: "(Federation) Representatives are employees of their local force and subject to force discipline. They can be subject to IPCC investigations and indeed to criminal prosecution."

In terms of the local context, to remove some of the elected Federation members from the RGPs discipline structure, would endanger the operational independence of the police and risk giving life to all issues for which police officers are prevented from taking industrial action. A GPF board of eight serving officers, where two are temporarily removed from discipline leads to an inequality of how justice would be served and seen to be served. The board could decide to embark on a course of action which could place six of them within reach of a disciplinary process and two without, meaning six would be liable for conduct amounting to an offence in law and the other two would be impervious to legal process.

This raises numerous concerns:

1. Different disciplinary mechanisms and to different standards for essentially the same behaviour.
2. Conduct or behaviour contrary to discipline and incompatible with the office of constables, could occur during the 'disciplinary hiatus' which could undermine the ability to continue to exercise the office of constable on returning to operational duties.
3. A situation could occur where support could be sought from organisations such as trade unions which are able to strike, bringing indirect pressure on the Office of Commissioner, therefore undermining operational independence etc.
4. The situation in point 3 is precisely why there is a statutory provision in the Police Act requiring the Federation to be independent from any similar body without specific authority, and preventing officers from trade union membership. S52 and S55 of the Act.

Furthermore the intent of Section 79 of the Police Act, is that it is the Commissioner who retains responsibility for matters of discipline.

Since the Gibraltar Police Federation was created with the introduction of the Police Federation Regulations 2018, its Chairman and Secretary have erroneously interpreted the nature of the GPF, claiming that they are a completely independent institution which does not come under the control of the Commissioner of Police. There are no legal provisions to support this stance with the contrary actually being the case as stated in s.52(1) of the Police Act 2006; "…..the Police Federation shall be entirely independent of and unassociated with any body or person outside the Force." Furthermore, Reg5(3) of the Police Federation Regulations 2018 states that "the chairman and secretary of the Board shall be full time convenors of the Federation and shall continue to have and enjoy all the rights, powers, authorities, privileges and immunities of a constable."

This means that these two post holders remain warranted officers of the RGP – first and foremost they are police officers, and their second function is to represent members of the GPF. All police officers have to abide by the code of ethics & values, and Discipline Code including the two mentioned posts.

Section 5 (1) of the Police Federation 2018 Regulations, further reinforces that the Chairman and Secretary of the Federation remain as police officers during their tenure.

The correlation drawn by the trade unions describing the GPF conveners as engaged in "activism," is incompatible in terms of law enforcement or the traditional British model of policing and its principles which the RGP has applied for the past 190 years.

We would like to reiterate that it is desirable that a good and productive relationship exists with the GPF toward the realisation of common objectives. In concluding the Command Team are seriously and genuinely concerned at the unfolding situation, and how this can gather further momentum in a direction which can potentially change established principles underpinning Gibraltar's policing model. Changes which could totally compromise the RGPs operational independence.

Notwithstanding, I remain willing to hold discussions with the Gibraltar Police Authority to clarify key areas concerning the Federation.

1. The GPF's status of perceived independence
2. The terms of reference/facility arrangements for convenors
3. Their respective position with regard to the office of constable.

I remain hopeful that this whole saga will be resolved in accordance with the principles expounded in this letter.

Dear Mr Chairman,

RE- Gibraltar Police Federation

I refer to my letter of the 5th February concerning the above captioned and our subsequent discussions with the GPA members.

Firstly, I would like thank you for allowing me the opportunity to answer and/or address any issues the GPA had on the subject matter. Secondly, it is important that I clarify the intention of the letter was certainly not to suggest a curtailment of the prerogative of HMGOG to create new legislation or amend existing ones on matters of the Gibraltar Police Federation (GPF) but rather to inform you of concerns if indeed any changes were being contemplated as intimated in the letter.

As discussed at yesterday's meeting with the GPA, I propose a course of action which will hopefully draw the line under the past two years of what has been a difficult working relationship between the GPF and RGP senior management – all borne out from conflicting standpoints. I am strongly of the opinion that an independent review of the functions of the GPF and their relationship with the RGP is an appropriate vehicle to address the issues concerned. I am glad that the GPA support this approach as indeed HE the Governor and the Chief Minister.

I will be meeting with the full GPF Board to advise them of these intentions and hopefully enlist their support. I would ask that we meet at a mutually convenient time/date for the GPA, GPF and RGP to discuss the terms of reference for this review and intricacies of who is best placed to conduct it. My first thoughts are that the review team should be subject matter experts in policing, preferably serving officers (a Police Federation of England & Wales chairperson of a UK police force and an officer of chief officer rank, ACC or above, who is well acquainted with federation/management matters, protocols, arrangements etc). I mention these two categories of personalities because they will no doubt have mediatory abilities to assist us all in this journey. To keep the review impartial I further recommend that these individuals should not have had any previous relationship with either RGP senior management or GPF Board members and a declaration should be made to this effect.

I look forward to this process commencing the sooner the better.

Yours,

The GPA met with the Federation (GPF) on 6th June 2020.

Present at the meeting were:

Joey Britto (Ch)
Nick Pyle
Darren Grech
Claire Pizarello
Edgar Lavarello
Frank Carreras

Morris Morello (Ch GPF)
Leif Simpson (GPF)

E. Hanglin (Sec)

The GPF gave an overview of when the GPF started and their past relationships with previous Commissioners of Police.

The GPF stated that they did not want to force a UK model in Gibraltar and gave their views as to why the present Acting CoP should be selected as the new CoP as opposed to bringing an officer from the UK. Please refer to letter below from the Federation.

Dear Joey,

I trust that you are well.

I thought I should give you an update as to the present relationship between the interim Commissioner and the Gibraltar Police Federation.

Last week after the resignation of Mr McGrail, Federation convenors have met up on two occasions with Mr Ullger. One was a meeting we had scheduled with him and the second was a meeting we had scheduled with the Commissioner with regards to some pending issues, which Mr Ullger sat in as interim Commissioner.

In those meetings, it was mooted that there was a possibility of a Commissioner from the UK to take over for a short period of time.

It is no secret that we have had numerous issues with Mr McGrail due to his management style and the lack of respect which he demonstrated towards the Gibraltar Police Federation, and especially towards the Secretary, Leif Simpson and myself as Chairman. As a result, the relationship between Command and the Federation was strained at best, over these last two years.

Everything we proposed in the last year was thrown back at us with little or no consideration, so we had to revert to legal advice on several issues we were requesting to be looked into by Command.

I have known Mr Ullger for a very long time, and have worked under him on Shift and in Special Branch. Having worked with Mr Ullger for over 20 years I can assure you that his management style is completely different to that of Mr McGrail.

He is always fair, and more assertive when this is required, but he always treats people with the utmost respect.

And this is exactly what the officers are calling out for. They want to be treated with respect as individuals, not treated as numbers, and for their work to go recognised.

We have achieved more in two meetings with Mr Ullger in a week than we did in a whole year with Mr McGrail. This is not about management giving in to Federation demands, or requests, but a real willingness to work alongside the Federation for the benefit of the officers. There will be occasions where Federation requests will not be taken on board, but I can accept this, when a reasonable explanation is given.

During April and May this year, we have worked tirelessly together on the revamped Grievance Policy and Procedures and the Bullying at Work Policy, where we went through both policies line by line. Mr Ullger agreed to numerous suggestions the Federation had in respect of both policies, and these were included, some of which are still on the draft version of HMGoG's revised Bullying at Work Policy, and still not approved.

I do not believe that bringing over a Commissioner from the UK for a short period of time is the answer. He may bring some fresh ideas, but policing in Gibraltar is not the same as in the UK. Federation reps carry out their training at Leatherhead in the UK and I can assure you that we do not want to operate like a UK force. What may work in the UK may not necessarily work in Gibraltar. Any good policies and procedures they may have could be implemented but always tweaking this to suit our policing.

It would also be difficult for someone coming over from the UK to understand the people, the culture and the way we operate in a short period of time. The organisation requires an understanding, empathetic Commissioner at the helm, with local knowledge and understanding. I believe we have the right officer for this role in our ranks.

Happy to discuss this further.

For the attention of Mr James J Neish QC

Dear Sirs

Re: Inquiry into the Retirement of the Former Commissioner of Police ("the Inquiry") – John Gonçalves MBE, former Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority

We draw your attention to Legal Notice No.34 of 2022 in the Second Supplement to the Gibraltar Gazette on 4 February 2022 ('Attachment A'), which gave notice that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar ('the Government') has commissioned an Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act 1888 ('the Inquiry').

Sir Peter Openshaw DL, a retired judge of the High Court of England and Wales, has been appointed as Commissioner for the purposes of the Inquiry. The Commissioner is appointed pursuant to section 3(1) of the Commissions of Inquiry Act ('the Act'), which states that:

> "The Government may, whenever he (sic.) shall deem it advisable so to do, issue a commission under his (sic.) hand and the public seal appointing one or more commissioners to inquire into any matter in which an inquiry would, in the opinion of the Government, be for the public welfare."

Stephen V. Catania of this firm has been instructed as Solicitor to the Inquiry, and will be principally assisted by Sunil G. Chandiramani and Jemma-Louise Emmerson also of this firm. Julian Santos of 5RB has been appointed as Counsel to the Inquiry.

Under the same Legal Notice, the Commissioner is appointed to inquire, as he shall in his absolute discretion consider appropriate, into:

First Floor Suites, 39 Irish Town, P.O. Box 466, Gibraltar, Tel: +350 200 72150, Fax: +350 200 74986, Email: info@attlev.gi, www.attiaslevy.com

"the reasons and circumstances leading to Mr Ian McGrail ceasing to be Commissioner of Police in June 2020 by taking early retirement" ('the Terms of Reference').

The Commissioner is required to "ascertain the facts and report to the Government on" the Terms of Reference.

Pursuant to section 8 of the Act, the Inquiry may require by summons the attendance of any person whose evidence may be material to the subject matter of the Inquiry, and/or to produce all such books, papers and writings as "may appear necessary for arriving at the truth of all matters".

Background: Evidence Gathering and First Preliminary Hearing

In April 2022, we sought evidence from individuals and bodies who had a statutory role in Mr McGrail's retirement through the provisions of the Police Act 2006. We have now received accounts from those individuals and bodies. Further requests for information have been made since and those accounts have been received.

On 22 June 2022, the first preliminary hearing for the Inquiry was held at the Garrison Library ('the First Preliminary Hearing'). The primary purpose of the First Preliminary Hearing was to attend to procedural and administrative matters in respect of the Inquiry in preparation for the main hearing. A transcript of the First Preliminary Hearing is available on the Inquiry website.[1]

We are continuing to widen our investigation for the Inquiry; seeking evidence and/or documents from other individuals and bodies whose evidence in the judgment of the Commissioner may be material to the subject matter of the Inquiry, in accordance with section 8 of the Act.

Request for Information and Evidence

We therefore request you to cooperate with the Inquiry by preparing and producing:

1. A statement under oath addressing the subject matter of the Inquiry (as identified in the Terms of Reference), and particularly your knowledge of the reasons and circumstances leading to Mr Ian McGrail ceasing to be Commissioner of Police in June 2020 by taking early retirement, including addressing the following specific matters, to the extent that they are within your knowledge:

    (a) The RGP's actions on 8 February 2017 in obstructing an aircraft at Gibraltar airport to remove an employee of the UK Ministry of Defence who was under arrest by the UK Service Police and on 1 March 2017 in arresting three senior Ministry of Defence members of staff and seizing

[1] http://coircomp.gi/#documents and removing personnel equipment from HM Naval Base and an officer's home (collectively called the 'Airport Incident');

(b) The RGP's investigation into an assault on a helicopter pilot and crew member in Gibraltar in March 2017; and

(c) Explain the process behind Mr McGrail's appointment as Commissioner of Police and whether, at the time, any objections to the said appointment were made by the Chief Minister and/or the Governor and/or the Interim Governor, Nick Pyle or anyone else.

(d) Following Mr McGrail's appointment as Commissioner of Police, were any formal complaints made by or to you in respect of the efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity, or independence of Mr McGrail in the undertaking of his duties as Commissioner of Police?

(e) During Mr McGrail's tenure as Commissioner of Police, until Dr Britto took over from you as Chairman of the GPA on 1 June 2018, were you aware of any allegations or complaints made in respect of bully and/or intimidation by Mr McGrail?

2. Did you attend any meetings in respect of 1(a) – (e) above with Mr McGrail and/or any of the following persons:

1. Fabian Picardo QC MP, the Chief Minister ('the Chief Minister')
2. Albert Mena, Financial Secretary
3. Neil Costa, former Minister for Justice
4. Dr Joseph Garcia, Deputy Chief Minister
5. Darren Grech, Chief Secretary
6. Michael Llamas QC, Attorney General ('the Attorney General')
7. Christian Rocca QC, Director of Public Prosecutions ('the DPP')
8. Nicholas Pyle, Deputy Governor ('Mr Pyle')
9. Lt. General Ed Davis, former Governor of Gibraltar
10. The Magistrates' Court (either the Clerk or Deputy Clerk to the Magistrates' Court, the Stipendiary Magistrate or the Justices of the Peace)
11. Lloyd DeVincenzi, Solicitor General
12. Dr Joseph Britto, incumbent Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Authority, or any member of the Gibraltar Police Authority
13. Edward Yome, former Commissioner of Police
14. Deputy Commissioner Richard Mifsud
15. Richard Ullger, incumbent Commissioner of Police

16. Maurice Morello, Chairman of the Gibraltar Police Federation, or any other member of the Gibraltar Police Federation
17. Paul Richardson, former Superintendent
18. Superintendent Mark Wyan (formerly Detective Inspector)

3. Were meeting minutes or file notes made by you and/or other attendees during any of the meetings or shortly thereafter? If so, were these circulated? Please provide copies of the same.

It should be noted that the questions above are non-exhaustive and we may consider further follow-up questions if necessary based on the responses and any other material that we may receive from other sources in due course.

Please provide any relevant documents and correspondence held by you in relation to the matters listed above. Any documents (including but not limited to electronic documents such as emails, word documents, PDFs and SMS, WhatsApp or other instant messages) in your possession or control relevant to the subject matter of the Inquiry and the matters referred to in the above paragraphs. All electronic documents are to be provided in their native format with the original metadata preserved.

In requesting your cooperation, we draw your attention to sections 8(2) and 10 of the Act, which provide that:

(a) where a person attends before the Inquiry pursuant to a summons, they must answer questions put to them by the Commissioner and produce all books, papers and writings required by the summons. This is subject to the proviso that: "no statement by any person in answer to any question put by such commissioners shall, except in cases of indictment for perjury committed in such answers, be admissible in evidence in any proceeding civil or criminal." (Section 8(2))

(b) more generally, "No person who shall give evidence upon any inquiry under this Act shall be liable to any civil proceedings or criminal prosecution for or in respect of any statement or discovery made by such person concerning any matter connected with such inquiry, and no person shall be excused from answering any question put to him by the commissioners on the ground of any privilege, or on the ground that the answer to such question will tend to incriminate such person." (Section 10)

Please provide us with the requested statement and documents by 7 September 2022. We would be willing to consider reasonable requests for additional time, if so required.

Next steps

As stated above, the First Preliminary Hearing for the Inquiry took place on 22 June 2022. It is anticipated that a second preliminary hearing will take place between 19–20 September 2022, commencing at 10am in the Garrison Library ('the Second Preliminary Hearing').

A draft agenda for the Second Preliminary Hearing has been published on the Inquiry website.[2] As you will see, the said draft agenda includes the finalisation of the provisional list of issues in preparation for main hearing, which is due to take place in March 2023.

It is therefore imperative that we receive your statement under oath and evidence before the deadline referred to above in order that we can, amongst other things, compile the provisional list of issues in good time prior to the Second Preliminary Hearing.

In the meantime, if you have any queries or concerns please do not hesitate to contact us.

Yours faithfully

Attias & Levy .

RETIREMENT OF THE FORMER COMMISSIONER OF POLICE

ISSUE OF COMMISSION

LN.2022/034

WHEREAS the Government has committed to issue a commission for an Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act into the matters more particularly detailed below;

AND WHEREAS the Government has requested that His Excellency the Governor, Vice Admiral Sir David Steel KBE, DL, identify a retired High Court Judge of the jurisdiction of England & Wales to carry out such an Inquiry;

AND WHEREAS His Excellency the Governor has, with his consent, identified Sir Charles Peter Lawford Openshaw, DL, formerly a judge of the High Court of England and Wales, Queen's Bench Division;

THE GOVERNMENT NOW HEREBY, in exercise of the powers conferred on it by Section 3 of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, appoints the aforesaid Sir Charles Peter Lawford Openshaw, DL, as Commissioner to inquire, as he shall in his absolute discretion consider appropriate, into the reasons and circumstances leading to Mr Ian McGrail ceasing to be Commissioner of Police in June 2020 by taking early retirement.

The Commissioner is to ascertain the facts and report to the Government on the above matters.

Save as the Commissioner may in his discretion determine, the Inquiry is to be held in public at a venue, and to commence on a date, to be specified by the Government by notice in the Gazette.

Dated: 4th February 2022.

VICE ADMIRAL SIR DAVID STEEL KBE, DL,
Governor,
For the Government,
At the request of the Chief Minister.

MINUTES OF MEETING OF THE GIBRALTAR POLICE AUTHORITY HELD ON FRIDAY 11th May 2017 at 09:15 a.m.

Present:	Mr John Goncalves (Ch) Mr Albert Danino (AD) Mrs Naomi Hassan Weisfogel (NHW) Mr Stephen Reyes (SR) Mr Nick Pyle (NP) Mr Aurelio Falero	Chairman
In attendance:	Ms E. Hanglin (Sec)	Secretary
Apologies:	Mr Vikram Nagrani Mr Ernest Gomez Mr Edgar Lavarello Rev Fidelio Patron

Item	Discussion and Decisions	Action
1. Item 1 –Approval of minutes of the meeting of 23rd January 2017.	The minutes of the meeting held on 23rd January 2017 were approved.
2. Item 2 - Matters arising from the minutes of meeting of the 23rd January 2017	Policing Plan / Annual Report The Ch informed the meeting that he had raised the matter of changing the annual plan to a 3 year strategy with the MfJ at their meeting. At the meeting it was agreed that the matter would be taken up with the new Commissioner in the run up to his taking office. The 3 year strategy would then be implemented as from 1st April 2018. Selection Weekend The Ch informed the meeting that the RGP had disagreed with Fidel's concerns that one of the candidates at the selection weekend was not selected due to his age. The RGP provided evidence that this was not the case and indicated that they had taken up police men who were older in the past. Community Engagement The Ch informed the meeting that one of the scheduled days to distribute surveys at the piazza had been cancelled due to the bad weather. Appointment of PC Chiara and PC Cruz The GPA was not in agreement with the CoP overruling the recommendation of the reporting officer to extend PC Cruz period of probation. The matter was brought up with the CoP who stated that the recommendation to extend his probation was due to the fact that PC Cruz was deemed to be a little too timid and not forceful enough, albeit shortly after, PC Cruz was commended by the CoP for assisting one of his officers whilst he himself was off duty in an event. Annual report The Ch informed the meeting that Chief Supt. Mifsud had claimed that the figures in the last annual report were not up to date and would be updated in November. The Ch informed Chief Supt. Mifsud that an update in November would not be a realistic interpretation of the RGP's yearly performance considering the Annual report is upto the end of June. Ch Supt. Mifsud agreed. PS Ruffle The Ch informed the meeting that he had not yet received a reply from the CoP to his letter of 21st November 2016. The Ch agreed to write to the CoP and prod him for a reply.

3. Item – Sub-committees' Reports.	a. Policing Plan/Annual Report This item was discussed under matters arising. b. Police Complaints Board. AD informed the meeting that Mr Joe Garcia's and Mr Julio Alcantara's (PCB members) term of office expired on the 16th April this year and asked to extend it until September 2017 in order to have time to find a replacement. The Ch asked AD for a list of names to be discussed at the next meeting of the Authority. The GPA agreed that the nominees should be consulted first. Report for PCB: "Since 1st January 2017, the PCB has received three complaints which have been fully investigated. Complaint 1/17 (Abuse of Authority) was found to be unsubstantiated and not sustained. Complaint 2/17(Discreditable Behaviour) had one of its 9 strands substantiated. The complainant in this case is requesting that the GPA reviews the PCB's ruling of the other 8 strands under section 15(3) of Police Complaints Regulations 2008. Complaint 3/17 (Neglect of Duty) was found to be unsubstantiated and, therefore, not sustained. A further complaint was classified as sub-judicial and, therefore, not considered for investigation at the time it was presented to the Board. This complainant in this case may represent his complaint to the Board after its judicial process is finalised. There are currently three potential complaints under consideration for investigation; two for Discreditable Behaviour and the third for Abuse of Authority. In two of these the complainants cannot so far identify the police officers in question. The PSD is helping the PCB with its enquiries."	AD

	c. Community Engagement The Secretary informed the meeting that a total of 729 survey responses had been received. The Sec would forward the responses database to FP and SR. d. Financial Control SR had circulated the reports prior to the meeting. With regards to the GPA budget, there was an £800 surplus. Although the surplus was due to £1000 bill which was held back by treasury the year before in order to prevent the GPA from going over budget. The budget is in a deficit due to travel costs from HMIC which wasn't budgeted for from the outset. With regard to RGP expenditure, they have ended up with a surplus of £250,000 due to not spending as much on overtime. The Ch expressed his gratitude to SR for his service these past 9 years. e. HR/Training/Professional Standards. There was nothing to report on this matter. f. Legislation/GPA Procedures VN circulated via email an update on the Police Misconduct Regulations. "It appears that the RGP will be making proposals to the law draftsman by the end of the month. I will keep you informed of any updates received from Superintendent McGrail as soon as these are received".	Sec
5. Item 5 – Any other business.	Airfield Incident The Ch informed the meeting that on Tuesday 9th May, he was asked to meet with the CM. The CM requested that the GPA enquire into the Airfield incident on 7th February 2017. The Ch had informed the CM that the Authority did not have any jurisdiction to deal with third parties. The CM asked the Ch to raise the matter with the Authority and that if the decision was made for an enquiry, funds would be made available for an independent legal advisor.

	The Ch pointed out that he had informed VN of the matter who said that the Authority is responsible for upholding the efficiency, effectiveness and probity of the RGP and on the probity side, the Authority may be able to ensure that the RGP action was appropriate and thus may have an enquiry on that before investigation. The GPA agreed that a separate meeting should be called to discuss the matter exclusively. Once the matter is discussed, the Authority can then look into the actions of the RGP. The Authority agreed to ask the CoP whether the investigation into the alleged offences by the serviceman, which had led to the incident, has finished, and if it has, request for the file on the investigation and interview the officers who were directly involved in the incident. This will allow the GPA to formulate a conclusion and pass it on to the CM and HE.	Ch
6. Item 5 – Confirmation of next meeting.	Date to be confirmed.	Sec

MINUTES OF MEETING OF THE GIBRALTAR POLICE AUTHORITY HELD ON MONDAY 15TH May at 09:15am.

Present:	Mr John Goncalves (Ch) Rev Fidelio Patron (FP) Mr Albert Danino (AD) Mr Ernest Gomez (EG) Mrs Naomi Hassan Weisfogel (NHW) Mr Stephen Reyes (SR) Mr Nick Pyle (NP) Mr Vikram Nagrani (VN) Mr Aurelio Falero (AF)	Chairman
In attendance:	Ms M. Hook (Sec)	Secretary
Apologies:	Mr Edgar Lavarello

The meeting was called to discuss the CM's verbal request to the Chairman on 9th May 2017 that the GPA enquire into the Airfield incident on 7th February 2017.

VN referred to:-

- s.13 of the Police Act, where HE may request on instinct the GPA to provide a report to him, and also to initiate an enquiry;
- s.14 of the Police Act, where HMGOG may ask the GPA to provide a report on Police matters, and also to carry out a full-blown enquiry on the RGP;
- s.19 of the Police Act, when the GPA may ask the CoP for any information to assist preparation of a report.

NP reported on a conversation held with HE, when the latter envisaged that the GPA recommend that an independent enquiry will be held.

The matter was discussed at length and it was concluded that a formal letter be sent to CM stating that, in the first instance, since the GPA has no jurisdiction to involve the MOD, it proposes to proceed under the provisions of s.19 of the Police Act in order to submit a report to him.

Dear Fabian,

RE: AIRFIELD INCIDENT

I refer to our meeting in your office on Tuesday 9th May.

Your request that the GPA (the Authority) enquire into the incident at Gibraltar Airport on 7th February 2017 was conveyed to the members of the Authority at meetings held on 11th and 15th May.

The Authority is of the view, in the first instance, that, since it has no jurisdiction to involve the MOD in an enquiry, it shall proceed to request the Commissioner of Police to provide all relevant information (pursuant to the provisions of s.19 of the Police Act) which may assist in the preparation of a report to be submitted to you (pursuant to the provisions of s.15 of the Police Act).

Once this is done, you may wish to consider the possibility of a full enquiry, commissioned by the Authority.

Sincerely,

Dear John,

Re: Waterson Investigation

Further if our conversation in relation to the events leading to the incident of the 7th February 2017, I will have a package ready, which will show how this incident unfolded and the decisions taken on the day and the actions thereafter.

I would appreciate a letter from the Authority I believe under Section 5 requesting this preliminary report in order to maintain an audit trail if any subsequent Enquiry is held.

Many thanks

RE: Waterson Enquiry - Incident

Please find attached 3 documents which hopefully will put into context the investigation of RAF Sergeant Waterson and the sequence of events leading up to and including the blocking of the RAF flight on the 8th February 2017.

Document 1: Report submitted by Supt McGrail of the sequence of events as there were known at the time with a covering letter from me.

Document 2: Legal opinions commissioned by the Attorney General from Lord Pannick QC from Blackstones Chambers, Temple, London.

Document 3: Letter from Rear Admiral A J Radakin, Chief of Staff, Joint Forces Command in no uncertain terms a letter of apology and recognition of jurisdiction.

There are numerous other documents and correspondence between relevant stakeholders which can be made available should a decision be taken to progress this matter by way of a formal enquiry.

There is also material, intelligence and information which came to our notice as we conducted this investigation where senior military officials challenged the authority of constitutional posts in Gibraltar and then some off the cuff comments which were inappropriate to say the least.

My SMT and I are willing to go before the authority should you require any further information.

RE: RAF Sergeant WATTERSON

13th February 2017

Dear Sirs

Please see attached report submitted by Superintendent McGrail in relation to RAF Sergeant WATTERSON.

This clearly was a sad disappointing day for Law Enforcement in Gibraltar and more so for relations between Gibraltar Forces Command and the RGP.

I do not wish to repeat what is already contained in this report which is quite detailed, but just to echo some of the points which I personally dealt with.

From the outset I wanted a pragmatic and sensible approach notwithstanding I had firm footing on jurisdiction and Gibraltar law. I even went as far as involving the AGs chambers at an early stage to provide legal advice by asking Ricky Rhoda to personally speak to GFC but again to no avail.

To me this was a complete disregard and lack of respect to our Attorney General.

Add insult to injury the matter deteriorated very rapidly when clearly senior MOD officers were being deceitful and evasive to the point that we had no alternative but to obtain a Chief Justice's warrant to make these officials see the gravity of the situation and see sense.

Armed with this warrant I informed the Chief of Staff and later Commander British Forces that I was being pushed against the wall to a place that I would not rather be, and as the last resort, we would now be in a position to execute this warrant on another Law Enforcement body (RNPM) something which I was very reluctant to do. I believe I showed great restraint in holding back from doing this.

A conversation with Commander Jack Hawkins (Chief of RNP- UK) then revealed and confirmed that the evidence was on the aircraft and I then instructed for this aircraft to be held back from departing. CBF then saw sense in de-escalating everything and I believe instructed for the aircraft to return to the stand and for Watterson and the evidence to be disembarked. I was then given his reassurance that the computer devices would be handed over to the RGP. After this was done I allowed for the aircraft to depart.

Even then I proposed that we should join up in taking this forward and for the RNPM officers to assist in the retrieval of evidence and to assist with the Forensics. Finally they acceded and we are now working together.

INVESTORS IN PEOPLE | Gold

As I said it was a disappointing day and not one to gloat about but clearly we must not find ourselves in such circumstances ever again why I have proposed a meeting on the 22nd February of all stakeholders. The Attorney General has welcomed such a meeting which he will chair at his offices at No.6.

I strongly believe that MOD senior officials did not behave appropriately and had they used some practical common sense, we could have averted this situation. More worryingly they showed lack of respect by challenging the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Police both Constitutional posts.

I am willing to discuss this further should you so wish.

Kind regards

OFFICIAL SENSITIVE

10th February 2017

Commissioner of Police;

Sir,

RE:- Investigation in to RAF Sgt WATTERSON

This report provides COP with the chronological sequence of events as I have them and with as much a detailed account as I know it to be regarding the above captioned matter. Enquiries are continuing to elicit further information with regards to both the investigation in to Sgt WATTERSON and to the issues that arose once the RGP took an interest in the matter. I would therefore ask you to understand that this paper may not contain all the answers to questions you may have after absorbing the contents herein. On occasions during this report I have also commented on my prima facie observations on matters arising, obviously from a professional local application.

In the early hours of 4th February 2017, an email was received at RGP Command & Despatch from colleagues in the GDP advising that the JPSU had the previous day (3rd Feb 2017) effected the arrest of a serviceman, Sgt WATTERSON, in Gibraltar, on suspicion that this man was in possession of indecent imagery of children. His residence at [redacted] had been searched by JPSU and computers and data storage devices had been seized. That Sgt WATTERSON had since been released from his arrest and had undergone a [redacted] which determined that he was at [redacted]. At that point no further details were available to the GDP.[1]

This information was forwarded by CAD to our Public Protection Unit for their information. Coincidentally, Det/Insp Enriles, o.i.c of the PPU, happened to be the RGP duty officer that morning and on reading the communication sought further details from GDP Sgt Hosken who unfortunately was unable to help any further as they [the GDP] had no additional information to share.

Consequently, Det/Insp Enriles contacted the JPSU Master-at-Arms Claire BELL who informed of the following; that Timothy WATTERSON moved to Gibraltar on the 7th January 2017 for a two year posting. He moved to Gibraltar with his wife an[redacted] That they had received information from their Force Intel Bureau in UK via the National Crime Agency/Leicestershire Police that an IP address in the UK had uploaded an indecent Cat B image of a prepubescent female exposing herself. This image had been uploaded during the course of June 2016 to an IP address allocated to WATTERSON at his previous posting address in Leicestershire, UK. MA BELL

further informed that as a result of this information they had arrested him on suspicion of possession of indecent images and seized various data storage devices in the residence.[2] The authority to arrest was provided to Det/Insp Enriles as Sec 42 & 67 of the Armed Forces Offences Act 2006 UK that she claimed extended them jurisdiction in Gibraltar. No reference to Gibraltar law was made. I also understand that the authority to search WATTERSON's residence was Sections 79 & 80 Chapter 4 of JSP 830 (I believe these to be their version of our codes of practice). WATTERSON was detained by JPSU at their premises.[3]

JPSU procedures are actually based on the UK's Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) so when he was processed by the services police he elected the right to free and independent legal advice – there being no such duty solicitor scheme in Gibraltar the MA explained they would have to fly out one from the UK! Due to this untidy situation the JPSU were compelled to release WATTERSON from his arrest and he was informed that he may be seen at a later date. The devices seized from the search of the residence were retained with the intention of subjecting them to forensic analysis.[4]

MA BELL further explained that post to his release from arrest WATTERSON had also been also psychiatrically assessed by MOD (Gibraltar) medical personnel and this revealed that he might be a risk to himself. Because of this development JPSU appointed him a 24/7 'chaperone' for his own safety and instructed that he was not to return to the matrimonial home.[5] In the meantime, MOD social services SSAFA would be conducting assessment of WATTERSON's [redacted] son who attends [redacted] No reference was made of any intended actions with Mrs WATTERSON.

Det/Insp ENRILES expressed his concerns to MA BELL that these type of investigations required the sharing of information at far an earlier stage given the potential local implications. Neither did we have any photograph of the subject to assist us in the identification and generating awareness of him. Although provisionally housed at Devil's Tower Camp, he was still free to roam about Gibraltar as long as the chaperone remained with him. To this Det/Insp Enriles highlighted that notwithstanding the measures in place these could be deemed insufficient and may not necessarily prevent an act of self harm or an attempt on his life, or even prevent him from committing further offences. Det/Insp ENRILES added that even though WATTERSON had not been in our jurisdiction for long he had still had opportunities to interact with members of the public/children and therefore there was a need to properly risk assess him. MA BELL agreed with the Det/Insp and arranged to share WATTERSON's photograph for the purpose of creating awareness for RGP personnel.

[2] On the facts available, the action taken by JPSU in pre-emptively arresting Watterson at such an early stage is not regarded in the RGP, or indeed by UK civilian police, as best practice and procedure.

[3] JPSU premises are not regarded in Gibraltar law as a designated police station for the detention of persons under arrest. Neither can the JPSU grant and/or impose bail conditions post to an arrest.

[4] This begs the question of whether in effect the search and seizure of the devices from the residence and their continued detention retains any legitimacy. I say so because no search warrants were issued for this process & therefore it could potentially be regarded as a tactical short circuit of proper procedures which in turn could be calculated to be an abuse of powers. i.e. Police cannot go about arresting individuals and search their properties without a warrant, then release the person from arrest and retain the exhibits found for further investigation. I may be wrong but it certainly looks a very odd and I dare say unprofessional/unethical practice, if not an illegal one.

[5] I am presuming that the power to impose these control measures is provided by military law.

As is common and proper practice in these types of cases, on Monday 6th February, Det/Insp ENRILES, began to make arrangements to hold a strategy meeting under recognised child protection procedures with Gibraltar Social Services and SSAFA to discuss Master WATTERSON and for the purpose of information sharing. Equally, considerations were given to convene a Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangement (MAPPA) strategy meeting to discuss Sgt WATTERSON as a person of interest in the context of sex offender management.[6] Very surprisingly, at 1730Hrs on 6/2/17 the position of SSAFA was that no strategy meeting would take place involving Gibraltar authorities and more worryingly still, that Gibraltar Social Services should not have been in the know of the matter.

On Tuesday 7th February 2017, I contacted Provost Marshall (PM) Chris COLLINS and very briefly expressed my concerns on how the matter was being handled. I arranged for him to meet with Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE and Det/Insp ENRILES @1100Hrs at Bleak House.[7] This meeting was attended by PM COLLINS and MA BELL. They provided a brief along the lines of what MA BELL had provided to Det/INSP ENRILES at the weekend.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE then raised the following question; why had the RGP not been notified by JPSU of this on-going investigation? PM COLLINS stated that the suspect was a serving member of the military stationed in Gibraltar and residing in MOD property. That the offence being investigated occurred in the UK and under the Armed Forces Act 2006 they had the legal powers to assert jurisdiction in the manner they had whereas the RGP did not have any locus. Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE accepted that the RGP had no authority over a UK investigation. However, he explained that it was erroneous to suggest that the RGP had no jurisdiction on crimes that may have occurred or were occurring anywhere in Gibraltar including within the MOD estate. It was precisely this that we were concerned about. If the JPSU suspected the computer devices seized from WATTERSON's house were believed to contain indecent imagery of children, then even if these may have been uploaded in the UK, they were now in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar and in breach of Gibraltar Law. We further expressed concern that WATTERSON (or anyone else in the household) may have accessed or been involved with other child sexual exploitation data or activity whilst here in Gibraltar in addition to whatever he was suspected to have accessed in the UK. PM COLLINS did not accept this position and maintained that the JPSU had full jurisdiction of the case.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE respectfully asked PM COLLINS to hand over the exhibits seized from the residence to the RGP but the latter re-asserted his position that he would retain them under the authority vested by the Armed Forces Act 2006 UK which he claimed extended to Gibraltar. PM COLLINS further revealed that if when examined in the UK, the devices contained any incriminating evidence, they would fly WATTERSON back to the UK to answer to any potential charges.[8] This meeting ended at 1200Hrs and Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE advised PM COLLINS that he would be referring the matter up to RGP senior management and that further contact would be made with him later.

[6] Deemed to be best practice in these types of criminal investigations.

[7] Ironically DCI Tunbridge and DI ENRILES were attending a training session arranged by Social Services on child protection and safeguarding which was also being attended by SSAFA. The main theme running through this training session being that of multi agency partnership work and information sharing.

[8] This was the first occasion the RGP requested to take over the [local] angle of the investigation from JPSU on the back of there being reasonable suspicions that offences may have been committed in Gibraltar.

I was then briefed by Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE on JPSU's entrenched posture. Whilst I was 100% absolutely certain of the RGP's position on this[9], I asked Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE to consult with the Office of Criminal Prosecutions and Litigation to seek their views on what the position was when two authorities were claiming jurisdiction over a matter. Consequently, senior counsel Ricky RHODA CBE QC confirmed the RGP's position also expressing concern that if the RGP were claiming jurisdiction on the basis of there possibly being offences disclosed locally, that a [coerced] repatriation[10] of WATTERSON by the MOD to potentially face charges in the UK could be deemed to be unlawful - that the proper way to do this was via established judicial processes i.e. European Arrest Warrant.

At 1254Hrs Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge and Det/Insp ENRILES again held a telecon with PM COLLINS explaining that our legal services had confirmed the RGP's position regarding primacy and the fact that local legislation would be applicable over the Armed Forces Act 2006.[11] PM COLLINS reiterated his position viz the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006 adding his legal advisors had confirmed otherwise and therefore he would not be relinquishing conduct of the investigation, basically disregarding local legislation and our standpoint.[12] It was also disclosed by PM COLLINS that arrangements were already made to despatch the exhibits to the UK on Wednesday 8th February 2017 to submit them to forensic analysis. Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE told PM COLLINS that he would contact him soonest.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE reverted to me with this and we discussed what in my view was a very reasonable proposal which would satisfy the RGP and JPSU needs. In essence this was that in recognising there was a UK investigation taking place and in order not to affect this, we could conduct a parallel examination of the devices seized. This could be achieved by the RGP Hi-Tech Crime Unit officer mirroring the devices seized so that he could examine these 'working copies' to determine if there was evidence to support the reasonable grounds we had that there were offences disclosed in Gibraltar. That the JPSU could also have these devices examined in the UK in furtherance of their own investigation of offences taking place there. We run this proposal past Mr RHODA with a view of de-conflicting the matter in the most pragmatic way, though it must be said that there was no obligation on our part to be as flexible as we were being with the suggested proposal – in other words, we could assert full jurisdiction on the basis that we suspected an offence had been committed in our jurisdiction. However, the proposal recognised and respected the JPSU's interest with regards to the UK investigation. It was being done in the spirit of good relations and mutual respect between agencies.

At 1508Hrs Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE and Det/Insp ENRILES held yet another telecon with PM COLLINS and discussed the said proposal explaining how we acknowledged his investigation and how our suggestion would not hinder it. The reasons why we reasonably suspected that offences had been committed in Gibraltar were re-stated. Unfortunately, PM COLLINS refused this course of action stating it could damage the integrity of the exhibits and would be detrimental to the investigation.[13] PM COLLINS' alternative was for the forensic analysis to be conducted in the UK and if anything relating to Gibraltar were uncovered he would take legal advice on whether to release this evidence to the RGP.[14] Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE further attempted to make PM COLLINS comprehend that the question of jurisdiction was very clear and technically, if need be, the RGP could retrieve the said devices from JPSU's possession, something which we did not want to do hence our continued discussions. PM COLLINS' position did not change[15].

I was kept briefed by Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge of the lack of progress and in turn I briefed COP where we agreed that the position of the RGP was as we were articulating it from the outset. We agreed that I would seek a meeting with Chief of Staff Col GREEN to pursue the matter with a view of arriving at the most pragmatic solution to the status quo.

Consequently, at 1630Hrs I attended The Tower at HM Naval Base and met with Col Green. PM COLLINS was also present. I projected the RGP's desire to de-conflict the matter in the most conventional of ways to be expected from both MOD and us. There were valuable lessons to be learnt from the whole experience and no doubt we should, as senior personnel, provide the clarity necessary so that our respective practitioners were able to work in the best possible [technical] environment. I referred to the need for better understanding of each other's roles and responsibilities and how establishing a set protocols or memorandum of understanding would perhaps address the dilemmas we were facing. We were nonetheless still left with un-doing the issues on this particular case. I highlighted how in investigations of sex offences and particularly where there were children involved the best practice dictated sharing of information.[16] In this case it was seemingly lacking as many of the key stake holders who could bring information to be shared were not even aware of JPSU's investigation.

I went over all the circumstances already related to earlier in the report. I then explained that the situation was seemingly escalating to the extent where the MOD's entrenched position did not fare well for relations with the RGP and by default the wider community in Gibraltar. I was taken quite aback when PM COLLINS stated that his mandate was very clear; that he had to look after the interests of the troops and the UK investigation. I acknowledged what he was saying but I explained that actually my mandate extended further than his – that when it came to criminal investigations, I had to look after the interests of Gibraltar PLC and that included everyone in the territory inclusive of MOD personnel.

[13] Clearly an expression of mistrust towards the RGP displayed by PM COLLINS who also constantly stated that he had to ensure the investigation abided to UK standards implying the RGP's standards were not sufficient. The Home Office standards were constantly repeated by him in this context.

[14] This suggestion basically undermines the RGP's ability to conduct enquiries of potential offences occurring in the jurisdiction. Having the appropriate resources to conduct the examinations locally, it would be wholly unethical that we would have to rely on another agency to search for the evidence and then live in the hope that it could be released back to the RGP.

[15] The third occasion JPSU were refusing to oblige to our requests.

[16] The Bichard Inquiry report into the Soham murders identified one of the main shortfalls to be failure to share information effectively. This inquiry revolutionized processes for the UK police and social services and which the RGP have stringently put in place. Similary, the Rotherham Child Sexual Exploitation scandal - an independent inquiry by Prof Alexis Jay published in Aug 2014 condemned the failure of the authorities in Rotherham to act effectively against the abuse or even, in some cases, to acknowledge that it was taking place.

I expressed dissatisfaction on how the JPSU were handling the matter and how the overall risks attached to this case were not being properly addressed. I described how the RGP operate to best practice and procedures on these type of investigations – that we had a forensic computer expert, dedicated risk managers and all the supporting infrastructure for such an investigation which evidently the MOD did not have in Gibraltar as had been proven with the inability to proceed with the interviewing of WATTERSON and provide free/independent legal advice, their inability to impose grant/impose bail conditions or even custody facilities[17]. Whilst I was assured that WATTERSON was being 'properly managed', I was not reassured that he may have already committed further offences whilst in Gibraltar. I also enquired as to why the other members of the family, i.e. the wife and 14 year son were not being regarded as potential suspects too. The focus was solely on WATTERSON and it was mentioned that they already had evidence against him of having committed an offence in the UK. This caused me to suspect that there was probably more to the case than what met the eye. PM COLLINS' response was that he was under no obligation to discuss his investigation strategies with me. In turn, this further enhanced suspicions that offences had been committed in Gibraltar as otherwise why would the JPSU seize computers and other devices if they did not believe them to contain incriminating material. All these concerns I shared with Col Green and PM COLLINS adding that I was duty bound to investigate WATTERSON locally – I could simply not leave such a serious matter walk under my nose in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar. I explained how in the past the RGP had assumed the lead and conduct of serious criminal investigations within the MOD estate ranging from serious assaults on MOD [children] dependants where the assailant was a serviceman to the sudden death of senior MOD official as only two examples. I referred to these matters simply to highlight our argument from the outset that the RGP had primacy in the jurisdiction.[18]

I conveyed my concerns to the two gentlemen that there were too many factors in terms of possible local victims, possible crimes committed here, public perception of the RGP and the legal position on jurisdiction amongst others that compelled the RGP to have a say on the matter. I did, however, state that there was still room to work the matter together to oblige to both agency's needs. Col GREEN asked me what actions the RGP would take if indeed incriminating material were found in any of the devices seized to which I explained that there would certainly be an intervention on our part to probe in to the matter further. This was totally mis-construed by Col GREEN who argued that going in "guns blazing" would compromise the UK investigation. This argument fazed me as Col GREEN was being critical of a potential action the RGP could consider, but not necessarily carry out, when in fact the JPSU's intervention had already precisely done what he was advocating should not be done.

The proposal to run a parallel investigation was flatly discarded by PM COLLINS who said he had top cover from his superiors in the UK that he was on solid footing to retain conduct of the investigation. He argued that my proposal would put in jeopardy the integrity of the exhibits seized as the examinations he would subject them to comply with Home Office Standards and as the RGP was not a Home Office force there would be a conflict. He added that there was nothing in military protocols that obliged him to consider what I was proposing. In what was a clear moment of forceful assertion of his stance, PM COLLINS told Col GREEN that the solution to the matter was to put WATTERSON on a plane to the UK at the earliest opportunity. I interjected stating that if he was contemplating this course of action it would certainly bring about a considerable and detrimental strain to MOD/RGP/GOG relations. I equally mentioned that the RGP could actually be driven to impose executive action over the JPSU but that I stressed my intentions were not to go down that route but rather to resolve the issues by discussion amongst us senior law enforcement officials in order to prevent any further escalation which could jeopardise relations. I informed them both that I would be reporting up COP on this meeting.

[17] These are issues that should have been given the important consideration they merit before effecting the arrest.
[18] Fourth occasion that the RGP requested to take over the conduct of the investigation.

Sir, I can assure you I tried every possible influencing and negotiating tactic I could think of to resolve the impasse but unfortunately they did not shift from their stance. Before concluding the meeting at 1800Hrs I asked PM COLLINS to refer the arguments I had posed on behalf of the RGP to his superiors in UK so that at least they could have a balanced and more objective understanding of the whole matter. I asked PM COLLINS to do this as a matter of urgency and before any decision was taken to fly out the exhibits and/or WATTERSON. He assured me he would do so. We agreed that he would revert to me once his superiors had taken a view.

I then returned to NMH where I briefed COP on the unfortunate non-progress and on the concerns I had that PM COLLINS and Col GREEN were contemplating actions which would totally bypass the RGP's position on the matter. That evening/night I am aware COP tried unsuccessfully on numerous times to contact CBF who was out of the jurisdiction.

Not having heard from PM COLLINS on what his superiors in UK had to say, at 2130Hrs I phoned him but there was no response. At 2134Hrs I phoned him again and I received no response. Whilst waiting hopefully for a return call from him I conducted some research on the applicability of the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006 in Gibraltar and to my understanding found that it was not applicable.[19] I also looked up service police protocols and what they had to say on the matter and I was not surprised to read that there were provisions stating that local legislation might impose similar jurisdictional arrangements to those PM COLLINS was claiming.[20] Then again, irrespective of whether the Armed Forces Act 2006 is not applicable to Gibraltar and whether service police protocols have seemingly not been abided by, I would like to restate the fact that the RGP has primacy over the matter as enshrined in Gibraltar law.

The matter was now becoming time critical as the plans by MOD (Gibraltar) to fly out the exhibits and possibly WATTERSON were proceeding. I was encountering problems in contacting PM COLLINS and so was COP in reaching CBF. We agreed to a number of actions as follows;

- RGP SB to check passenger manifests to see if WATTERSON was booked on a flight departing Gibraltar Airport.
- Cover crucial areas to prevent WATTERSON from being whisked away.
- Make the necessary arrangements to retrieve exhibits seized from the residence if the JPSU did not change their position. This would be done by applying for a search warrant at the courts.

At 2212Hrs PM COLLINGS returned my call and I shared with him my understanding and interpretation of both the Armed Forces Act 2006/2016 and the service police protocols. Unfortunately again my discussions and arguments as referred to in the preceding paragraph practically fell in deaf ears.[21] He reaffirmed that his position had not changed and that his plans to fly out the exhibits the next day were still on track. I asked him whether it was also intended to fly WATTERSON out and he replied by saying he was not at liberty to discuss his investigation strategies with me. I told him that CoP was trying to contact CBF and had left numerous messages for his calls to be returned but that he had not been successful in reaching him. I further told him that it would only be proper that he stalled his plans until CoP and CBF spoke. In response to this PM COLLINS told me that CoP should call Col GREEN, but that in any case he was not answerable to the Command in Gibraltar but rather to the Provost Marshall (Navy) in the UK. I asked him whether he had received any response from his superiors on what had agreed at the meeting in The Tower. He said that his superiors would probably get back to him the following morning but that at present his intentions remained unchanged.

Still concerned that JPSU would continue to entirely disregard our claims we discussed our tactical options and COP sanctioned that we should proceed to retrieve the exhibits. The intention was to meet up with PM COLLINS once again and ask for the exhibits to be handed over and to only resort to executing the warrant if there was non-compliance on his part. COP also sanctioned any other action falling out from any non-compliance after the warrant had been executed.[22] Consequently, Det/Insp ENRILES and Det/Con HOWARD left NMH to apply for a warrant from the Stipendiary Magistrate to search the JPSU premises at Gun Wharf.

At 2243Hrs I again contacted PM COLLINS asking him to meet with me. The plan was to offer the opportunity once again for the exhibits to be handed over and then, if this was not forthcoming, to proceed and execute the warrant. However, he said that he would not meet at such late hour. We arranged that I would go down to his offices early the next day.

At 2330Hrs, I was informed by Det/Insp ENRILES that the Stipendiary Magistrate had not granted the warrant on the basis that he felt there was insufficient suspicion to believe that the computer devices seized from WATTERSON contained incriminating data of offences committed in Gibraltar.[23] This clearly caused for a re-think of our options which included making a fresh application for the warrant in the morning. I then stood down the team for the night.

At 0845Hrs on Wednesday 8th February 2017, I attended the Office of Prosecutions and Criminal Litigation to seek legal support to make the MOD accept that the RGP had primacy in the matter. Mr RHODA's view was that we should try and avoid taking executive action against the JPSU and pursue discussions to reach a pragmatic solution, however, if these failed he agreed and accepted that we were then left with no option other than to either succumb to the JPSU's posture or indeed proceed with a fresh application for a search warrant and seize the property in question. Understandably so, Mr RHODA was puzzled as to why the situation had reached the levels it had within the MOD. During the course of the morning Senior Counsel RHODA spoke with (i) the Acting Governor, Mr Nick PYLE and (ii) Col GREEN in yet a further attempt to convince them to accede to the RGP's requests. He also tried contacting the Command Secretary but he was not contactable.

I am aware that both Mr PYLE and Col GREEN asked Mr RHODA to request the RGP to defer any intended action as both were seeking legal advice from the FCO and UK military respectively as to [22] Possible offences of obstructing police to be considered and executive action followed through in this regard.

[23] Though respecting the Magistrates views for the non-granting of the search warrant, we believed he may have erred in his decision.

whether the RGP had primacy in the matter. When Mr RHODA relayed this to me I expressed resentment as essentially we were being asked to be subservient to UK legal advice when the local position was already well affirmed. I then returned to NMH and reported these latest discussions to COP who then gave me instructions to re-apply for another search warrant to the Chief Justice. I proceeded to do this and having spoken to the Registrar of the Supreme the matter was listed for 1500Hrs that same day.

Throughout the day I sought updates on possible intelligence relating to WATTERSON flying out and SB confirmed that he was not booked on any commercial flight departing from Gibraltar Airport. I still asked SB to remain vigilant at the airport in the event that JPSU staff were spotted attempting to take out the exhibits on a commercial flight.

At around 1400Hrs, it was brought to my notice that a military aircraft had just landed at RAF Gibraltar on an approximate 1-hour stop over. This straight away caused me to suspect that the exhibits and/or WATTERSON could be put on this RAF plane taken out of Gibraltar. I relayed this to COP who asked for contingencies to be put in place to prevent the aircraft from departing if our suspicions were confirmed.[24] You can appreciate how time critical the situation was getting with on the one hand the application for the warrant being heard at 1500Hrs which coincided with the possible departure of the military flight.

I also learnt that the Acting Governor would see both CoP and Col GREEN at The Convent after a separate [firearms capability] meeting which was being attended by both. The matter would again be discussed. It was COP's intentions at this meeting to seek assurances from Col GREEN that the aircraft would be carrying the exhibits. As it happened Col GREEN did not attend the said meeting.

At approximately 1430Hrs Insp PERERA was instructed to position himself in a marked police car by the south barrier opposite GDP post and await instructions. His position was by the very start of the pedestrian and bicycle lane next to the police post. At about 1514Hrs and unable to discuss the matter with Col GREEN and Acting Governor you directed that we contact PM COLLINS to seek the assurances. Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge tried contacting him to no avail as his mobile phone was switched off. We contacted the JPSU offices requesting to speak to PM COLLINS and RAF Sgt O'Malley stated that he was at a meeting with Col GREEN and was unavailable. We explained how imperative it was that we spoke to PM COLLINS as this was in relation to the on-going WATTERSON matter. Sgt O'Malley undertook to contact PM COLLINS for us.

At approximately 1520Hrs, at the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice, heard my application for the warrant to search for the property seized from WATTERSON's residence by the JPSU. Det/Insp ENRILES, Senior Counsel RHODA and Crown Counsel ZAMMIT supported my application. I took to the witness stand and under oath relayed my information and reasonable suspicions and how time critical the situation was, explaining that we also suspected the property we were looking for could well be on board a military aircraft that was about to depart. Det/Insp ENRILES also had to take the stand as the CJ wanted to know on what basis the Stipendiary had declined the granting of the warrant the previous day. At the end of the application, the CJ granted me the warrant but not before underscoring that it was not a good day for law enforcement when one agency had to take executive action against another law enforcement agency in this fashion. I had to concur with the CJ on this.

As I left the Supreme Court at 1540Hrs, I learnt that the military aircraft was starting it engines but was still at its stand - the barriers to the stop traffic across the airfield were down. I also learnt that the GDP officer at the south barrier had been instructed to request Inspector PERERA to move away from his position as his presence interfered with air movements. The GDP officer was informed that we had an operation on-going and we were exercising our duties in the said operation. Insp PERERA referred the GDP officer to contact his superiors. Supt ULLGER also received information from Air Traffic Control that all flights would be diverted because of our presence, including commercial flights.

Throughout this time Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE was continuously trying to raise PM COLLINS to no avail. Sgt O'Malley also confirmed that he had not been able to contact PM COLLINS either. Sgt O'Malley was asked whether he could confirm if the exhibits in question had been transported on to the military aircraft that was shortly scheduled to depart to which he stated that he was not in a position to respond to that question but acknowledged the importance of the request. Our suspicions that the exhibits were on board the aircraft were growing by the second.

At the airfield, GDP were being instructed by ATC to insist that Insp PERERA moved from his position or alternatively, if he was not going to move, to hand over the keys to the patrol car as otherwise the military aircraft would not be able to take off. They were informed again that there was a police operation in place and he would not move from his position or indeed hand over the keys to the patrol car. Insp PERERA noted the arrival at the location of Stn Cmdr Liz HUTCHINSON.

At approximately 1545Hrs I arrived at JPSU HQ in Gun Wharf together with other officers. I identified myself to staff and asked for PM COLLINS. Sgt O'Malley informed us that PM COLLINS was not there but that he would call him and tell him we were at his office. A few minutes later, Sgt O'Malley told me that PM COLLINS was on his way to the office to meet us.

At about 1551Hrs, the military aircraft was seen to slowly move from its stand towards the boundary of the RAF apron. Simultaneous to this Insp PERERA noted a MOD sweeper vehicle yellow in colour driven by a civilian driver known to be either Jacqueline BARBAN or Alicia MUSCAT, drive towards the RGP patrol car and manoeuvre to block the patrol car which at the time was static. This caused Insp PERERA to circumvent the MOD vehicle so that the RGP vehicle was not blocked in. Insp PERERA then slowly moved up the cycle lane northbound to the middle of the runway. The RGP had it blue lights on. Seconds later Inspector PERERA moved further northwards and stopped the patrol car by the north barrier.

At approximately 1555Hrs a GDP dog section patrol car driven by GDP PC Diani with RAF Stn Cmdr Liz HUTCHINSON in the front passenger seat drove up to Insp PERERA's position. Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON told Insp PERERA that she knew what the RGP was doing and that she was "fed up of these silly games", adding that we were preventing a military aircraft from taking off and also endangering the said aircraft. Insp PERERA retorted that if the military aircraft remained by the apron where it currently was, no one would be endangered adding that if she knew what the police operation was about she should understand that we were exercising our duties in respect of this operation. Insp PERERA who at the time was on speaker phone with Ch Insp FINLAYSON and

Supt ULLGER passed on his phone to Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON as Supt ULLGER wanted to speak with her.

Supt ULLGER informed Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON that there was an on going police investigation whereby it was strongly suspected that there were items on the aircraft which were linked to the investigation and that we wanted to retrieve them. She was also told that we were desperately trying to contact Col GREEN but had been unable to locate him. Supt ULLGER asked her to please check the manifest to establish whether such items (computers and mobile phones) were on board. She agreed to revert to Supt ULLGER once she had checked the manifest.

At 1559Hrs Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON called Supt ULLGER and stated that she had the manifest before her and that there was no computer equipment or phones logged in it. She was told that it was suspected that also on-board the aircraft was the serviceman subject of the investigation together with the exhibits appertaining to the case. She was informed that we had a warrant issued by the Chief Justice to retrieve these items which were in the possession of JPSU and that if she had any information she should be disclosing this to him. She was warned of the possible consequences of not co-operating with the requests. To this she stated that she would get back to Supt ULLGER. By responding as she did she was clearly revealing that she was withholding information. However, her word was taken at face value given the responsible post she holds and so the RGP patrol car with Insp PERERA was stood down and moved away from the airfield. Shortly after the aircraft returned to its stand within the apron.

At around 1615Hrs, whilst awaiting the arrival of PM COLLINS at the JPSU HQ at Gun Wharf I was asked by Sgt O'MALLEY to speak to Cmdr Jack Hawkins, PM COLLIN's line manager in the UK. The whole issue of whose jurisdiction over the matter was discussed with each of us arguing our respective positions. Cmdr Hawkins could not understand why we were taking such an interest in this case when the original offence had been disclosed in the UK. I repeated the RGP's position in the same way as it had been promulgated to PM COLLINS and Col GREEN. I also explained that in the absence of the JPSU co-operating with the RGP we had had to resort to securing a warrant from the Supreme Court of Gibraltar to retrieve the exhibits. Unsatisfied with what I saying Cmdr HAWKINS said he wanted to speak to the Chief Justice or a more senior police officer than me. PM COLLINS arrived at JPSU HQ at approximately 1625Hrs (40 minutes after I had arrived at the JPSU premises) whilst I was on the phone to his line manager.

PM COLLINS did not make himself available to me and I exercised great restraint in not asserting my authority under the circumstances and execute the warrant. Believe it or not I was still hopeful that PM COLLINS or his superiors would see sense and appreciate the levels this had reached. It was not to be and when I eventually was able to speak to PM COLLINS I expressed how unprofessional he had been in shunning me in the way he had. I accepted that this was an awkward for situation both of us but we had to be professional and resolve it without further conflict. I informed him that I would rather not execute the warrant and that we could still work the matter out favourably for both. PM COLLINS continued in his rigid way that he was at no liberty to discuss the matter with me. He kept receiving phone calls which he took in private. During one of these breaks in our conversation, I received reliable information that it was very likely that both the exhibits and WATTERSON were in fact on board the aircraft. This I relayed to my colleagues dealing with the airport side of the operation.

At 1629Hrs Supt ULLGER again called up Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON asking for any update to their last conversation. She insisted that she could not see anything in the manifest to suggest computers were on board. Supt ULLGER told her to stop being selective with words as she perfectly knew what he was on about i.e. that we were seeking out property/exhibits relating to the WATTERSON investigation. She was warned yet again to which she nervously replied that she would call Supt ULLGER back.

At 1650Hrs Supt ULLGER again called Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON and this time told her we had information that someone had disembarked from the aircraft with items. She was asked to confirm this and she replied that no-one or any cargo had been come off the aircraft. Supt ULLGER expressed his deep dissatisfaction at the misleading responses she was providing, informing her that RGP officers with eyeball on the aircraft had seen this happen. She again stated that she would revert to the Supt. She was reminded about the existence of the warrant and the fact that she could potentially be obstructing police in the execution of our duties. By this stage and by the tone of her voice Supt ULLGER made out that Stn Cmdr was clearly nervous and somewhat confused.

At 1659Hrs, Supt ULLGER called Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON and told her that the traffic barriers had been down for an inordinate amount of time causing major disruption on all our roads. There was also a potential for public disorder amongst thousands of disgruntled pedestrians and motorists who had been held up for over two and a half hours. He requested that traffic was allowed to circulate forthwith. She stated that pedestrians would be released immediately but when pressed to release vehicular traffic too she said she was working on it.

A RGP patrol car was again despatched to the airfield. Insp PAYAS who was in this patrol car positioned it in the same spot as Insp PERERA had initially positioned himself. He was again approached by a GDP officer who asked him to move the patrol car out of from the airfield or hand over the keys. This was denied on the same basis as earlier. The yellow MOD road sweeper again drove towards the RGP patrol car to block its position and causing Insp PAYAS to evade this manoeuvre. The driver of the sweeper vehicle, Ms MUSCAT was spoken to and advised to desist in her actions as she was rendering herself liable to arrest for obstructing police. She obliged and moved her works vehicle to the area of the western hangar.

At this juncture COP informed me that on conversations with Cmdr Hawkins the latter had pleaded to COP to allow the aircraft to depart as the evidence was required in the UK to pursue the investigation against WATTERSON. This then uncovered the truth which confirmed that the evidence and WATTERSON were on the flight although the three senior MOD officials were saying different, clearly to deceive us.

Around this time, I enquired from PM COLLINS whether the exhibits we wanted to seize were in the building and he replied in the negative. I went to on to inform him that I practically knewthat both WATTERSON and the exhibits were on board the aircraft and that we would proceed to retrieve them. He made no remark to this but I noted he suddenly became very pale and uneasy. I became concerned that he had become unwell but he reassured me he was ok. He took one further private call and after that call his behaviour completely changed. He mellowed to suggest that we should explore the running of a parallel investigation and that he would be making available the exhibits for the RGP to examine. I informed him that this course of action was the one I had suggested initially but had not met with his approval. I added that all the conflict and tensions experienced during the past few days could have been well averted.

The warrant issued by the Chief Justice was not executed in the end. At approximately 1745Hrs I was notified by COP that he had received assurances from the CBF that the exhibits would be handed over to the RGP in due course. Consequently, I returned to NMH where we held a de-brief and I arranged for an investigation team to liaise with JPSU to proceed with the investigation. The RGP vehicle positioned by the south barrier had also been recalled to NMH at 1745Hrs.

Final observations

You will no doubt have grasped how the escalation of tension was not down to lack of will or desire on our part to resolve the issues in a 'grown up' manner. In fact, as alluded to throughout the chronology of events, we made numerous requests for the handing over of the conduct of the [local] investigation. Sadly, we were taken to the limits only to finally achieve what we are perfectly entitled to. I take the following most salient moments as key to how the matter escalated to the levels they did with I dare say a clear devious intent on the part of the senior military officials we were dealing with;

- The poor judgement by JPSU of not sharing with the Gibraltar authorities the fact that they had a potential sex offender(s) in the jurisdiction and where it was reasonably suspected that offences may have been committed locally.
- The lack of supporting legal/tactical/logistical infrastructure for the JPSU to conduct enquiries in a territory where they claim to have jurisdiction and which in essence can lead to abuses of process.
- The lack of clarity on the part MOD's part as to who has primacy in Gibraltar.
- The local interpretation that the Armed Forces Act 2006 & 2016 are not applicable in Gibraltar; meaning the actions carried out JPSU could be construed as ultra vires.
- The intent by Col GREEN and PM COLLINS to disregard the authority of the RGP to assert jurisdiction over the local aspect of the investigation and undermine this authority further by making arrangements to sneak out the exhibits and WATTERSON when it was perfectly clear that the RGP had a [big] claim on the matter.
- The seemingly devious conspiracy employed by Col GREEN, PM COLLINS and Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON to ensure the RGP could not discharge their lawful duty and create a situation to exert pressure on the RGP to relent in our efforts. This includes (i) the instructions issued to civilian MOD drivers to block the path of two RGP patrol cars who were legitimately engaged in a police operation, (ii) the misleading and obstructive attitude displayed by the Stn Cmdr regarding the exhibits and person on board the aircraft (iii) the unhelpful attitudes and stances displayed by Col GREEN and PM COLLINS throughout, (iv) the traffic chaos and potential public order situation created due to the very long time the traffic barriers were closed when there was no need for this.

Finally, you may have a different view to me on this but, Sir, I submit to you that there has certainly been a serious breach of trust and confidence by, in my view, the three senior military officials referred to in this report. It will be awkward to say the least to re-establish this trust and confidence wherever and whenever our respective roles coincide in the future.

COP has requested a meeting between the under mentioned parties to be held at the office of Her Majesty's Attorney General for Gibraltar Michael LLAMAS QC at 1130Hrs on Wednesday 22nd February 2017 to discuss issues to prevent a repetition on of events described in this report.

IN THE MATTER OF THE EXTENT OF THE ARMED FORCES ACT 2006

JOINT OPINION

Introduction

1. We are asked to advise whether the Armed Forces Act 2006 ("AFA 2006") extends to Gibraltar.

2. An officer of the Royal Air Force ("RAF") stationed in Gibraltar is suspected of possession of indecent imagery of children. The Royal Gibraltar Police ("RGP") wish to investigate. However, the British military have claimed authority to arrest and investigate under the AFA 2006 and have obstructed the investigation by the RGP.

3. For the reasons set out below, it is our opinion that the AFA 2006 clearly does not extend to Gibraltar. The British military have therefore purported to exercise powers of arrest and investigation in a jurisdiction where the law does not grant them such powers. Arrest, entry and search by the British armed forces in Gibraltar is not lawful under the law of Gibraltar.

Factual Background

4. On 4 February 2017 the RGP were informed that the British Armed Forces' Joint Provost and Security Unit ("JPSU") had arrested an officer serving with the RAF in Gibraltar on suspicion of possession of indecent imagery of children. His residence had been searched and computers and storage devices seized. The authority to arrest was claimed under sections 42 and 67 of the AFA 2006.

5. The RGP wish to investigate and have made numerous requests to the British military to enable them to do so, which were refused. This culminated, on 8 February 2017, in the RGP obtaining a warrant to search for the seized property.

6. When the RGP went to the military base to execute the warrant they found the suspect and the seized material were on a military plane about to be flown to the United Kingdom. The RGP prevented the aircraft from taking off.

Legal Background

Offences and powers created by the AFA 2006

7. By virtue of section 367(1) AFA 2006 every member of the regular forces is subject to service law at all times. The regular forces include the RAF; see section 374 AFA 2006.

8. Part 1 of the AFA 2006 provides for a number of service offences.[1] Amongst those offences is that prescribed by section 42(1) AFA 2006, which provides that a person subject to service law commits an offence if he does any act that -- (a) is punishable by the law of England and Wales; or (b) if done in England or Wales, would be so punishable.

[1] Defined by section 50(2)(a) AFA 2006 as including any offence under Part 1.

9. Part 3 of the AFA confers powers of arrest, search and seizure in relation to service offences. For example, section 67 provides that a person who is reasonably suspected of being engaged in committing, or of having committed, a service offence may be arrested in accordance with the provisions of that section by a person subject to service law. Detailed provision is made by that Part as to the circumstances in which those powers can be exercised and the persons (ordinarily members of the armed forces of a certain rank or service police) who can exercise them.

Duration and extent of the AFA 2006

10. When it entered into force, the AFA 2006 extended to Gibraltar. Section 384(2) AFA 2006, as enacted, provided:

> "This Act extends to –
>
> (a) the Isle of Man, and
>
> (b) the British Overseas Territories,
>
> subject to such modifications as Her Majesty may be Order in Council specify".

11. Gibraltar is a British Overseas Territory: see Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 13 (2009), paragraph 859.

12. The duration of the AFA 2006 was limited by section 382 AFA 2006, as enacted, which provided that the Act expired at the end of one year beginning with the day on which it was passed, subject to renewal by Order in Council for no more than one year from the time the Act would otherwise expire, with an overall limit to such continuation beyond the end of the year 2011.

13. This limited duration reflects the fundamental constitutional principle, traced back to the Bill of Rights in 1688, which declared:

"[t]hat the raising or keeping a standing army within the kingdom in time of peace, unless it be with the consent of Parliament, is against law".

14. Since the 1950s, legislation has been required every five years to continue in force the legislation enabling the Armed Forces to be recruited and maintained. Those Acts have provided that, in each of the years between five-yearly Acts, an Order in Council is required to continue in force that legislation: see Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 3 (2011), paragraph 303.

15. Section 1 of the Armed Forces Act 2011 ("AFA 2011") substituted a new section 382 into the AFA 2006 by which the AFA 2006 was continued and could be continued by Order in Council until the end of 2016.

16. However, unlike the AFA 2006, the AFA 2011 did not extend its provisions to British Overseas Territories. Rather, section 33 AFA 2011 provided:

"(1) Her Majesty may by Order in Council provide for any of the provisions of this Act, except section 25, to extend to a territory mentioned in subsection (2) with or without modifications.

(2) Those territories are—

(a) any of the Channel Islands;

(b) the Isle of Man;

(c) any of the British overseas territories".

17. No such Order in Council was made and therefore the AFA 2006 did not extend to the British Overseas Territories beyond the end of 2011, by reason of that Act's expiry under its section 382 (as originally enacted).

18. Section 1 of the Armed Forces Act 2016 ("AFA 2016") substituted a new section 382 into the AFA 2006 by which the AFA 2006 was continued and could be continued by Order in Council until the end of 2021.

19. Section 21(2)(b) of the AFA 2016 provides that that Act, with the exception of certain sections, extends to "the British overseas territories, except Gibraltar" (emphasis added). Section 13(1)(b) of the AFA 2016 brings the AFA 2006 back into force in "the British overseas territories except Gibraltar". Section 13(3) of the 2016 Act amends section 384(2) of the AFA 2006 (the original version of which we cite in paragraph 10 above) to exclude Gibraltar.

20. Paragraphs 4 and 6 to 12 of the Schedule to the AFA 2016 make provision in consequence of the fact that AFA 2006 is not to extend to Gibraltar. Paragraph 4 provides that powers in certain Acts to extend amendments of AFA 2006 to jurisdictions outside the United Kingdom cannot be used in respect of Gibraltar. Paragraphs 6 to 12 amend certain references to British overseas territories in AFA 2006 to exclude Gibraltar.

21. The related Parliamentary materials confirm that the decision not to extend the AFA 2006 to Gibraltar was a deliberate choice by the legislature. For example:

(i) The Explanatory Notes in the House of Lords relating to the Bill brought forward from the House of Commons on 12 January 2016 explain in terms at paragraphs 78 to 79 and 99 that the AFA 2006 had previously expired in Gibraltar and was, under the provisions of the Bill, not to extend to Gibraltar. Similar explanation is provided in the Explanatory Notes in the House of Commons relating to the Bill as introduced there on 16 September 2015 at paragraphs 74 to 75 and 90.

(ii) The rationale for not extending the Bill to Gibraltar was explained in the House of Commons during the Committee stage of the Bill by the minister Mark Lancaster, following a question from Jim Shannon MP. The Minister explained that the 2005 Constitution gives Gibraltar wide legislative responsibilities so the Government was discussing with Gibraltar whether it would be best to provide for the 2006 Act to extend to Gibraltar or for Gibraltar to act through its own legislation: Hansard, 16 December 2015, Column 1607.

(iii) During that Committee stage, the minister recognised that the AFA 2006 had not been in force in the British Overseas Territories since 2011 and that, in order for the members of the British armed forces to have powers of arrest, entry and search in those jurisdictions, the 2006 Act would need to be extended to those jurisdictions: Hansard, 16 December 2015, Column 1607.

(iv) On the Third Reading of the Bill before the House of Commons on 11 January 2016, the minister said that the Government was still discussing with Gibraltar whether it would be best to provide for the 2006 Act and the Bill to extend there, that those discussions were ongoing and if necessary the Government would introduce an amendment to the Bill in the House of Lords; Hansard, 11 January 2016, Column 614 to Column 615.

(v) During the Second Reading of the Bill in the House of Lords on 11 February 2016, the Minister of State, Ministry of Defence, Earl Howe, explained that the Bill provided that it was not to have effect in Gibraltar, although the Government was consulting Gibraltar on whether it would be content for the AFA 2006 to become part of its laws and that, if so, an amendment to the Bill would be made: Hansard, 11 February 2016, Column 2362 to 2363. No such amendment was brought forward before the Bill was passed.

Relevant provisions of the law of Gibraltar

22. The English Law (Application) Act states at section 3(1)(b) that the law in England set out in any Act of Parliament at Westminster applied to Gibraltar by any Order of Her Majesty's Council, or any express provision in any Act, or by necessary implication, shall be in force in Gibraltar.

23. The Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 provides for the powers and duties of the RGP and for evidence and procedure in criminal cases. It confers upon the RGP powers of arrest upon reasonable grounds of suspicion that a person has committed an offence (section 42(2)) and powers of search and seizure in prescribed circumstances (Parts 2 and 3).

Analysis

24. United Kingdom forces present in an overseas territory are subject to that territory's law in the usual way, subject to the AFA 2006 or other legislative provision which extends to those territories: Hendry and Dickson British Overseas Territories Laws (2011), page 178.

25. The AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar. This is not merely a matter of omission or oversight upon the expiry of the AFA 2006 or AFA 2011. It is a choice made by Parliament when enacting the AFA 2016 as part of its important constitutional role of approving the raising or standing of an army.

26. The language of section 13(1)(b), section 13(3) and section 21(2)(b) of the AFA 2016 is clear: the provisions of the 2006 Act and the 2016 Act are to extend to the British overseas territories except Gibraltar. The Schedule to the AFA 2016 makes provision in consequence of the fact that AFA 2006 is not to extend to Gibraltar.

27. It is plain from the related Parliamentary materials that, when considering the Bill which became the AFA 2016, Parliament was aware that the AFA 2006 did not extend to Gibraltar, was aware that it was not to be so extended by the AFA 2016 and was aware that the consequence of that was that arrest, entry and search by British armed forces in Gibraltar would not be lawful under the law of Gibraltar.

28. Accordingly, the clear intention of Parliament, reflected in the clear language of section 21(2)(b) AFA 2016, is that the AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar.

29. The consequence of this is that, as a matter of the law of Gibraltar, and of the law of the United Kingdom, the British armed forces do not have the power of arrest under section 67 AFA 2006 and nor do they have the powers of search and seizure granted by the AFA 2006.

30. In purporting to exercise those powers in Gibraltar, the members of the JPSU were acting in a way which was, in that jurisdiction, ultra vires.

31. It is correct that the AFA 2006 applies to members of the RAF at all times, wherever they are in the world, in the sense that an offence committed abroad can be an offence contrary to the 2006 Act: this is the consequence of sections 367(1) and 42(1) AFA 2006. The minister so confirmed in the House of Lords on 11 February 2016 (see paragraph 21(v) above): Hansard at Column 2362. However, that the AFA 2006 confers such a worldwide jurisdiction over relevant persons does not make it lawful under the law of Gibraltar or under the law of the United Kingdom for the United Kingdom authorities to exercise a power of arrest or investigation in Gibraltar in respect of those persons.

32. By reason of section 13(1) AFA 2016, the AFA 2006 is not in force in Gibraltar and accordingly the power of arrest contained in section 67 AFA 2006 does not apply in Gibraltar, as a matter of the law of Gibraltar and of the law of the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom military authorities have no power to arrest in Gibraltar under the AFA 2006, although of course if the suspect returned to the United Kingdom he could be arrested in the United Kingdom under section 67 AFA 2006 for an offence committed elsewhere. It should not be surprising, when Parliament has expressly decided not to apply the AFA 2006 to Gibraltar, that the United Kingdom military authorities do not have the power under the United Kingdom Act to arrest people in Gibraltar.

33. The law of Gibraltar, in particular the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, confers powers of arrest and investigation of crime upon the RGP. It does not confer such powers upon United Kingdom armed forces and there is no other provision in the law of Gibraltar which does. As explained above, the AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar and accordingly is not in force in Gibraltar: section 13(1)(b), section 13(3) and section 21(2)(b) AFA 2016 and section 3(1)(b) English Law (Application) Act.

34. In reaching our view we have also considered the provisions of the United Kingdom Forces (Jurisdiction of Colonial Courts) Order 1965, which prevents the trial of a member of the United Kingdom armed forces for an offence against the law of another territory where certain criteria are satisfied.[2] However, not only are those criteria not present in the present case, but in any event that Order is concerned only with the question of whether the courts of Gibraltar are prevented from adjudicating upon a certain offence and does not address the issue of whether the United Kingdom military forces have jurisdiction to arrest and investigate in Gibraltar.

35. In summary:

(i) The AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar.

[2] In particular, where the alleged offender is acting in the course of his duties, or where only service personnel (or dependants and civilian components of the armed forces) are involved or where the offence is against UK government property: section 3 of the Order.

(ii) The United Kingdom armed forces do not have powers of arrest and seizure under the law of Gibraltar.

(iii) In purporting to exercise those powers in Gibraltar they were acting in a manner which was unlawful under the law of Gibraltar.

(iv) The RGP have powers of arrest and seizure under the law of Gibraltar and members of the United Kingdom armed forces in Gibraltar are subject to that law and must comply with the lawful exercise by the RGP of those powers.

Dear Commissioner,

I am writing on behalf of Joint Forces Command – the organisation that commands and is responsible for the UK's permanent joint overseas bases – in respect of the ongoing investigations surrounding events on the 8th February, which unfolded in Gibraltar, in particular around Gibraltar International Airport.

There are a number of points that it seems appropriate to reflect to you. It is hoped these reflections are helpful to you on several accounts:

(1) first to acknowledge the role, advice and direction that Joint Forces Command provided to Commander British Forces Gibraltar on the legal issues impacting on the events of 8th February;

(2) secondly, to recognise and support the individuals involved and who are presently under your arrest and whose actions under your investigations were under the auspices of Joint Forces Command in the fulfilment of their duties. In doing so, it is understood these individuals' actions may have clashed with the responsibilities that your officers properly sought to fulfil; and

(3) finally, to reassure you about the seriousness with which Joint Forces Command views the allegations that have been made, the eagerness to try and satisfactorily settle – to everyone's satisfaction – the concerns with which the Royal Gibraltar Police are understandably investigating, and our genuine enthusiasm – if possible – to use these events as a platform to grow an even better understanding between our respective organisations and to build an even stronger and mutually respectful and beneficial future together.

Taking these points in turn:

Joint Forces Command regrets the events that took place in Gibraltar on the 8th February. This includes the events at Gibraltar International Airport and the dispute as to jurisdiction that led to the confusion by British Forces Gibraltar over the appropriate handling of the individual suspected of downloading indecent material whilst in the United Kingdom; and the detailed management of this particular case. It was the view of Joint Forces Command that the case was to be subject to exclusive Service Police jurisdiction – which turned out not to be correct. This was on the basis that Joint Forces Command was unaware of any potential offences that had been committed by the alleged suspect whilst in Gibraltar or of your suspicions in this respect.

It is acknowledged that in responding to your desire to explore potential illegal activities by the suspect, Joint Forces Command and subsequently British Forces Gibraltar did not immediately recognise the jurisdictional legal primacy in this case for you to investigate, and if necessary, prosecute the individual were he to be found to have committed a similar or other offence in Gibraltar. I want to reassure you that subsequent additional advice, including at a senior legal level in the Ministry of Defence, recognises the legal primacy point in this case. Joint Forces Command now, therefore, fully understands and respects your legal primacy in this case as the law currently stands today.

We are aware that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has prioritised the drafting of legislation and an MoU that will clearly spell out our respective, complementary jurisdictional roles. It would also be highly desirable for agreement to be reached between our respective agencies setting out the practical application of jurisdiction for the period between now and the enactment of such legislation.

In the course of the events that unfolded on the 8th February, it is considered very important by Joint Forces Command that you should understand that at all material times our people acted in good faith and to implement the direction and guidance provided by Joint Forces Command and Provost Marshal (Navy). They were not on a "frolic of their own" in any sense and were therefore not consciously seeking to deny your officers jurisdiction, or disrespect your officers' lawful instructions. They were acting entirely in keeping with the instructions they were receiving, albeit, with the benefit of hindsight, in a manner which did not assist in resolving matters as expeditiously as all would have preferred.

I think it is important for you to be made aware that there was a decision, as part of the Joint Forces Command application of our duty of care to our personnel, to return the suspect to the United Kingdom for the individual's own welfare. Again, this decision was based on the view that jurisdiction to deal with the offence in question remained exclusively with Forces law enforcement agencies – which turned out not to be correct. It was in pursuance of this requirement and judgement that more appropriate care would be afforded the suspect in the United Kingdom, that British Forces Gibraltar personnel were instructed to facilitate the opportunity of a military aircraft to both return the individual to the United Kingdom and to transport potentially incriminating evidence for forensic examination. I should clarify that, fundamentally, this was because the facilities at RAF Brize Norton were considered more appropriate for looking after the individual than those of British Forces Gibraltar; and, ordinarily, the capability for Service Police investigations overseas which require electronic and communications forensic analysis is held in the United Kingdom. It is in seeking to implement this approach that, unfortunately, personnel from British Forces Gibraltar had what were clearly unfortunate altercations with officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police who were acting in the lawful execution of their duties. I cannot emphasise to you how much we regret, with the benefit of hindsight and the later legal advice we have received, that we were not better able to cooperate with those of your officers in question. These altercations should not have happened and any active disagreement as to jurisdiction should, in any event, have been handled in the more dignified and usual manner for issues of this type. I must express to you in particular our genuine regret to hear accusations that British Forces Gibraltar personnel behaved disrespectfully towards officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police and that they were inconsiderate of the requirements under which your officers were seeking to undertake their lawful activities and investigations. That is not in the nature of the relationship we have long enjoyed between our organisations.

It is hoped, sincerely, that these events can be used to assist us all in a clearer understanding of the Royal Gibraltar Police's jurisdiction in respect of criminal matters and British Forces Gibraltar's application of service law; and that – looking ahead – there are considerable opportunities to enable our respective law enforcement agencies and leadership to work even more closely together. There are numerous significant opportunities to enable this: the routine business of service people in Gibraltar; the joint policing that is usually put in place for the arrival and duration of Royal Navy warships and submarines; and the ambition that we all have to draw further on various Gibraltar Parliament statutes anticipated to be enacted later this year and which will provide a stronger and clearer platform for continued co-operation and enhanced security measures and resilience for Gibraltar.

It is hoped that this contextual information is of assistance in providing an appropriate and accurate background for many of the actions that Service Personnel took in the course of their duties in respect of the events and associated interactions that flowed from the 8th February incident.

Joint Forces Command assures you that there was not and never envisaged any intention to attempt to fetter the Royal Gibraltar Police's jurisdiction. That it appeared otherwise is deeply regretted. It is sincerely hoped that our future interactions are on a more positive basis and that we collectively work together to enhance the security of the United Kingdom and Gibraltar.

Yours sincerely,

Tony Radakin

Waterson Enquiry

1. We would like to understand the reasons why the RGP did not of its own accord choose to provide the GPA with the documentation relating to the Waterson enquiry, particularly when a matter as serious and public as this arose and which has implications in respect of the effectiveness and probity of the RGP? [This question will be directed to CoP in the first instance.]

2. Were the RGP's actions throughout proportional? (In particular, reference should be made to why restrain was shown on 5 occasions by Superintendent McGrail, why RGP vehicles were stationed on the runway, and why the 3 senior MOD officers were not arrested immediately.) [This question will be directed to Superintendent McGrail in the first instance.]

3. Were the consequences of the RGP's restraint on 5 occasions considered? If so, were those consequences re-evaluated by the RGP on a continuing basis during the process of obstruction demonstrated by the MOD officers in question? Should the traffic gridlock across Gibraltar have been avoided at any stage of that process? [This question will be directed to Superintendent McGrail in the first instance.]

4. Does the RGP have the power to lift the vehicular and pedestrian barriers on the runway at any time when no planes are landing or taking off? If so, why did the RGP not lift the vehicular and pedestrian barriers on the runway at any time during the incident given that the MOD aircraft was not on the runway? [This question will be directed to Superintendent Ullger in the first instance.]

5. What evidence and facts that may be relevant (if any) remain to be provided to the GPA in respect of this incident? [This question will be directed to Superintendent McGrail in the first instance.]

6. Why were the 3 senior MOD officers released? What action was taken by the RGP against the two drivers of MOD vehicles on the runway on the date of the incident? [This question will be directed to CoP in the first instance.]

7. What steps have the RGP taken to: (i) learn from this incident; (ii) collaborate with the MOD; and (iii) ensure that this type of incident does not occur again? [This question will be directed to CoP in the first instance.]

8. What could have been done differently with the benefit of hindsight? [This question will be directed to CoP in the first instance.]

"Dear Chief Minister,

Re.: Watterson Inquiry

I refer to your request to the Gibraltar Police Authority ("GPA") to enquire from the Royal Gibraltar Police ("RGP") into the events that transpired on and around 8th February 2017 relating to Sergeant Watterson (the "Watterson Incident").

We have reviewed the relevant reports prepared by the RGP in respect of the Watterson Incident, and have further discussed and raised questions relating to the effectiveness and probity of policing in Gibraltar by the RGP in connection therewith. In particular, we have interviewed the Commissioner of Police and his most senior ranking officers in relation to the Watterson Incident, being careful to understand the thought processes and considerations of the RGP officers involved in the Watterson Incident, including but not limited to (i) whether the consequences of the actions and restraint of the relevant RGP officers throughout the Watterson Incident were considered and deliberated; (ii) whether the actions of, and restraint shown by, the relevant RGP officers throughout the Watterson Incident were necessary and proportional; and (iii) whether with the benefit of hindsight any actions could or should have been taken differently by the RGP.

The GPA has come to the firm conclusion that the actions of and the restraint shown by the relevant RGP officers during the Watterson Incident were considered, deliberated, entirely proportional and highly commendable. As such, we do not doubt the effectiveness and probity of the policing demonstrated by the RGP in respect of the Watterson Incident. We would take the liberty of adding, though it may not be our place to do so, that the actions of certain MOD personnel in respect of the Watterson Incident deserve censure and that you should consider whether a full inquiry ought to be undertaken by an body independent of the RGP and the MOD so that lessons may be learnt from this incident.

I remain at your disposal should you wish to discuss this matter further.

Yours sincerely,

John Goncalves"

ROYAL GIBRALTAR POLICE

E. Yome QPM CPM
Commissioner of Police

15th November 2017

Ian McGrail
Superintendent
Crime Protective Services
Royal Gibraltar Police

Mr McGrail attended the SCC 2013 and was given a 'Pass' Grade similar to that attained by Mr Ullger.

He had a good course and I attended his graduation and spoke to his course directors.

It was evident that his peers and managers thought highly of Ian and shows he had embraced the learning as he progressed through the course.

His course director and syndicate director both agreed that Ian grew in confidence as he went along and clearly understood how he was required to be less tactical and more strategic in his considerations.

I met his peers socially and you could see how Ian was now a popular member of the syndicate. Whilst working in this new environment, tackling new procedures, laws and negotiations, Ian showed humility of his lack of knowledge in these areas which in turn made his peers embrace him with support.

You will note that his final report is a positive one but one which elaborates on the progress he made throughout and although it is now four years ago, there was no mention of being ready, for the Executive Level, which in itself is an unusual omission.

The question thereafter is whether he has made sufficient progress during this time to step up to the Executive Level.

Mr McGrail was not promoted to Chief Superintendent as at the time I had reservations whether he was ready. I found him at times to be too autocratic, very strict and not having the balance required in order not to demoralise the officer but to use his managerial skills to coach, teach and develop that officer to avoid a repetition of whatever was lacking.

Mr McGrail took my decision rather badly although I did explain to him the reasons why, he did not accept these and this was reflected in his approach to me in months to come.

Although Mr McGrail will never admit this, I believe this reality moment made him look at himself and today, in my opinion, he is a better person, manager and leader.

During this past four years Mr McGrail has mellowed and demonstrated a softer side to him.

In 2007 Mr McGrail attended the Federal Bureau of Investigation Academy, United States Department of Justice Course and did extremely well.

He obtained a Graduate Certificate of Achievement from the University of Virginia in Criminal Justice Education.

I will now follow the same National Competences applicable to able to discharge the role of Chief Constable/Commissioner:-

Serving the Public

Mr McGrail has been at the forefront of various information and awareness programmes in relation to Counter Terrorism.

He has been instrumental at building public confidence in the mitigation measures the RGP has in place in the event of a terrorist incident. Together with his teams he pioneered the 'Stay Safe' Programme where over 3000 members from the public and private sectors were exposed to talks on how to react and keep safe in the event of an attack.

Leading Strategic Change

As chair of the Small Island Forum I tasked Mr McGrail in being the Gibraltar Lead in coordinating the Crown Dependency Jurisdictions to provide training on Cyber Security after we were able to acquire funding from the EU.

This is developing nicely and Mr McGrail has been key in bringing a Cyber Security Company to Gibraltar to promote this business case. Such was the success of the first conference, opened by the Chief Minister and attended by His Excellency The Governor that a second conference has been arranged for April 2018.

In taking office in 2012, I knew that work was required on the Counter Terrorism front, i.e.

1. External Links needed to be established as we had lost them.
2. We were in need of Counter Terrorism Legislation which was lacking.
3. Table Top and Live CT Exercises needed to be organised.

Well Mr McGrail stood up to the plate and took on all these projects in addition to his daily supervisory role of leading the Crime and Protective Services Division.

He travelled to the UK and then to Spain and re-established these vital links with our security partners which remain in place today.

Mr McGrail drafted a Terrorism bill which is now with the law draftsman.
And;
There have been two live exercises and table top exercises to test our response to such an eventuality.

The creation of the Gibraltar Contingency Council was formed as a result of this work and although co-chaired by the Chief Minister and His Excellency The Governor, the RGP has pushed this on.

Additionally as a result of funding that I was able to acquire, using our CT Security links, we were able to secure a good counter prevention tool through Op 'SERVATOR' which will be rolled out prior to Christmas. I sent Mr McGrail to London to secure this training which no doubt will be invaluable to the RGP and Gibraltar in the fight against Crime and Terrorism. This training has now started to be rolled out by Christmas.

Managing Performance
Mr McGrail defines what good performance looks like. He demands high standards and allows his subordinates to take decisions and empowers them to find their way but then expects them to stand by them. He has a very much hands on approach and is current in all investigations which his division is dealing with.

His demands of others is supported by the demands he places upon himself and his own heavy workload demonstrates this.

As a Superintendent with Mr McGrail as one of my Chief Inspectors, I would supervise his daily work which was always of a high standard and this continues to this day.

Professionalism
Mr McGrail always acts with integrity and has very high ethical standards and values. He leads by example in everything he does.

At the SCC he used his time to consolidate what type of leader he wanted to be and how as a leader he can influence the culture of the organisation. This has certainly been the case with me where we have seen dramatic change in our people who are now empowered to take decisions without fearing any reprisals for a bad or mistaken judgement call.

Without knowing what Mr McGrail has set out for his vision for the force, I cannot comment on this but I sincerely hope that if successful he continuous in this path and does not return to an 'all manage and decided from the top style' by being too autocratic once again.

Working With Others

Mr McGrail as previously stated at my request has been establishing links with external partners and building relationships along the way.

He is an honest man who sometimes in the past has been too forthright coming across too intimidating and demoralising but as I stated before, he appears to have soften his approach which is good and certainly part of his development as a Senior Leader.

No one should be above learning something new every single day.

Effective Communication

Mr McGrail is extremely eloquent when he speaks to people especially doing so with external partners/agencies and media. He is a trained Media Officer like all my other senior managers which allows them to know what and how to communicate Police business.

He has been negotiating, planning and effecting change for the organisation by personally working with others to achieve the organisational objectives.

He maintains personal links with his peers that were with him at the SCC and in doing so has been able to obtain support for training, procurement and deployment.

All these attributes which are nurtured as you progress through the ranks place you in good stead in these senior positions, but they are not given freely, they need to be earned through continued work by being an effective communicator.

Conclusion

Mr McGrail embraced the Strategic Command Course and his time at the FBI Academy and has done very well in both. It is sometimes difficult competing at those courses when you have the added barriers of another legislation/practices/procedures, so this in itself says a lot of the character of our officers attending and Mr McGrail is no exception and this is reflected in his final report.

At the SCC he was advised to shadow his 'Chief Officer' to both understand the role of 'Gold' and managing at the Executive Level. His report at the time was one of progress. The question to be asked is whether he has progressed sufficiently to take over the force. I have definitely seen a change but can only hope this is not short lived should he be successful in attaining the post of Commissioner.

Programme Directors Final Report

FULL NAME:	Ian McGrail
RANK/ROLE:	Superintendent
FORCE/ ORGANISATION	Royal Gibraltar Police

Achievement against the 'Executive' level Personal Qualities as described by the Policing Professional Framework (PPF) and the twelve learning outcomes as approved by the SCC Professional Reference Group.

Grading Criteria

- Each delegate is assessed throughout the course against the 7 Personal Qualities for the Executive (ACPO / Force Command Team) level as described within the Policing Professional Framework (PPF), cognisance is also taken of how each delegate has preformed against the twelve learning outcomes as approved by the SCC PRG.
- The assessment is based on observed behaviour and the participants' development towards, and achievement of the required standard set by the PPF and the learning outcomes.
- This report is based on evidence gathered and collated during the Strategic Command Course and has been triangulated with the reports on each participant provided by Chief Constables and SPNAC.
- This report is focused on a candidate's capacity to operate at first tier executive level (ACC, Commander or Assistant Chief Officer). It is not an indicator of further potential.
- Each delegate is awarded one of the following grades:- Pass with outstanding(s), Pass or Fail.
- Where appropriate the grades will acknowledge areas of particular strengths as well as identifying ongoing development needs.
- Every delegate will leave the SCC with a development plan which has been agreed between the delegate and their syndicate director. This will make reference where appropriate to the delegates performance against the twelve learning outcomes during the SCC

Syndicate Directors Summary of Performance

Personal Quality	Achieved	Outstanding	Not Achieved	Evidence of performance and achievement
Serving the Public Promotes a real belief in public service, focusing on what matters to the public and will best serve their interests. Ensures that all staff understand the expectations, changing needs and concerns of different communities, and strive to address them. Builds public confidence by actively engaging with different communities, agencies and strategic stakeholders, developing effective partnerships at a local and national level. Understands partners' perspectives and priorities, working co-operatively with them to develop future public services within budget constraints, and deliver the best possible overall service to the public.	✓			Ian's policing context is substantially different to that of his UK colleagues in many ways. Notably, as austerity causes British policing to contract and be ever more conscious of cost and efficiency, Gibraltar has no financial issues or concerns and they continue in a growth economy. Despite this Ian has demonstrated a keen interest in learning how to make policing more efficient and effective. He has therefore taken time to learn lessons from the UK policing experience, in particular from the Business Skills Exercise, which he now intends to use on his return to Gibraltar. Ian has demonstrated a genuine commitment to ensure that the public are getting the best value for money. He also used the Business Skills Exercise and his organisational visit to learn about the concept of integrated offender management and to consider how this may be implemented within Gibraltar to support policing efforts to better manage offenders as well as to reduce crime and victimisation.
Leading Strategic Change Thinks in the long term, establishing a compelling vision based on the values of the Police Service, and a clear direction for the force. Instigates and delivers structural and cultural change, thinking beyond the constraints of current ways of working, and is prepared to make radical change when required. Identifies better ways to deliver value for money services that meet both local and national needs,	✓			Ian has a wealth of experience as a tactical commander within Gibraltar and has embraced the opportunity of the SCC to open his mind to more strategic issues and to developing a wider perspective on policing. He has started to demonstrate more lateral thinking on issues and is keen to continue with this development in the longer term. In encouraging creativity and innovation within the force and partner organisations.				his new role he will deal with a wide range of senior stakeholders and feels the experience of the SCC has assisted his preparation for this. A number of the speakers have talked about the importance of not only being strategic in outlook, but also knowing the detail and knowing when to dip down into it to satisfy yourself that all is well. This aspect of senior leadership resonates well for Ian as it suits his personal style.

Leading the Workforce Inspires people to meet challenging organisational goals, creating and maintaining the momentum for change. Gives direction and states expectations clearly. Talks positively about policing and what it can achieve, building pride and self-esteem. Creates enthusiasm and commitment throughout the force by rewarding good performance, and giving genuine recognition and praise. Promotes learning and development within the force, giving honest and constructive feedback to colleagues and investing time in coaching and mentoring staff.	✓			Ian recognises the importance of being able to communicate at a strategic level and to do so confidently, with clarity, in order to lead others. He has worked very hard on this area during the course and has often stepped out of his comfort zone to present and to improve his ability. He presented to the Workforce panels during Business Skills Exercise and was commended for espousing a brave range of recommendations. He also presented the syndicate's findings to the Police and Crime Commissioner and acted as a lead negotiator in Partnership, Negotiating and Influencing Exercise. Ian is not afraid to share his experiences and has spoken passionately about how a leader can set the tone for the culture of an organisation, for good or for ill. He has used the time on the course to reflect on his personal leadership style and how he wishes to develop this in the future.
Managing Performance Translates the vision into action by establishing a clear strategy and ensuring appropriate structures are in place to deliver it. Sets ambitious but achievable timescales and deliverables, and monitors progress to ensure strategic	✓			Ian has invested a great deal of time understanding what good performance looks like for Policing and how evidence based research can be used to professionalise how services are provided. In the Partnership, objectives are met. Identifies and removes blockages to performance, managing the workforce and resources to deliver maximum value for money. Defines what good performance looks like, highlighting good practice. Confronts underperformance and ensures it is addressed. Delegates responsibilities appropriately and empowers people to make decisions, holding them to account for delivery.				Negotiating and Influencing Exercise Ian was a leading negotiator for the Police Service and was able to articulate the negotiating position that the group were adopting as well as outlining what was sufficient outcomes they were seeking. This was based upon a desire to involve the community in designing the solutions to the problems they faced, with the Police role being seen as the supporter/facilitator of this process. He did receive positive feedback from the group on how he had portrayed their agreed points of negotiation. In particular they is how he had not imparted all of the group's negotiation points in one input but a more thoughtfully edited. Conversely in the Strategic Questions Exercise syndicate Ian took on a more supportive role, helping to write and prepare the presentation of others to deliver. In this syndicate he especially enjoyed working with others towards a shared goal, checking progress and trusting others to deliver their components parts.

Professionalism Acts with integrity, in line with the values and ethical standards of the Police Service. Delivers on promises, demonstrating personal commitment, energy and drive to get things done. Defines and reinforces standards, demonstrating these personally and fostering a culture of personal responsibility throughout the force. Asks for and acts on feedback on own approach, continuing to learn and adapt to new circumstances. Takes responsibility for making tough or unpopular decisions, demonstrating courage and resilience in difficult situations. Remains calm and professional under pressure and in conditions of uncertainty.	✓			Ian has used the time on the SCC to consolidate his thinking on the type of leader he is and what values drive him. He found the session on leadership deramment very interesting and has considered what this means for him. He has actively participated in discussions around leadership and ethics and now has a clear sense of his vision for policing. He has shown that he is willing to share his personal experiences to help his own learning as well as that of others. He has spoken passionately about how a leader can Openly acknowledges shortcomings in service and committing the right.				set the tone for the culture of an organisation, for good or for ill. He is clear about his personal value set and the kind of leader he aspires to be.

Decision Making Assimilates complex information quickly, weighing up alternatives and making sound, timely decisions. Gathers and considers all relevant and available information, seeking out and listening to advice from specialists. Asks incisive questions to test facts and assumptions, and gain a full understanding of the situation. Identifies the key issues clearly, and the interrelationship between different factors. Considers the wider impact and implications of different options at a local and national level, assessing the costs, risks and benefits of each. Prepared to make the ultimate decision, even in conditions of ambiguity and uncertainty. Makes clear proportionate and justifiable decisions, reviewing these as necessary.	✓			Ian is able to consider complex issues quickly and to identify an appropriate level of prioritisation. In the Serious Crime Exercise he challenged the approach of other colleagues who wanted to address some wider issues, but were not concentrating on the urgent crime in action that was occurring. Ian went to St Giles Trust for his organisational visit. The team received some outstanding feedback from the Trust for the way they had approached the visit, assessed/assimilated information and then developed meaningful recommendations for improvement. In giving feedback the CEO wrote "(I) feel this has been one of those wonderfully mutually beneficial successes. My team (were) hugely impressed by the helpful insights and observations in the report the team produced and that we will act upon...(their) report is extremely timely and of the highest calibre."
Working with Others Builds effective working relationships through clear communication and a collaborative approach. Maintains visibility and ensures communication processes work effectively throughout the force and with external bodies. Consults widely and involves people in decision-making, speaking in a way they understand and can engage with. Treats people with respect and dignity regardless of their background or circumstances, promoting equality and the elimination of discrimination. Treats people as individuals, showing tact, empathy and compassion. Negotiates	✓			At the outset of the SCC Ian was unsure how he would fit in to the syndicate and how best to pitch his interventions. He showed great moral and personal courage in disclosing this to his colleagues early on. This endeared him to the group, who were keen to support him. Importantly though, this honesty also encouraged others who had similar feelings of uncertainty to voice them and feel safe in doing so. Ian's humility and example was an encouragement to others. This initial candour effectively with local and national bodies, representing the interests of the Police Service. Sells ideas convincingly, setting out the benefits of a particular approach, and striving to reach mutually beneficial solutions. Expresses own views positively and constructively. Fully commits to team decisions.				led to him being encouraged and supported by his colleagues and to him being able to play a full and active part in the SCC. Ian then became more comfortable and he settled in very well. Even when topics have been new to him, he has engaged fully in the sessions and in all the exercises. Ian has demonstrated a pleasant and amenable manner. He has integrated well with his colleagues and has a sociable and engaging style. His peers have given him feedback that they find him open, sincere and people focussed. Ian is a mediator who seeks harmony in the syndicate. If any tension has appeared, he has tried to manage it or deflect it. He did this well at Tullialan when there were some strong exchanges of view within the syndicate. His timely intervention and steering of the conversation enabled a more conducive environment for discussion.

Development Plan

Ian and I have discussed his development needs as he completes the SCC and returns to a new role in Gibraltar. These are:-

- To apply the learning from the SCC in his new role, as ante.
- To continue to develop his ability to communicate effectively at a strategic level. Ian is aware that he can be very tactical and has worked hard to develop this throughout the SCC. However he is keen to continue to raise the level of his discussion and debate.
- To develop a greater insight into the role of Gold through shadowing his Chief Officer and through formal training and accreditation processes.
- To maintain and develop his UK policing networks to assist him in keeping up to date with developments across the Service.

Syndicate Directors Executive Summary: ACC Daw [illegible]

Ian has embraced the opportunity that the Strategic Command Course has offered him. Whilst the policing context that he operates in is completely different to that in the British Isles, he has worked hard to understand issues, concepts and nuances and to consider how he can learn from experience here and then put that learning into practice once he returns to Gibraltar. Initially Ian was unsure about how he would fit in to the SCC and his syndicate. This was compounded by a pressurised early exercise on a topic he was unfamiliar with, Integrated Offender Management. He openly expressed his concerns and then was supported by the syndicate. He quickly adapted to the work and has played an active and enthusiastic role throughout. He particularly enjoyed the module in Scotland.

Ian has grown in confidence throughout the SCC and has been exposed to more strategic perspectives. This has broadened his thinking and helped him to be less tactical in his considerations. This is an area he is keen to develop further over the coming years. Ian should be pleased with his progress on the SCC and I wish him well for the future.

Programme Directors Report

Ian has worked hard throughout the SCC 2013 and should be pleased with the progress he has made. Overseas delegates have the additional pressure of learning about British Policing as well as about themselves as leaders. Ian has been keen not to miss the opportunity this has presented and will look to use what he has learned when he gets home. Ian has integrated well into his syndicate and the course as a whole and has been an enthusiastic delegate. On a personal level he has shown a real desire to learn and has been disarmingly honest about his personal journey, which is to his credit.

Well done, Ian and good luck for the future.

SECTION D: OVERALL PERFORMANCE
PERFORMANCE RATING	3/4

Use the space below to justify your individual performance, add your individual key achievements, main strengths and any areas for improvement.

- Influenced the creation of a blue light forum to enhance inter-service operability, make so in the CT-ARENA.
- Networking enhancement with UK, Spanish, Portugese + Moroccan law enforcement agencies.
- Improved personal self-reflection which in turn aids my outlook

SECTION E: REFLECTION ON YOUR PERFORMANCE

1. Were you made aware of your individual objectives?	YES	(NO)
2. Did you have regular opportunities to discuss your work and action points?	YES	NO
3. Have the action points from the last appraisal been carried out?	YES	NO

4. Has the past year been good, bad or satisfactory? Why?

This past year has been a challenging one because of the security landscape and how we are adjusting to it. Internally we have also gone through a major paradigm shift on how we assess demand v resources. On both fronts I feel satisfied with my output.

Use the space below to add your thoughts and reflections.

The service is progressing in leaps and bounds and I often sit back to reflect and absorb that I am one of those drivers for the change and it gives me great satisfaction that we are moving in the direction we are. Some times I am too harsh on myself which can bring a degree of misery ~~on myself~~ on oneself.

SECTION F: SUPPORTING YOUR PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT PLAN

1. What parts of your job do you:

a) Do best? Contact with staff + teams - make myself available to them.

b) Do less well? Time Management / Delegation of work.

c) Have difficulty with? Having good impact when negotiating.

d) Fail to enjoy? - Spending too much time in office behind computer desk

2. What action could be taken to improve your performance in your current position:

a) By you? Personal organisation to be improved.

b) By your line manager?

3. What do you like/dislike about working in this organisation?

+ves - my contribution to making Gibraltar the safe place it is.

-ves - the sometimes unfair media attention and wrong perception certain sectors of the public have towards the RGP.

ROYAL GIBRALTAR POLICE

E. Yome QPM CPM
Commissioner of Police

15th November 2017

Richard Ullger
Superintendent
Planning, Development and Support Division
Royal Gibraltar Police

Mr Ullger attended the SCC 2016 and passed this extensive course with flying colours as explained to me by the Course Directors, Chief Constable Alex Marshall and Jacqui Sheer QPM, when I attended his graduation.

The final grade is a pass which is the highest grade possible for overseas students who are not able to progress to this course via the Police National Assessment Centre (PNAC).

Notwithstanding Mr Ullger did very well with Mr Marshall commenting how he adopted to processes and procedures which were different to those back at force and had fulfilled all that was required of him especially when presenting in the Business Module which was held in Scotland.

Jacqui Sheer was also very complimentary on how Mr Ullger had tackled the course and how he had engaged with his peers and worked very well within his syndicate.

The above demonstrates the person he is, always willing to embrace new challenges working as a part of a team.

Mr Ullger attended the FBI Academy and achieve a 'Graduate Certificate of Achievement' with the University of Virginia, in Criminal Justice Education.

Additionally he was selected amongst his peers as the Sectional Representative for Section One of his course and as a result he was asked to present on behalf of his course, to the FBI Director. He was congratulated by the FBI Director for having been sol selected which was deemed to be a great honour.

The following are the National Competencies necessary to discharge the role of the Chief Constable/Commissioner:-

Serving the Public
Mr Ullger has been for many years at the forefront of Neighbourhood Policing and in particular the youth, the vulnerable and the elderly.

Prior to me taking office in 2012, Mr Ullger as an Inspector and then on promotion to Chief Inspector was working in Neighbourhood/Community Policing under my direct Command as Superintendent Operations.

Mr Ullger shared my vision and considerable work within schools and youth clubs was already underway, but only required the full endorsement from the top, which was sometimes lacking. (This was my main driver for seeking promotion to Commissioner).

He shared and still shares my vision embracing the ethos of Prevention through Education and work which starts at the very early years.

Leadership Strategic Change
Mr Ullger has been at the centre of Strategic Change of the RGP with lead on the Firearms Working Group, Training, Procurement and Recruitment.

When you take these in isolation these business areas have been vast and so much work has gone into developing them. Mr Ullger has been instrumental in achieving these e.g.:-

Firearms:- The entire licensing system has been redone.

Training:- This crucial area is now a professional and accredited domain with officers progressing to their respective levels within their specialised fields.

Procurement:- Mr Ullger set up a Prioritisation Board which now ensures what is required to continue its business.

Recruitment:- The entire setup of this business area has been evolving and today together with his team, the course has been further streamlined to make this more efficient and value for money.

Managing Performance
Richard's key traits is his humility and quiet and assumed style which is seen as a real strength in his police leadership style and this is reflected in his SCC Final Report.

With his quiet disposition he gets the job done very effectively and has all the managerial tools necessary to achieve the objectives.

Mr Ullger demands professionalism, respect for others and courtesy. His own polite educated upbringing is a true reflection of his character as a leader but he is not a pushover and expects a return on his investment.

Professionalism

Without wishing to repeat myself, this competency goes hand in hand with managing People and Performance. If there is anything that annoys Mr Ullger, is for officers to disrespect our corporate image. He is a very respectful, smart and polite individual and demands this from his officers. His integrity is above reproach and will not accept anything less from his officers. He is a very meticulous person and will always go to any extreme to achieve that professional outlook which officers should aspire to.

Decision Making

Mr Ullger is his own man when faced with adversity and his decision making is sound and balanced.

As a trained Firearms Commander he will evaluate all the information and intelligence at his disposal, seek the views of his peers but will then make his own decision in dealing with any incident. These values are transferable to any other policing business area which has kept him steadfast throughout the years in service.

Working with Others

I would say Mr Ullger is the most approachable of my Superintendents, always with an open door policy.

His friendly and polite disposition makes him a target for officers, even from other divisions to see his counsel and advice. He is a good coach. He has developed working partnerships with external partners and stakeholders and on more than one occasion, when I have been away or unavailable, agencies have asked to see him and no other.

He has very good interpersonal skills which allows him to deal with all types of roles, from being ADC to HE The Governor to policing any public order situation.

He is very well liked and respected by external partners which in turn allows him to navigate and negotiate in various forums.

Effective Communication

Mr Ullger is an articulate speaker and c mes across very well. As a trained Media Officer he is able to inform people of things that we do, explain the rationale behind it but maintains his credibility intact.

He is a very eloquent and effective communicator; I would say that this is one of his strengths.

As reflected in his final report, he has a persuadable manner that encourages people to engage with him which in turn allows him to lead with a quiet authority.

Conclusion

I concur with his final report. Mr Ullger is ready to work at the executive level.

I am fully confident that he will be a good Commissioner not only for the RGP but for the Community of Gibraltar.

Although, I have not read/seen his vision paper I am quietly confident that his ethos is very much aligned to those that I have and that he will take the RGP forward to the next level. He shares my values and with so many challenges ahead, I have no doubt that he will succeed.

Deputy Director report

The 2016 SCC was described by the external and police speakers as thoughtful, enquiring and engaging. Across the modules the course members asked searching and pertinent questions which encouraged the speakers to expand upon their presentation and provide greater learning opportunities for everyone.

Richard has been an active member of the course and his syndicate across all of the modules. In some instances the material was not relevant or new, but that did not affect his willingness to join in, ask pertinent questions of the speakers or to feedback the views of the syndicate in plenary. He has a quieter style, but quickly gained the respect of his colleagues due to his demeanour, his willingness to share his experiences and his genuine interest in the experiences of others.

As with all non-UK participants on the course Richard was provided with a scenario relevant to his jurisdiction for the Professional Policing Skills assessment. He was asked to provide a written document outlining how he would manage the strategic command and requirements presented by the scenario and this was followed by an assessed conversation with two executive level police officers. Those assessors commented that he was 'very clear on the challenges his scenario would cause, the gaps in skills and capabilities and how at a strategic level he would command and seek support.'

Richard achieved a pass in his written change assignment, demonstrating his understanding of the issues facing leaders during times of change. He presented his syndicate's findings in the change management discussion to the whole course and is a confident, clear and respected speaker. His syndicate director wrote that he had 'been enthused by the presentations particularly on organisational change, the tipping point and Kotter.

Richard worked with a new group of colleagues in Scotland to develop a presentation to a panel led by the Police Scotland Chief Constable. Richard enjoyed the outreach work in preparation for the presentation which was about a new community engagement strategy for the force and he used the experience to discuss and explore new ideas for enhancing neighbourhood policing in his home force.

Richard achieved a pass in his leadership assignment. His syndicate director noted that 'one of Richard's key character traits is his humility and quiet, assured style. This is real strength in his policing leadership.'

Richard has performed well across all of the modules. He has a personable manner that encourages people to engage with him and allows him to lead with a quiet authority. He is ready to work at the executive level.

SCC course overview

Professional Policing Skills

Delegates will examine the component parts of an effective command strategy and how the National Decision Model (NDM) applies to the strategic command of incidents. They will explore the complexities of historic investigations whilst managing current demand. They will engage with strategic partners including the National Crime Agency and other security services and manage threat and risk. They will examine the responsibilities of a Strategic Coordinating Group (SCG) and establishing the need for a SCG. Finally, they will be able to manage and authorise undercover and covert human intelligence source operations.

Business and Strategic Partnerships

To prepare for executive leadership delegates will investigate the roles and responsibilities of directors and senior responsible officers. They will explore ways to lead strategic transformational change to deliver an ethical and value for money service to meet current and future needs. They will also investigate how to embed accountable and transparent workforce strategies, including effective performance management and managing discipline throughout the organisation.

To meet the challenges of modern public sector business they will deepen their understanding of the challenges and benefits of procurement and outsourcing. To gain a deeper understanding of organisations and how they work they will learn and use techniques of effective consultancy.

Public services do not exist in isolation. The leaders of the future will be working together to deliver services. Delegates will examine the changing political environment of public services. They will explore the importance of developing collaborative and productive working partnerships, leading across boundaries involving a variety of governance systems.

Managing risk, embedding integrity, promoting EDHR and wellbeing and evidenced-based practice will be integrated throughout. The Business Skills element is being delivered by Cass Business School. The partnership element is delivered in collaboration with Police Scotland.

Leadership and Ethics

Delegates will explore current and future strategic leadership challenges at the executive level. Through the course they will develop a more detailed understanding of integrity issues as they affect them personally and the organisations they lead. They will also explore the importance of developing cultures that promote equality, diversity and human rights, ethical decision-making and practice that is based on valid and reliable evidence. They will evaluate different approaches to leadership critically, raise their levels of self-awareness and develop their own leadership style. Delegates will develop ways of promoting effective team working at the executive level and enhance their personal political awareness to be able to negotiate, influence and lead with integrity in a complex environment.

Policing professional framework – personal qualities

Assistant Chief Constable/Assistant Chief Officer

Personal Qualities

Decision making

Assimilates complex information quickly, weighing up alternatives and making sound, timely decisions. Gathers and considers all relevant and available information, seeking out and listening to advice from specialists. Asks incisive questions to test facts and assumptions, and gain a full understanding of the situation. Identifies the key issues clearly, and the inter-relationship between different options at a local and national level, assessing the costs, risks and benefits of each. Prepared to make the ultimate decision, even in conditions of ambiguity and uncertainty. Makes clear, proportionate and justifiable decisions, reviewing these as necessary.

Leading strategic change

Thinks in the long term, establishing a compelling vision based on the values of the Police Service, and a clear direction for the force. Instigates and delivers structural and cultural change, thinking beyond the constraints of current ways of working, and is prepared to make radical change when required. Identifies better ways to deliver value for money services that meet both local and national needs, encouraging creativity and innovation within the force and partner organisations.

Leading the workforce

Inspires people to meet challenging organisational goals, creating and maintaining the momentum for change. Gives direction and states expectations clearly. Talks positively about policing and what it can achieve, building pride and self-esteem. Creates enthusiasm and commitment throughout the force by rewarding good performance, and giving genuine recognition and praise. Promotes learning and development within the force, giving honest and constructive feedback to colleagues and investing time in coaching and mentoring staff.

Managing performance

Translates the vision into action by establishing a clear strategy and ensuring appropriate structures are in place to deliver it. Sets ambitious but achievable timescales and deliverables, and monitors progress to ensure strategic objectives are met. Identifies and removes blockages to performance, managing the workforce and resources to deliver maximum value for money. Defines what good practice looks like, highlighting good practice. Confronts underperformance and ensures it is addressed. Delegates responsibilities appropriately and empowers people to make decisions, holding them to account for delivery.

Professionalism

Acts with integrity, in line with the values and ethical standards of the Police Service. Delivers on promises, demonstrating personal commitment, energy and drive to get things done. Defines and reinforces standards, demonstrating these personally and fostering a culture of personal responsibility throughout the force. Asks for and acts on feedback on own approach, continuing to learn and adapt to new circumstances. Takes responsibility for making tough or unpopular decisions, demonstrating courage and resilience in difficult situations. Remains calm and professional under pressure and in conditions of uncertainty. Openly acknowledges shortcomings in service and commits to putting them right.

Serving the Public
Promotes a real belief in public service, focusing on what matters to the public and will best serve their interests. Ensures that all staff understand the expectations, changing needs and concerns of different communities, and strive to address them. Builds public confidence by actively engaging with different communities, agencies and strategic stakeholders, developing effective partnerships at a local and national level. Understands partners' perspectives and priorities, working co-operatively with them to develop future public services within budget constraints, and deliver the best possible overall service to the public.

Working with others
Builds effective working relationships through clear communication and a collaborative approach. Maintains visibility and ensures communication processes work effectively throughout the force and with external bodies. Consults widely and involves people in decision-making, speaking in a way they understand and can engage with. Treats people with respect and dignity regardless of their background or circumstances, promoting equality and the elimination of discrimination. Treats people as individuals, showing tact, empathy and compassion. Negotiates effectively with local and national bodies, representing the interests of the Police Service. Sells ideas convincingly, setting out benefits of a particular approach, and striving to reach mutually beneficial solutions. Expresses own views positively and constructively. Fully commits to team decisions.

CONFIDENTIAL

1st November 2017

Gibraltar Police Authority
25B Casemates Barracks
Casemates Square
Gibraltar

Dear Sirs,

Re:- Application for appointment as Commissioner of The Royal Gibraltar Police

I refer to your recent invitation to apply for the appointment as Commissioner of the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) and would respectfully ask that you accept this letter as my intention to apply for the said appointment.

I feel totally honoured and privileged to be in this position where after over 33 years of public service as a police officer the opportunity arises where I can be considered for the top policing post in Gibraltar. Way back in 1996, when I was competing for promotion to Sergeant, I vividly recall the then Commissioner of Police, the late Joe Canepa QPM, asking where I saw myself in the police service two decades from thereon: I distinctly remember responding bluntly but very focused and saying "right where you are sitting Sir.....and serving as Commissioner of Police!". That desire I expressed at that time is still very much alive now, in fact more alive than ever before because of the splendid career I am enjoying and the vacancy arising.

The role of Commissioner of the RGP, a Constitutional appointment, is enshrined in the Police Act 2006 s.33 which explains that the post holder will have overall command, superintendence, direction and control of the Force together with responsibility for the efficient administration and government of the Force including the proper expenditure of public funds used for the provision of policing services. To be able to properly discharge these legal requirements the post holder needs to meet certain criteria; the following list of competences are what I feel are the necessary personal qualities the post holder should possess. I have included some examples as evidence of key personal achievements aligned with the said list of competences to demonstrate my own qualities for your esteemed consideration and evaluation.

1. Serving the public

The Commissioner of the RGP must be an individual who is already well known and respected in the community and not necessarily only known because of his police career; known and respected in other social circles too. He must be engaging and work to serve the public's interests with all the diversity a modern Gibraltarian community presents. The Commissioner must also work to build public confidence in the RGP and work with Government, the GPA and other partners to build on an overall better service to the public.

Personal evidence
My past involvement in the local sporting scene and scouting movement has cemented lifelong relationships outside my professional life. Similarly, my membership of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment which I only recently suspended and the St John's Ambulance Association has expanded my outreach to the community outside the police environment. I have no doubt that this has aided my ability to engage with the public as I have been seen not only as a police officer but also as an inclusive member of wider society.

As a senior police officer and particularly in my incumbent post as commander of the Crime and Protective Service Division I lead a very dedicated team of detectives dealing with a myriad of disciplines in the crime domain. I have on many occasions been the RGP's 'talking head' reporting on matters of concern to the public as well as offering reassurance when this has been necessary.

I sit in multi-agency committees/groups such as (i) the legally constituted Child Protection Committee, (ii) the Strategic Management Board for Sex Offender Management (soon to also incorporate violent offenders) and the Executive Committee of the Gibraltar Contingencies Council (GCC) which is the tier below the GCC proper. I chair the Joint Operating Working Group [Land] which works towards optimising Gibraltar's security posture in the land environment with a view of identifying existing and emerging threats to this posture. I have stimulated multi-agency debate to develop contingency responses for a marauding terrorist attack and designed, co-ordinated and directed both multi-agency table-tops and live exercises to test these responses.

1. Leading strategic change

It is necessary for the Commissioner to have a convincing vision and that this vision is well aligned to the values of the police service and it that provides clear direction. It is not healthy for a police force to remain static in terms of innovation and change. Whilst I am not an advocate of introducing change simply for the sake of it, I equally recognise that the ever shifting landscape requires constant reviews of how policing is conducted and how resources are allocated. Whilst austerity has not [yet] reached Gibraltar, I irrespectively feel it is good management and business practice to always seek to deliver value for money services and save unnecessary public expenditure. My personal vision for the next 5 years is contained in a separate paper and therefore I do not intend to rehearse it in this letter.

Personal evidence
I would refer you to the accompanying vision paper entitled 'Delivering a safer Gibraltar, through excellence in the provision of policing services'.

For the past 6 years I have been a member of the senior management team which has embedded Commissioner Yome's culture change from a previously micro-managed styled organisation to one that encourages empowerment and inclusion.

During my time as Superintendent in the headquarters and support function and with a view of uplifting our firearms capability, I was able to negotiate with South Wales Police the procurement of (43) firearms making a saving to the RGP of circa £75,000. I also prepared a business case to argue with Government for extra funding for armed policing requirements.

I also acted as the RGP's senior point of contact for the construction project of new the Marine Base at Gun Wharf. From planning/design to physical construction, the project required constant liaison with architects, developers, builders etc - the end result being a modern fit for purpose facility which instils a host of positives in terms of working environment and staff morale.

Following a period of consultation with the rank and file over concerns regarding personal safety and comfort of uniforms for the front line officer I embarked on a process of researching and procuring protective body armour for Force wide issue together with a more comfortable and practical uniform attire. The outcome was well received by the rank and file as indeed the staff association – the workforce now boast stab and ballistic protection vests purpose made for Gibraltar's requirements and climate together with far more practical and comfortable uniform shirts and trousers.

An EU Directive transposed to local legislation placed an extremely administrative cumbersome responsibility on the RGP to do with the provision of case dockets in the native language of the accused person. To overcome this I researched various options and entered in to a contractual arrangement with a translator and interpreter provider in the UK and we now have a 24/7 service to meet all the requirements imposed by law in this regard. Not only does this save significant officer time, the additional enhancement of having translator and interpreter services for most languages spoken in the world is something which in any case would surpass the RGP's or Gibraltar PLC's ability to provide.

Because of the demand and workload carried by certain units currently under my command, I have held consultations with line managers to seek out solutions and have aligned our resources accordingly. This is very evident in the field of Economic Crime where because of new legislations and expectations we have had to restructure the unit to cater for (i) fraud and (ii) money laundering, counter terrorist financing and asset recovery.

I conducted a gap analysis of our existing terrorism laws and provided rationale to Government for their modernisation, a draft of which together with accompanying codes of practice are being considered for enactment. I am also currently engaged with rolling out a programme of capability/capacity uplifting in Counter Terrorism Policing an area which the RGP dearly requires development.

2. Leading the workforce

During my long law enforcement career I have had the privilege of working with and judging different styles of leadership. To a certain extent this experience has allowed for the development of my personal style. Strong leadership is the bedrock of a police service. The Commissioner has to have sufficient character to inspire staff to meet challenges and targets whilst creating an environment of enthusiasm, rewarding good doers and recognising the efforts of staff. Strong leadership is also necessary during challenging/difficult times in order to instil morale. In my view it is important that the Commissioner is visible and connected within the workplace and whilst keeping a strategic outlook, remains sufficiently savvy about the detail and has the ability to dip into it if required.

Personal evidence
A leadership quote which resonates very closely to my thinking is that of the late US General Schwarzkopf, who led a 750,000 strong coalition force to liberate Kuwait when invaded by Iraq in 1991 – the infamous Op Desert Storm. He said, "Leadership is a potent combination of strategy and character. But if you must be without one, be without the strategy". It is sometimes the most simple and overseen actions that can display good leadership. I make it a point of recognising good work by dropping an email to individual officers and when possible I have face to face contact with them, even if these officers are not directly under my command. I have also recommended officers for more formal recognition under the RGP Honours and Awards Policy. Having been a front line officer for most of my career, I know how important it is for senior management to support and be seen to support the front line. To this end and because of the challenges front line officers were facing, I proposed that senior officers made it a point to patrol alongside junior ranks during the most busy periods of the week and this was unanimously accepted and very well received by the staff.

I am the only serving superintendent to have commanded all three divisions in the RGP (Operations – Crime – Support) and can therefore relate to the challenges faced in them together with the different personnel dynamics and leadership traits that have to be applied respectively.

3. Managing performance

A policing vision requires a tactical plan to convert the vision to a reality. The Commissioner should in consultation with his senior team establish a clear strategy with SMART objectives. It is important to navigate through obstacles to performance by removing these obstacles and managing resources to ensure best delivery and value for money. Under-performing officers and the reasons for their poor performance also require attention and intervention in order to redress.

Personal evidence
It is a recognised notion that a happy team reaps better results, so in this regard junior and middle line managers are key to motivating officers – I am a strong promoter of this. In order to better prepare Sergeants and Inspectors as managers/leaders and indeed those constables showing potential as future Sergeants, I organised a series of courses under the auspices of Institute of Leadership and Management which were successfully delivered and completed by 50 officers. The said courses covered personal responsibility in working towards organisational goals – making our managers realise that they are accountable for performance of their teams.

I am a firm believer of turning up for work and putting in an effort for honest day's living and I promulgate this 'philosophy' to my colleagues. Understandingly so, not everyone can produce the same levels of output so I play to the strengths of each individual to extract the best in them.

I am extremely fortunate that Crime and Protective Services Division officers are probably the most self-motivated officers in the organisation and therefore there is very little need for direct intervention on my part. I am, however, very conscious of their welfare as they can become overly engrossed in their tasks to the detriment a reasonable work/life balance. They work in the higher of risk areas and carry the most serious of crime work pulling off great results which significantly contribute to the detection rates published in the annual report.

I have had occasion to address poor performances and lack of commitment to the job, acting to address each instance accordingly with varied levels of success.

4. Professionalism

Honesty, integrity, high values and the best ethical standards depicts the qualities a Commissioner should portray coupled with determination and drive to ensure things get done. Unlike previous eras where it would be unheard of for a Commissioner to acknowledge shortcomings in the service, in my view it is good practice to openly accept any shortcomings and commit to putting them right. During turbulent times, the Commissioner must remain calm and collected when under pressure. He must also take personal responsibility for difficult, contentious or unpopular decisions.

Personal evidence
I have an unblemished discipline record. I was the pioneer in 2001, setting the tone for a wave of senior officers to undertake Higher Education academic studies on police related subjects. In essence, I am of the view that this has enriched the RGP with the setting of higher benchmarks of professionalism and academia to compliment already acquired experience and skill sets.

I encourage the Detective Inspectors in my Division to share their concerns and pressures with me so that [some] of the risk burden is lifted off themselves – this gives them a sense of security whilst I campaign for solutions behind the scenes. They are fully aware that I cannot wave a magic wand and make things happen straight away but they take comfort that senior management have their backs whilst they plough on with criminal case work.

There have been very testing times and situations where the reputation of both the RGP and personal reputation have been at stake. During these times I have always operated with common sense and within the confines of the law, with certainty and conviction and without fear or favour. Similarly, I have managed very sensitive matters keeping operational security in tact.

5. Decision making

The ability to assimilate copious amounts of information and make quick and spontaneous decisions is a competency that a Commissioner must command. There is also a requirement for the decision making process to be justified and rationalised. In assuming responsibility for ultimate decisions, even when these have been made on the back of unclear circumstances, the Commissioner must consider the wider impact and implications that fall out from the decision(s) in question. It is also important that a process is invoked that allows for a review of these critical decisions to ensure that they remain fit for purpose.

Personal evidence
The National Decision Model is the recognised model to follow in the UK police service. The RGP have followed suit and I was the first RGP officer to be exposed to this model in 2011-12 and commence its local application. It is a model that if applied properly can withstand scrutiny at different levels.

I readily accept where my levels of knowledge and experience can take me when it comes to decision making, more so in critical circumstances. Consequently, I have had to rely on advice of more experienced and/or skilled individuals, always retaining the responsibility for the outcome of the decision taken. An example of this was during the recent intervention of a bulk carrier following information disclosed to me by the US Drugs Enforcement Administration that it was laden with a large consignment of Cocaine – the situation warranting an armed intervention to ensure safety of officers.

6. Working with others

The Commissioner must be able to consult and involve others in the decision making process, showing tact, respect and understanding to the views of others. The private sector has a lot to offer in terms of contributions to maintain the jurisdiction safe from crime and enhance security. It is therefore key that the Commissioner is able to work with any sector whose intentions are in the overall interests of Gibraltar's safety, always negotiating effectively, representing the interests of the RGP.

Personal evidence
Cyber dependant and cyber enabled crime is very much under reported in Gibraltar. This phenomenon is not exclusive to Gibraltar and the RGP has a role to raise awareness, reduce and prevent this type of crime from affecting so many victims. In June 2017, the RGP partnered with the private sector to bring to Gibraltar a world class cyber security event. I undertook to be the RGP point of contact with the partnering firm to present this event. 245 delegates from public and private sector attended with the Chief Minister and HE the Governor hailing it as a success and worthwhile project.

The policing of major events requires close co-operation with other essential services, public agencies, organisers and private entities. During my service as Superintendent Operations, I planned and oversaw the execution of the policing arrangements in major events such as the Royal visit of HRH Prince Andrew and the Countess of Wessex, Gibraltar National Week including the Gib Music Festival, National Day rally, general elections, Queen's birthday parades, the 3 Kings Calvacade and Guy Fawkes (when this was renowned for acute anti-social behaviour and violence).

In my present post, I have been assigned responsibility for building relationships with international partners. I have been able to negotiate the reinstatement of the RGP in the very important forum as is the National Counter Terrorism Policing HQ Business Area Meetings where regional UK police chiefs periodically meet with the CT National Co-coordinator, DAC Neil Basu, Assistant Commissioner Mark Rowley who is the most senior CT police officer in UK and SyS and SIS. RGP attendance at this forum had been discontinued over 6 years ago for reasons unknown to me. Closer contact with SO15 Counter Terrorism Command, New Scotland Yard, has also been enhanced. I also keep alive relationships with the USA's FBI and DEA via the US Embassy in Madrid. I am responsible for flourishing Spanish law enforcement relationships and I am very pleased with the progress, particularly with the Servicio Vigilancia Aduanera who on occasions have been rather conflicting and hostile on operations at sea. A very good relationship is also maintained with the Guardia Civil's UC2 responsible for international terrorism as indeed the Cuerpo Nacional de Policia, Comisaria de Informacion in Canillas, their HQ in Madrid. Despite the already known political influences which unfortunately hinders full operational co-operation, I can sincerely state that working with the stated Spanish law enforcement agencies has been very productive. Further work to attempt to formalise these relationships continues with the very kind assistance of the British Embassy in Madrid.

I developed a close working relationship with the police embed in the National Cyber Security Centre (NCSC) and successfully negotiated for the UK's 'Cyber Information Sharing Partnership' to be extended to Gibraltar for the benefit of our business community. I am pleased to report that numerous business entities have already signed up to this initiative and enrolled as members of this platform.

7. Effective communication

As previously alluded to in the 1st of the competencies, the Commissioner has to be visible and ensure that corporate communications are effective both internal and external to organisation. He must be an articulate communicator who is confident is public speaking. Very often, the RGP is fairly criticised in the media – there has to be courage to readily accept this criticism and efforts to put things right. Conversely, it is a known fact that certain media outlets seem to have an unjustified gripe against the Force. With this type of reporting it is my submission that focusing on improving public confidence in the RGP through effective communications and positive actions will by default rebut any adverse media reporting.

Personal evidence
Being one of the trained media officers in the RGP I have had the experience of engagement with all local media outlets, those in the campo region and even some major UK tabloids. I have received letters of appreciation from local media praising my style of communications and my relationship with them during difficult times.

I have formed part of debate panels on live TV programmes such as Viewpoint. Promoting the RGP's good work and particularly in the crime domain, I have given numerous interviews to both radio and TV.

In 2013, I successfully argued for personalisation of social media communications for senior officers and some departments within the Force. In addition to the RGP corporate Twitter account, each senior officer is able to push out information on this very popular social media channel thereby enhancing our contact with the community.

8. Respect for Diversity

The police service is inherently still regarded by many as a male chauvinistic dominated institution. The RGP should aspire for our workforce to be representative, as far as possible, of the make-up of our community and therefore the Commissioner must show commitment to this aspiration, the outreach of which can be enhanced by ensuring that the RGP respects all sections of society and make them feel included.

Internal culture within the Force has to demonstrate similar vein in terms of fair treatment and respect for all officers and staff in the context of a custom that values diversity and individuality.

Personal evidence
I have formed part of the senior management team that has driven a culture change which has taken the RGP forwards as an organisation with a high ethos of equality and diversity. Perceived barriers to equality are not as blatant as they used to be. As a team we discuss where reasonable adjustments can be made to find ways to help staff members who need particular attention. There is a long way to go and I take this opportunity to express total commitment to continue in this journey in support of equality and diversity both internal and external to the organisation.

In closing this letter in support of my application, I offer the GPA my availability to answer any questions arising or elaborate on any of the points stated above.

Yours faithfully,

"DELIVERING A SAFER GIBRALTAR THROUGH EXCELLENCE IN THE PROVISION OF POLICING SERVICES"

Like with so many aspects of life today, Gibraltar is vastly different from the way it was when the then Gibraltar Police Force was formed 177 years ago. Even in the last 10 years a lot has changed. The trends we see today will have a big impact on the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) over the next 5 years and the organisation must respond to them to continue to ensure the jurisdiction remains a safe one.

A strategic analysis of the risks and challenges that the RGP will face in the forthcoming years recognises that our operating environment is changing at quite a pace. Increasing community expectations, population growth, the continued development of Gibraltar as a nation, changes in crime and upholding national security present both challenges and opportunities.

To build on successes of how Gibraltar has been and continues to be the safe place it is for residents to live in, for our visitors and those who venture here to do business, the RGP also needs to move with the times. Any transformation over the next 5 years must involve the way we deliver our services, the way we utilise our officers, how we exploit the use of available technology and very importantly, the way we engage with partners and stakeholders.

This paper sets out my vision for the RGP for the next 5 years – a vision which I truly believe will pave a very positive path for the Force to meet the challenges ahead. The notion behind my vision being that through the provision of excellence in service delivery, Gibraltar will continue to be safe and prosper for existing and future generations. Against the backdrop of my vision I will be alluding to the areas where I view the Force to be strong in, those requiring attention of some sort, the risk areas and challenges/opportunities arising. I will also incorporate key actions to address the main issues, as I see them, which affect the Force

RGP's CORE VALUES

Excellence in policing is not simply acquired off the shelf. Good reputation, good results, continuous organisational improvement and development, wellbeing of the workforce, commitment and a genuine belief in what we stand for are some of the key factors that can drive the Force towards excellence in service delivery. Our organisational Values and Code of Ethics are at the core of the RGP (see Appendix - A). They underpin our policies, procedures and practices and how we interact with the community. There is therefore the need to constantly align all our daily activities to these values. Strong leadership is required to ensure consistency around the Force towards abidance and promulgation of the values with the reasonable expectation that by improving on existing behaviours, professional service delivery in the key areas referred to in this paper will by default be enhanced – the aim being that of optimisation of overall service provision.

STRATEGIC CONTEXT

To support and achieve my vision there are 5 areas of focus the RGP would need to work towards as follows;-

- Effective service delivery – by providing responsive, personal and visible policing services
- Improving community safety – by minimising crime and improving safety
- Working with others – by developing strong partnerships with stakeholders
- People development – by creating a capable, flexible and professional workforce
- Workplace development – by improving systems to make our functions more efficient and effective. By improvements in the physical workplace (real estate).

In order to provide an easy to follow perspective on what I deem to be the main issues affecting the RGP and which indeed are aligned to the above 5 areas, I will split these between Operational and Organisational issues.

An action plan to address each of these issues can be found in Appendix – B

OPERATIONAL THREATS

(i) National Security

The existing threat of terrorism to western Europe originating from the conflict in Iraq and Syria neither recognises or respects any borders. Gibraltar sits between two countries that are on high alert because of this threat. Incidentally, this threat is also seriously perceived by the UK, who acting to protect British interests offer advice, via the FCO, to British citizens travelling to or living in Spain and Morocco. Whilst there is no specific intelligence of any terrorist activity in or aimed at Gibraltar, the mere proximity to these two nations together with a host of other reasons puts Gibraltar in a vulnerable position. The re-emergence of Northern Ireland related terrorism (NIRT) has also got be kept in mind as indeed the phenomena of cyber terrorism, for which a Gibraltar strategy is required.

Gibraltar's security apparatus has never been clearer defined as is it now with strategic, tactical and operational tiers established in multi-agency forums. Interoperability amongst the blue light agencies has been subject of praise by staff from the UK's Joint Emergency Services Interoperability Programme who have recognised the great advantage we enjoy because of our personal and close working arrangements, hailing this as a great asset to local critical/major incident management. Regular multi-agency training has strengthened our ability to deal with a terrorist incident – we are now at the stage where emergency service heads should commit to signing the 'Joint Operating Principles' to formalise interoperability in the counter terrorism domain.

A programme to uplift our counter terrorism policing efforts is under way, however, this will take its time to roll out and get officers trained with the necessary skills. Because of the close liaison we enjoy with SO15 Counter Terrorism Command of the Metropolitan Police, opportunities are arising to enhance the RGP's connectivity with the UK's CT network.

Despite all the practical work achieved in enhancing our security posture, we are still lacking in modern and updated terrorism legislation and this places our practitioners at a disadvantage without the tools to carry out their duties.

Arrangements for Military Aid to the Civil Authorities (MACA) need to be firmed up so that our response plans have clarity to what extent the locally based military can be deployed and employed in a CT incident/operation. These arrangements should also incorporate and extend to any UK based military assistance that would be required.

Defusing any identified vulnerabilities whether these are physical, structural or cultural will make Gibraltar a lesser attractive target for potential terrorists which reinforces the need to work towards a tailor made counter terrorism strategy for Gibraltar.

(ii) Child Safeguarding & Sex Offender Risk Management

When attempting to analyse the extent of child sexual exploitation in our jurisdiction we realise that the true picture of any exploitation is unclear. Significant anecdotal information exists which indicates that sharing of sexually explicit photographs occurs frequently between young people and we have dealt with reports in this regard. The ever increasing reliance of social media by young people also uncovers a ready-made platform for grooming activity by sexual predators. Pro-active community engagement to raise awareness is underway sanctioned by the Child Protection Committee.

The successes of our Safeguarding Unit in bringing sex offenders to justice and the numerous convictions secured in court demonstrates the Force's capability to deal with cases of historic abuse. Our efforts should by no means rest with these convictions. Many victims of sexual exploitation tend to suffer in silence and withhold themselves from reporting their ordeals. It is our duty to pro-actively reach out to those silent victims and offer them the reassurance that they will heard and believed.

Our relationship with the National Crime Agency's Child Exploitation and Online Protection Command (CEOP) is outstanding and an established channel for referrals is in place to investigate peer to peer sharing of indecent imagery of children online. The RGP sits as a full member of the UK forum MOSOVO (Management of Sex Offender & Violent Offenders) and has presented case studies on the challenges of cross border management of sex offenders.

The well being of staff who deal with child safeguarding and sex offender management has to remain constantly under review. At present there are no systems in place to ensure these officers remain psychologically fit to continue discharging their duties.

The RGP were the pioneers and stimulators for the creation of Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA) and we have developed a specialist niche in this field. The RGP is in fact exporting the Gibraltar model to other overseas territories which is testament of the effectiveness of our practices.

(iii) Economic & Cyber Crime

It is now an accepted notion that Economic Crime is causing an overwhelming effect on police services not only because of the devastating effects it has on victims, but also because of the investigation complexities these crimes present and the drain in police resources required to investigate them – Gibraltar does not escape this problem. The RGP has limited but very competent resources in this field as has been proved in recent very high profile cases which in the United Kingdom would have been handled by a national unit such as the Serious Fraud Office.

As a finance centre, Gibraltar will no doubt attract financial criminality, whether it is locally based or from abroad by making use of banking and other financial institutions here. Cyber fraudsters also avail themselves of a borderless landscape to rip off their victims via a myriad of methods which they keep innovating to outwit law enforcement efforts. The risk therefore amplifies when enforcement capabilities are insufficient to meet the demand with the consequences of reputational damage to the jurisdiction.

The Government's intention to become a member of MONEYVAL is presenting the RGP with unprecedented challenges. MONEYVAL is a Council of Europe committee of experts on the evaluation of anti money laundering and the financing of terrorism. Their evaluation process is ruthless and if aspiring members do not meet their set criteria, they run the risk of becoming blacklisted as an unreliable country to do business with.

It is evident that with our existing resources, the RGP will not be able to meet all the requirements set out by MONEYVAL. A possible solution to this situation is to create a Joint working team comprising of HM Customs, FSC personnel, AG's Chambers, accountants, tax specialists and Police – a sort of Gibraltar Crime Agency. Expertise can also be sought by entering in to formal collaborative arrangements with the City of London Police, the UK's lead force for economic crime.

The RGP has to keep driving forward in raising awareness on cyber crime. Experts predict that this type of crime will soon override traditional crime statistics and this will clearly place extra demand on the RGP. Though known to sometimes be perpetrated by lone actors, cyber crime is now very much being exploited by organised crime groups who because of the anonymity the internet affords, no longer have to expose themselves physically when committing their criminal acts.

(iv) External Affairs

Foreign Affairs have always had an impact on policing in Gibraltar and the current situation with Brexit looming is no exception together Spain's incessant claim over our territory's sovereignty. The Spanish Government's posture is unfortunately one that cannot be trusted even though the incumbent Foreign Secretary has assured that its Spain's intention not to disrupt fluidity at the border because of Brexit. Realistically, Spain has not got to rely on Brexit to make our border a 'hard' one – they can resort to strict compliance with Schengen processes to create the same negative effects. Irrespectively of the stated, a 'hard' border will present challenges to the RGP in terms public order, traffic management, internal security and possibly even increased crime levels.

(v) Drugs Misuse

I think there can hardly be any disagreement with the fact that drugs misuse in Gibraltar is a social problem and not solely a police related issue as if often perceived by the community. Police enforcement in interrupting the supply chain is only one of the strands of what should constitute a holistic drugs strategy – including that of reducing the demand through education and awareness and providing supporting rehabilitation services. It is therefore evident that partnership working is essential. Notwithstanding this, police enforcement efforts need to be consistent and effective. For this to happen in this day and age, officers must be supported by investigatory tools within their corresponding legal framework. Our contributions to disrupt international drug trafficking have to continue and in fact we will aim for more detections and disruptions in this regard. This intent is necessary as otherwise organised criminal networks can perceive the RGP as weak in this area to the detriment of good social order as has been experienced of late in the Campo area.

(vi) Anti-Social Behaviour & Domestic Violence

Anti-social behaviour is often associated to, or is the indicator of, other criminal activity or social problem. It creates a state of insecurity particularly so in residential areas where the peace and tranquillity of law abiding citizens is hampered. Inaction or ineffective action on the part of the RGP diminishes public confidence in the police. A particular challenge for the RGP and its partnership agencies (Housing Dept, Education etc) is that of the inability to relocate offenders because of the limited housing stock in the jurisdiction. Consistent, intelligence led, focused and high visible patrols of problem areas is a tried and tested policing response that addresses this issue and one that should not be compromised because of other competing demands.

An increase in instances of domestic abuse with calls for our service has been noted. The Force operates a positive action policy in support of victims, however, re-active work needs to run in tandem with pro-activity. In this regard, engagement with Social Services and embarking on a DV awareness/prevention campaign will complement enforcement efforts.

ORGANISATIONAL THREATS

(vii) Human Resources – Recruitment – Retention – Composition – Training

It is an accepted fact that the RGP is a very young service in terms of the average age of its officers. This observation has got to be considered alongside the projected retirements for the RGP which show that a significant proportion of the Senior Management Team could actually retire forthwith, with additional turnover at various other ranks across the Force. Similarly, there are several officers at Constable and Sergeant ranks who are also eligible to retire having the appropriate age in specialist areas such as Special Branch, Crime Scene Investigation Unit, Marine Section and Force Intel Unit.

According to the last HMIC report, 3 Superintendents, 3 Chief Inspectors, 6 Inspectors, 9 Sergeants and 35 Constables are all eligible to retire within the next five years. Annual training bids are assessed by the training prioritisation board, comprising senior officers. In the recent staff survey, only 44 percent of the workforce was satisfied with their current level of training and development. There is a need to seriously discuss succession planning as soon as possible and invest in the continuous development of our people.

A force restructure recently carried out in consultation with the staff association was designed to align our resources to demand also taking in to account the work-life balance of the staff. This also uncovered the need to increase the establishment of the Force and consequently a business case was prepared for due consideration by Government. I am concerned that the Force will seriously struggle to cope with the existing demand unless extra human resources are hired. The pace at which the Force operates has been the catalyst for dips in retention – this exposes the need to delve deeper in to the abilities and qualities of a new applicant to join the Force so that the recruitment process weeds out those who may be unable to cope with the occupational needs and pressures.

(viii) Legislation

A wave of new pieces of legislation such as the Crimes Act, Criminal Procedure & Evidence Act, and Proceeds of Crime Act has caused the Force to re-adjust its resources to ensure the service delivery arising from them is met. These changes have caused considerable challenges and strains – challenges because officers have had to be re-deployed from the front line and upskilled to cover other duties imposed by the new laws – strains because even though the redeployments have been effected we suffer from resilience issues in these sub-units which incidentally are also under-resourced.

In the pipeline there are other new laws (Terrorism Act, Immigration Act, Regulatory of Investigatory Powers Act) that will challenge the Force even further. Training in the application of these laws will require more instructors who they themselves will require induction in order to teach the subject matter. These challenges will be affronted with positivity and zeal. There will have to be an element of prioritization and delivery programme designed.

(ix) Technology & Workplace

The RGP has historically struggled with challenges arising out of complexity and cost of IT infrastructure, inadequate databases and paper based systems. With the enviable support of the Government together with sheer drive and in-house talent we have managed to revolutionise a crucial part of the criminal justice system. Managing a culture change from antiquated systems to a modern purpose designed platform will have to take its course and already, obstacles and resistance from some quarters is being addressed and overcome.

Technical support is an important cog in the fight against crime and indeed terrorism. Serious consideration will be given to acquiring the necessary equipment which is used by law enforcement agencies worldwide and once the legislation which governs its deployment is passed.

The RGP of today has totally outgrown its headquarters at New Mole House. Despite not being a purpose built facility it was an improvement to the old Central Police Station in Irish Town. New Mole House is an extremely tired building – the environment is not ideal for such a fast moving organisation. It is welcoming that Government acknowledges this and are committed to a new purpose built building which not necessarily should be wholly RGP occupied. There is scope for conducting a value for money exercise to collaborate with the other emergency services for a joint command and despatch unit, fleet management and other building space.

(x) HMIC recommendations

The inspection of the RGP by HMIC in 2015 revealed various areas for improvement. Whilst some of these recommendations have already been addressed there still remains some requiring further action. It is imperative that a working group is created to see this project through. In my view the most pressing area for improvement, as highlighted in one of the recommendations, is that of the creation of manual of guidance which should represent Force policy in crime investigation standards. This will inherently make officers better at conducting investigations and is positive for their all-round personal development.

(xi) Gibraltar Defence Police

The announcement in the Government's manifesto that the GDP would be transferred directly to Government or into a wholly owned company of the Government raised a number of issues which have been debated at length amongst the RGP's SMT. It is fair to say that the possibility is also being mooted of an eventual full amalgamation of the GDP with the RGP.

I am a strong advocate that if any transfer of the GDP were to materialise that this should take the form of a full amalgamation with the RGP – the opportunities arising far outweighing any disadvantages. My argument rebutting other arrangements such as the GDP forming itself into a [GoG] agency to provide services to the MOD have been documented.

(xii) BREXIT – implications to policing

The uncertainty that BREXIT has unearthed in the UK is to a large extent transferrable to us in Gibraltar. Aside from the issues in the socio-political space, Brexit presents challenges to policing if the UK fail to secure a good exit deal. Key themes that will have a direct impact on policing are listed below in no particular order;

- Schengen (incl SIS, SISII & RGP liaison with Cuerpo Nacional de Policia, Guardia Civil and SVA.
- Prüm (incl Prüm decisions)
- European Criminal Records System (ECRIS)
- European Counter Terrorism Strategy
- Europol engagement
- European Police College
- European Arrest Warrant arrangements
- European Investigation Order (Incl Joint Investigation Teams)

Whilst expectant that the UK's exit deal will not undermine any of the above subject areas, we have to be ready to react if it does. Equally, the situation discloses opportunities for joining up further with the UK on law enforcement matters.

THE RGP RELATIONSHIP WITH THE GPA

The functions and responsibilities of both the RGP and GPA are clearly articulated and enshrined in statute. However, in practice and for the past 8 years or so, the relationship between both has only been limited to consultations and progress reporting on the objectives set out in annual policing plan/annual reports, recruitment and promotion boards. Whilst these activity fall squarely within the statutory responsibilities, there is ample room for the building of a more solid and productive relationship.

Being the independent body that it is, the GPA has to ensure RGP operates to a high standard and as efficiently/effectively as it can within its scope of resourcing. In order to discharge its function fully the GPA has to provide information on police matters to the community. To deliver on this the GPA needs to be kept abreast of policing issues which matter to the community and not solely rely on annual reporting. It is therefore necessary that periodic and prearranged briefs are delivered to the GPA by the RGP's Commissioner. Subject to mutual agreement, the briefing could be delivered on a monthly basis to either the full Authority, or to a sub-group of its members. A proposed structure of topics for these briefings would include;

- an element of operational content
- trends in performance and incidence of crime that may impact on policing plan priorities
- strategic projects/proposals of the commissioner not considered in other forums
- strategic finance
- human resource issues
- strategic policing initiatives
- complaints and matters of discipline

The outcomes of these briefings will very much serve as indicators of approval or conversely, disapproval by the Authority of the manner the RGP is conducting its business.

CONCLUSION

As can be appreciated from the contents of this brief paper, the next 5 years will undoubtedly bring considerable challenges on the RGP. I have distinctly kept to highlighting what I perceive are to be the main issues affecting the Force together with a delivery plan that is synced with my Vision. There are a host of other issues which require attention but not to the same degree as the ones referred to in this paper. In policing, things change very quickly and therefore whilst the intention is to deliver on the stipulated actions, unexpected exigencies may warrant a review of these actions.

Simplicity is my Vision's forte – the RGP gets its act right in all its areas of responsibility, and by default, Gibraltar will be an even safer place than it has been in the past ..... to live, to visit and to do business in.

APPENDIX – A
RGP VALUES & CODE OF ETHICS

Working Together To Make Our Community Safer

CODE OF ETHICS

Integrity
I recognise my role in policing as being a symbol of public faith and trust and the obligation this places upon me to act with integrity, fairness and respect. I shall behave in a way which reflects the values of policing in Gibraltar. I understand I am personally responsible for my own actions and will appropriately exercise my discretion.

I shall act as a positive role model in delivering a professional, impartial service, placing service to communities before my personal aims. I will not accept any gift or gratuity that could, or could be perceived to, compromise my impartiality. I shall avoid all behaviour, which is or may be reasonably considered as abusive, bullying, harassing or victimising.

I will demonstrate and promote good conduct and I will challenge the conduct of colleagues where I reasonably believe they have fallen below the standards set out in this Code.

Fairness
I will act with courage and composure and shall face all challenges with self-control, tolerance and impartiality. I will promote a positive well-being within the community and service and ensure that all people have fair and equal access to police services according to their needs.

I shall maintain an open attitude and continue to improve my understanding and awareness of cultural, social and community issues. I will carry out my duties in a fair manner, guided by the principles of impartiality and non- discrimination.

Respect
I take pride in working as part of a team dedicated to protecting people. I will show respect for all people and their beliefs, values, cultures and individual needs. I will have respect for all human dignity as I understand that my attitude and the way I behave contributes to the consent communities have for policing. I will respect and uphold the law in order to maintain public confidence and, by enhancing my personal knowledge and experience, contributing to the professional development of policing.

I shall treat all people, including detained people, in a humane and dignified manner. I shall ensure that my relationships with colleagues is based on mutual respect and understanding and shall, therefore, conduct all communications on that basis.

Human Rights
I shall ensure my actions and policing operations respect the human rights of all people and officers whilst understanding that I will also enjoy these same human rights. I will not undertake high-risk activities or use force other than where strictly necessary in order to attain a legitimate objective and only after I have balanced all the competing priorities I am aware of. (Article 2, Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 & Section 5, Subsection 1 of the Crimes Act 2011)

I will not encourage, instigate or tolerate any act of torture or inhuman or degrading treatment under any circumstance nor will I stand by and allow others to do the same. I understand that the humane treatment of prisoners is an essential element of policing and that the dignity of all those I am trusted to care for remains my responsibility. (Article 5, Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006)

I understand that people have an equal right to liberty and security. Accordingly, I will not deprive any person of that liberty, except in accordance with the law. (Article 1, Gibraltar Constitution 2006) I will investigate crimes objectively and be sensitive to the particular needs of affected individuals whilst following the principle that everyone who is the subject of criminal investigation is innocent until found guilty by a court. (Article 8, Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006)

In carrying out my duties I shall respect everyone's fundamental rights. I will only interfere with privacy or family life when I am legally authorized to do so. (Article 3, Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006) I will respect individual freedoms of thought, conscience or religion, expression, peaceful assembly, movement and the peaceful enjoyment of possessions. (Articles 9, 10, 11 Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006)

Evidence Based Self Assessment Encompassing the Core Competencies for the Rank of Commissioner of Police

Superintendent Richard Ullger MSc

Executive Leadership and Strategic Change

An important core competency for good leadership is to bring about improved performance, and since performance has to be delivered through people, good leadership is key to achieve this through influencing the workforce. In my view this is my attribute and is done through transformational and servant leadership, were the former has been found to have a strong link to people having a wide range of positive attitudes towards their work. It has also been associated with the effective implementation of change in a variety of settings and the management of tasks. In turn, the latter has a focus of leadership responsibilities through the promotion of performance and the satisfaction of employees, which is of paramount importance. It is therefore, when the people of the Royal Gibraltar Police are objectively and effectively managed that the maintenance of Law and Order is achieved.

I strongly feel that I have achieved what was expected of me in my personal development plan and I am satisfied to have attained the individual tasks that I have excelled myself to achieve within the framework set by the Commissioner of Police. I have been working closely with our corporate plan and engaging with many levels and components of the command structure and the workforce. Simultaneously, I have also liaised with many outside agencies to bring about a multi-agency approach to problem solving issues in our society. This has been achieved in my Neighbourhood Policing role, with problem orientated policing and crime prevention. These agencies have included the Ministry of Housing, the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Social Affairs, with each one also fulfilling their own priorities and aims. Both, neighbourhood policing and the prevention of crime are policing concepts that have helped me to understand how to develop a knowledge base, perfect change management skills and most profoundly to jettison a number of negative fundamental professional beliefs and values, that I once labelled the neighbourhood policing style of having. Achieving this, I have been able to share my experiences and perception with others in order to encourage the evolvement of policing in Gibraltar, particularly in sharing the Commissioner's vision to enhance Neighbourhood Policing and our relationship with the community we serve. Over the past two years I have led the Planning Development and Support Division, always remaining focused in setting coordinated priorities, achieving aims dictated to us through our Policing Plan and attaining an approach that allows others to offer their opinions in order to reap the best results. I can confidently provide a professional customer satisfaction service, which is strongly supported internally with an effective leadership commitment to the service. Equally, I have been transforming how we do business, with a view of ensuring Value for Money [VfM], which is paramount to good public spending, saving were it has been possible and spending were it has been needed. I am a believer of more collaboration with other agencies, providing better efficiencies and effectiveness, but in turn an advocate for outsourcing those tasks which can be delivered by specialist professionals. We need to be candid at times by accepting that we may not be best placed to undertake certain roles.

I am keen to learn and adapt to changing circumstances, which requires an organised and structured approach to my working environment. I feel that I possess the necessary skills and competencies for the next rank, by displaying management proficiencies with professionalism, totally advocating the delegation of work, discretion and decision making through the ranks. I have always accepted responsibility, grasping at every given opportunity and I feel I have the ability to create a Strategic Vision to deliver operational performances. I have the upmost respect for every member of the Royal Gibraltar Police and I inspire the notion that, 'customer satisfaction begins with employee satisfaction'.

I have never objected to the need for change as an excuse to rule out bad working practices, but I have welcomed them with a view of improving our service and providing a more focused delivery. In my contribution to change over the past year, I have led and initiated actions to improve the way we recruit police officers, the way we train them and their subsequent performance. I have also adapted the process of monitoring our spending in the respective divisional commands, in order to effectively improve the way business is run in the organisation. I have built business cases to outsource work that we were not achieving effectively and I have sought processes and equipment to make us more efficient and professional in the delivery of service.

Leading the Workforce

I would describe the police service as a vibrant and modern police service, which aims to provide reassurance to our community and therefore enable all to live without fear of crime. An essential element to this framework is the management of people, be it the police officers themselves, our support staff or the community. Increasingly, we must treat our workforce in entirely different terms and interact with them in diverse ways in order to achieve the force objectives. It is important that we demonstrate collaboration, power sharing, trust and even humility, which is replacing at times the authority of the rank, but never undermining it. I have embraced customer service and the notion of Neighbourhood Policing, but I have equally learnt how to appreciate the members of our work force. As an officer striving to achieve the rank of Commissioner, I feel that I have established visions, values and missions by consensus, and I have incorporated input from all levels of the different units I command. I have always conveyed the Commissioner's vision in line with our annual policing plan and evoke commitment and passion for the service. Most importantly, I feel that the workforce have confidence in my command style and have trust in my leadership style.

Officers are a constant variable within the force and have to be trained, motivated, led and encouraged, often at different times with varying priorities. Failure to direct them properly will mean that we will be unable to manage the organisation effectively. In turn, monitoring poor performance and addressing it, is important and this is something that I strongly believe needs constant firmness. I feel that I am equally fair and understanding in this field and have demonstrated my skills in the past with subordinates who have been disciplined and managers who have had their lack of commitment scrutinised. I have created an environment in which all officers feel that they can attain and exercise leadership qualities, not only through hierarchical positions, but by lateral development. However, because of the complexities surrounding police work, I accept that most officers will falter occasionally. For this, I have permitted an environment to exist that allows it to happen so long as officers and staff work closely to learn from mistakes and to deal with them in a restorative manner. It is my upmost desire to instil a JUST culture in the Royal Gibraltar Police, something which will no doubt be a challenge, but certainly be rewarding.

There are many factors that influence our officers and through trust, I establish effective working relationships that revolve in keeping them informed through consultation. I do this daily and enjoy providing them with opportunities to discuss problems, always demonstrating mutual respect and being open to support their needs. I constantly acknowledge their contribution to the service, praising them with encouragement to continue so that they may strive to do well.

Ultimately, it is my leadership philosophy that dictates the way I do business in the organisation and both my personal values and operating principles drive what is expected of me.

Developing Information and Decision Making

Current and future Commissioners must have a firm understanding of how the wave of technology is evolving, or can influence police business and they must be in a position of being capable to mobilise and manipulate information and data. The cost of technology is however having an impact on the way we do business and there is a grave concern amongst members within the rank and file in the police service on how we manage our Information Technology. Thankfully, with the support of HMGoG, the RGP has made immense strides in this area, and with the set-up of the new Cyclops system, through savings, I have provided the opportunities for other projects to support this. I have delivered on a new Gibraltar DNA database also marrying this with new fingerprint technology. I have introduced the use of body worn video for our officers, and mitigated risk by offering them tools that will protect them better.

I am an advocate of sharing information within the organisation, and as long as we have strict data protection rules in place, this data can be shared with other common agencies if there is a joint cause to fight crime. The data, or information is always crucial to the required response of any police action and I ensure that before making any decisions, that the relevant questions have been asked, the information has been gathered unobtrusively and has been analysed. This naturally allows me to evaluate the problem and identify the symptoms and its gravity. With this comes the acceptance that the Commissioner's position is always vulnerable and possibly one of the most scrutinised posts in the public service. I am therefore more than confident to hold this position to the highest regard.

Experience always makes you wiser and therefore the verification of facts and details is an essential element for an effective Police Commissioner to make firm command decisions. This thought process has allowed me to identify potential problems in advance and address the issue appropriately. In the same way, I have never been one to make rushed decisions, but in the policing environment were the protection of life and property is at times at risk, I confidently use the decision making process through the National Decision Model [NDM]. This, has provided me in almost 30 years of service with a wealth of experience in my operational role, particularly having led and policed countless firearms operations, demonstrations, public disorders, public and military events, and of course crime related operations.

My decision making process always takes into consideration the wider impact of police activity and the implications of the different options available to us. Doing so, I am always assessing the costs, cognisant of course of VfM, but most importantly the risks involved for my officers and the public at large. These I then measure against the benefits of such decisions. However, I am absolutely clear that if ever I need to make that ultimate decision, in conditions of ambiguity and uncertainty, I will be prepared to do so, taking full responsibility for the consequences.

Effective Communication and Working with Others

I am a firm believer that poor communication always leads to mistakes, misunderstandings and time wasting, having an adverse effect on the relationship between individuals, leading to feelings of dissatisfaction, inefficiency and lack of cooperation. Good communication skills therefore demand active listening skills, allowing two-way communications to respond to opinions and feelings, thus encouraging constructive feedback.

Having effective communication skills is imperative in the qualities of a good officer, especially for a Police Commissioner. It demonstrates in many ways their commitment to the service and by doing so ensures public confidence in the police, integrity and the will to improve services to the public. I feel that my record speaks for itself and my understanding of the complete socio-political context in which the police functions, allows me to lead successfully with people believing in what I am doing and why I am doing it. Equally, building effective working relationships through clear communication and collaboration with other bodies is essential. I know that I have this skill and I have the ability to work close with other people to achieve goals, through being visible and leading when needed to. I consult widely, always involving people in decision making processes and speaking to them in a way that they understand and can engage with confidence. Most importantly, I treat people with the respect and dignity they deserve, regardless of their background or circumstances. I totally advocate equality and strongly eliminate any forms of discrimination. I do this by treating people as individuals, always showing tact, empathy and compassion.

I am grateful that my career has provided me with confidence and has allowed me to improve on my communication skills in all arenas. I use diplomacy when required, but I am forceful and firm when the need arises, always offering respect to my audience, whether they are voluntary or involuntary customers.

My skills have confidently allowed me to create and direct numerous exercises, with a varied audience and talk to people with ease. Furthermore, operationally, my attendance at the Regional Negotiators Course has also enhanced my communication skills, and my successful intervention in a number of separate suicide attempts has been a testament of the skills I possess. Over the many years in my policing career, personal negotiating and dealing with conflict has given me the ability to be confident in difficult situations. This is a skill I unquestionably know will support me in the role of the rank of Commissioner, particularly when seeking conflict resolutions.

Professionalism and Dedication to Service

The delivery of a professional service is paramount in order to ensure an effective and efficient police service. Just as important, are the acts of integrity, in line with the values and the ethical standards of the Royal Gibraltar Police. I consider that my standards are in fact very high, and it is by these standards that I know that both my peers and the senior officers judge me. I have strived to improve ethical standards within the organisation and I have embraced it with everything I do, leading by example. I instil strong values amongst those officers who are recruits and equally to those who are about to retire. I ensure that I deliver on promises and when I have failed, I take full responsibility, but always provide alternative solutions, demonstrating personal commitment, energy and drive to get things done. With this comes sincerity, and I always ask for feedback in order to learn from mistakes and build upon successes. Likewise, I openly acknowledge when we as an organisation have failed and will always be committed to putting things right. At the other end of the spectrum, I know I can address difficult and at times unpopular decisions, never shying away from my responsibility and always being resilient, by remaining calm and professional under pressure.

Police culture can always contain bad elements of behaviour, but it is the good and outstanding acts undertaken by our officers that I will always promote and celebrate. The welfare of my officers is also extremely important to me and I will invest time and compassion to show that they are supported in times of need. Stress and anxiety, contribute to burnout in policing and sometimes senior officers fail to understand the impact it has on peoples' lives. Having studied mental illness in the police organisation, my appreciation and knowledge on its impact has developed my understanding, giving me the means to adjust to different challenging events.

Furthermore, my achievement in attaining a Master of Science [MSc] in Police Leadership and Management, no doubt recognises the commitment I have to my career and the police service. This, coupled with my years of service, gives me material for sound leadership at the senior command level and moreover my attendance in 2013, at the FBI National Academy, in Quantico and my selection by my peers as Section Representative of the 252nd Session, I feel demonstrates the high level of personal and professional standards I strive for. Lastly, my attendance at the College of Policing Strategic Command Course in 2016, acknowledges my leadership qualities and the competence I have to perform the rank of Commissioner.

My Leadership Philosophy

My Leadership:

I want my leadership to be committed to achieving a high quality of service to both the community I serve and the officers and staff I lead, by using consistent high levels of personal and professional standards, through influencing, enabling and developing others.

My Personal Values:

Honesty - With honesty a leader has to gain the respect and trust of not only their staff, but community alike. It is through the credibility of their actions that will determine whether they will be followed or not.

Competent - Effective leaders have to be efficient in their roles and understand the dynamics of not only an evolving policing world, but society too. It is essential that they have a long term focus and be consistent in their approach, but always adapting to change.

Enabling - Using engaging listening skills, leaders have to recognise and understand the needs and contributions of their staff in a working environment. They must be willing to share responsibilities with others and use their particular skills. Leadership is not about the power one may have, but about the power they can give.

Integrity - The perceptions of our employees are different and it is essential that they feel a sense of unity in the work place. Honesty and moral enhancing leadership traits provides this, ensuring that they remain focused and valued achieving aims and objectives for the right reasons.

Committed - Being professional and having the ability to inspire others are very important traits that a leader should possess. With strong self esteem and a sense of devotion, they should maintain a disciplined approach always recognising their staff for their hard work.

My Operating Principles:

I will instil professionalism in my team of officers and ensure that we work hard, always cognisant of our values that make us who we are.

I will ensure that we will work close with our community and build on a trust relationship, by being committed and honest.

A Paper on a 5 Year Vision for The Royal Gibraltar Police - The Way Forward

A Paper on a 5 Year Vision for the Royal Gibraltar Police - The Way Forward

It is apparent from the wave of research that a struggle always exists to accommodate an effective policing system. This is reflected in the countless times change has been implemented to search for this approach and to address the needs of a fast evolving society. It is therefore common to acknowledge that the pluralisation of policing is increasing and questions are being raised about the role the Police play in the 21st Century. Additionally, it is vocal that a struggle to accommodate policing within an ever-increasing liberal democratic polity is reflected in the frequency with which it is subjected to continuous reform. Our interaction with our community is very much the bedrock and foundation of a lot of our business, and must be seen to be inclusive in the policing we continue to deliver to the people of Gibraltar. It must never be sidelined, but very much the opposite, it must be seen to grow from strength to strength.

This paper will therefore briefly touch on the many issues that have a direct impact on the Royal Gibraltar Police [RGP] and will focus on the challenges ahead, particularly on the interpretation of where we should be heading, taking advantage of our strengths and opportunities, but equally being cognisant of our weaknesses and threats against us, and streamlining the flow of a focused delivery, where now accountability is forever present. Throughout, it will holistically apply action plans to address these issues to support the arguments and finally it will discuss the way forward with a positive interaction with the Gibraltar Police Authority [GPA], ensuring more accountability, transparency and most importantly, a larger embracement of the 'critical friend' relationship.

There is already some consistency to support the suggestion that while recorded crime has reduced, the demand on policing has grown in other areas. It is these demands that the public do not see, or perhaps even appreciate and the constant debate on police visibility places the community's trust and conflict at the forefront of their relationship with the police. Through dialogue, it is important that the police starts to share these concerns with the public and it is equally important that the public is mindful of police activity which may not be captured by the action areas of the statutory requirements of the Annual Policing Plans, directed on the RGP by the GPA after consultation with the community. It is the activity such as the constant demands of maintaining Gibraltar safe from terrorism, the increased volume of dealing with incidents involving people with mental health issues, safeguarding young and vulnerable people from sexual exploitation, which are associated with positive statutory requirements, such as Multi-Agency Public Protection Panels, that need to be understood and measured. There are others too, such as cybercrime and cyber security, and the increased number of complex financial investigations which need time, resources and most importantly expertise. There has also been an introduction of new legislation such as the 2012 Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act [CPEA] that have provided the police with greater powers to investigate crimes, but the challenges to resource these investigations needs greater strategic steer, with better management of resources and tools. As police activity therefore increases, there is a grave concern about whether the RGP can maintain levels of service delivery.

The RGP has already attempted to address some of these issues, which though in its infancy is already showing signs of fracturing. In late 2016, through external and internal pressures, a full restructure, primarily aimed at improving work life balance, meeting Working Time legislation and optimising resources to meet the assessed and prioritised frontline demand profile, was created. To achieve this, it inevitably meant stretching resources from other departments and reducing the capability of the Neighbourhood Policing ethos, and despite all of this, the capacity in frontline policing continues to operate on many occasions at a minimum level. Therefore, with the support of the GPA and the Police Federation, a document detailing the 'RGP's human resource needs to meet present and future challenges' [RGP, 2017] was submitted to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar [HMGoG]. With a total of 52 more police officers and 10 more civilian posts requested, this paper is in the process of being debated and assessed.

Without having any firm confirmation of what HMGoG's response will subsequently be, it is imperative that the RGP continues to develop a proactive and sophisticated understanding of community needs, in order to keep people safe. To this end, it is proposed that better collaboration and outsourcing of police work is established, with a view of not only freeing up more police time, but working together with other partners and adopting an improved vision of Value for Money [VfM]. This work needs to reflect the more complex emerging crime challenges, while being conscious of service-drift, as partner agencies capacity becomes more accountable.

The principles on how this is achieved requires that more development is needed of operational and organisational responses for prevention to the twin challenges of changing demand and limited resources. The emphasis on prevention reflects the first and last Peelian Principles[1] that underpinned the establishment of modern policing in 1829. However, the RGP, like many other UK police forces, is currently designed to respond to the problem being presented rather than its root causes. A more activist preventative agenda, as opposed to reacting to crime once it has occurred, will avoid poorer outcomes and higher costs later on, particularly to society as a whole. As already highlighted in this paper, much of the harm and work that policing deals with is unseen by the public and remains largely hidden. Against these new demands, mainstream policing must go upstream to collaborate with partners at all levels to address the issues that generate risk and harm. We must take advantage of our strengths and our ability to adapt so easily because of our situational awareness capability. It is far easier to manage growing concerns at a local level, in comparison to the national level experienced in the UK. Equally, we must not forget the global participation acknowledging that there are no boundaries to crime.

A further principle that must be applied more effectively is of a service that is valued, understood and supported by our community, tailoring the service to individual needs, but most importantly focusing more on victims of crime. This paper has already highlighted it once, but its value is underestimated. The public really need to know what the policing challenges are and we need to be forthcoming by highlighting these to them, exposing our weaknesses and building upon our strengths. It is inconceivable that institutions have little understanding of this and openly criticise the RGP publicly about the limited visible policing [Gibraltar Chronicle, 2017:1] without having a true understanding of the complexities we face. The provision of a police service that is valued and supported by the public is imperative and the long held concept that the RGP has always subscribed to of policing by consent depends on this relationship. It becomes more critical when we aspire to develop an agenda focused on prevention. There is more work that is needed to be achieved with the Criminal Justice System, and we need to further exploit opportunities presented by new technologies to deliver the best service possible. Thankfully, we have already started to do this with the support of HMGoG. Better DNA services have been established and improved fingerprint technology is being incorporated, supported by other tools that will enhance our investigation ability. We now need to build upon this further with more innovations.

A better understanding of vulnerability and the impact of harm will enable the improvement and differentiation of levels of service and protection. This is not easy to achieve, particularly with the finite availability of resources, but we need to be more adaptable and tailor our services to the individual needs of victims, using technology more to understand the individual's history with us and partner organisations, to inform our interactions with them. Policing demands which are connected to vulnerable persons in mental distress is growing and this has a significant impact on policing time and effort, and it can also have a personal impact on those on the front line dealing with these cases. So much needs to be done and an example of this would be to establish a better Forensic Medical Examiner [FME] provision, where people who come into contact with police are treated by us, but their issues are shared through better processes with other partners, such as the Care Agency or Gibraltar Health Authority [GHA]. Similarly, we must recognise our failings as an organisation. The RGP constantly wants to take the lead on many issues that must be dealt with by other public sector partners and rather than overseeing or missing the wealth of assets that could be used, we should be embracing them more. Similarly, with the voluntary sector, which is popular in the UK, or focusing more on people trying to solve their own problems, but supported by us.

Returning to the concept of collaboration, it is easy to see why police forces in the UK have embraced this phenomenon and it is imperative that the RGP embraces it too. Maybe, not entirely for the reasons that UK police forces adopted it for cost efficiencies, but to improve capability, sharing of resources and assets with other partner agencies. Understandably, the UK have statutory guidance for Police Collaboration, but it doesn't mean that we cannot adopt it to serve our needs. The RGP together with other partners must work together to review opportunities to collaborate, engage with prospective collaboration partners and to make a judgement as to whether those opportunities present the best option available. Where collaboration is judged to be the best option, we must collaborate ensuring that it not only provides for better efficiencies and effectiveness [Police Professional, 2016:19], but is in the wider public's best interest. The basis of a collaboration agreement need not only be one way in favour of the RGP, but it could also be used for facilitating the effectiveness and efficiency of another public body. Time and time again the RGP have worked closely with other agencies in tandem, but never sharing the concept of collaboration and always maintaining dual roles. Organisational cultures impose the greatest barriers, but through top manager engagement and strategic direction this can be easily overcome. The opportunities to be reaped from this concept is exciting and thankfully we are again in a position of strength to achieve this, simply because we continuously work by embracing the positives of situational awareness.

Unlike police forces in the UK, the RGP has little scope to collaborate with other police forces, with the exception of the Gibraltar Defence Police [GDP]. Therefore, there are few opportunities for this, but with what we already have in place and the prospect to develop this, we can strengthen both the capability and capacity to provide a better policing service for the community of Gibraltar, and equally of course for the Ministry of Defence [MOD]. We need to expand on our joint working in the area of Firearms capability and Maritime patrols, with a better enhanced operational deployment of police dogs. Again, much of this has already started, but a strategic steer that creates a vision of better understanding is needed.

To exploit the collaboration process we also need to work more with HM Customs and possibly with the Port Authority and other agencies. It is unimaginable that so many assets are available to police Gibraltar, yet each having their own agendas and objectives without sharing priorities. The sharing of resources and information, will enhance communication and intelligence gathering whilst enabling others to do other policing roles.

Outsourcing key aspects of police work is another innovation that the RGP needs to consider. There are of course concerns about the wider impact of allowing private companies to deliver police services, bringing the ethos of profit above all, to this already sensitive and contentious area of policing. However, by having strict measures of accountability and transparency, allows those professionals to deliver a service that can never be met by the police. What this inevitably does, is allows the RGP to focus on policing issues, thus calling upon those services that may only occasionally be required. It not only saves money, but also reduces risks to the police by having to have officers continuously competent in their skills, training and of course equipment.

Seeking to adopt a range of means to front line services, including Neighbourhood Policing through visibility and online access to the RGP is by far one of the most important principles. Policing plays a critical role in protecting Gibraltar, but does not exist in isolation. The link between the evolving threat of transnational organised crime, the threat of terrorism and our neighbourhoods is clear and we need to work with other agencies and the community to be more effective. The demise of neighbourhood policing to introduce an improved shift pattern, has certainly left a gap in our capability and capacity, and this needs to be addressed...it is important to note that only three years ago this was the flagship of our core business. This said, patrolling and visibility is not a policing end in itself, but a feature of policing that delivers impact in certain contexts. We must establish clarity on what is meant by access and visibility, recognising the requirements of our community, but exploiting the opportunities of the internet. Though striving for presence is evidently clear, absence of it does not mean that the police is not accessible and whilst we have long understood the visible and invisible policing of Gibraltar, we have to adopt the same approach with virtual and cyber communities, where increasingly harm and vulnerability are forever present. To do this, we must deliver an improved customer centric approach, focusing on customer service and victims of crime. Neighbourhood Policing has been a great success and is highly valued by much of the public, so we must actively pursue it to enhance our community capacity and confidence. Our youth are also our future and we need to build upon what we have already achieved, by creating better opportunities for them and making them more inclusive in our organisation.

We have briefly discussed the threat from terrorism, cybercrime and organised crime, and with the risk of them growing, we must be prepared that they will take new and unexpected forms. We will need to focus more on protecting individuals, organisations and society as a whole, through the development of constantly improving our capabilities and ensuring our people are trained and equipped to deal with new threats. We need to do this by enhancing and focusing on capability, scaling up specialist officers to face the ever-increasing firearms threat and providing the support they need. We have constantly been reviewed and though we are slowly covering the gaps, we need to focus more on the need to be more professional and committed. This is one of our major weaknesses and certainly one of the unseen areas of policing, but is one of our biggest threats in our National Risk Register.

We must also establish a common methodology that recognises different threats to map resource against demand and take advantage of our strengths by working close with our partners. The fight against drug abuse/misuse/trafficking adversely impacts Gibraltar as it does globally, however it is not a problem for the RGP to solve on its own, as it extends across the social spectrum affecting society to a greater extent. Furthermore, our geo-strategic location between North Africa, one of the major producers of cannabis resin and facilitators of cocaine from South America into mainland Europe through Spain, makes Gibraltar a key partner in the fight against drug trafficking. We have had incredible success of seizures year on year, however this needs to be matched by our efforts to detain and bring to justice Organised Crime Groups [OCG's] who operate from Gibraltar. This type of activity is resource and time intensive taking people away from other core business. To fight this crime, we need to provide our officers with the necessary tools, such as improved legislation like the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act [RIPA] to conduct surveillance and intercept communications with improved technology. We must match this by providing our officers with the ability to interrogate electronic equipment such as phones and computers that are constantly used to commit crime. The shifting trend towards cyber-enabled crime locally is a pattern seen across the globe and as such is a compelling argument for an increase in resources. Therefore, better collaboration with partner agencies could assist us jointly fight the OCG's. Cybercrime and security is now an agenda item with the Gibraltar Contingency Council [GCC], clearly highlighting the present risk and concern this brings to Gibraltar. However, we need to add a greater dimension of the challenges that we are confronted with, and more robust focus is needed when we assess our known risks in order to make better strategic assessments of how we are going to proactively police certain areas of business. One new business area is the recent application to adopt domestic legislation changes, such as the 2015 Proceeds of Crime Act [POCA], European directives and policies to be Moneyval compliant. This framework has imposed an insuperable impact on the RGP, requiring specialisation and training to investigate complex financial crime.

To achieve this, we need an incredibly talented, flexible and dedicated team of people, who need to be equipped with the skills and capabilities necessary for policing into the next five years and beyond. Our people are the most important principal in this framework and as they adapt to the changes in the RGP structure, culture and policy, it is important that the people who lead them are engaged with their concerns. The unprecedented pace and scale of change must also allow for the different work and career aspirations and needs of our staff, with a workforce model that is supportive of professional development and police education. We must attract the right people with a mixture of skills, knowledge and potential, behaviours and values, to deliver the vision and in succession return their commitment with academic acknowledgment and the opportunity to further their education. We must also be prepared and acknowledge that officers and staff may not wish to pursue vertical career progression, but may be more suited for lateral development, providing more special and diverse skill sets. They must therefore be valued and be made to feel more inclusive of the overall objectives to achieve the vision. Additionally, their working environment needs strategic focus and direction, with a commitment to seek improvement. This, inevitably will improve performance and morale, something which has featured over the past years as an obstacle and evidenced in our internal surveys.

Effective leadership and management is critical in this time of evolution and key themes that constantly emerge will need to be addressed with conviction. The challenge to do more with less needs foresight and planning, and the need to improve professional standards and integrity must be at the forefront of our ethical values. The mere fact that we have lost a high number of people because of ethical issues is of concern, and engagement is required at root level. Leaders need to be seen and must make themselves more available to their staff, by creating better opportunities of communication, helping to assuage fears and leading from the front. The service also needs to develop people's abilities to lead effectively and provide the capabilities and competencies to be effective. This will in turn soothe the uncertainty that exists in the workplace and create more confidence. This is not easy, as we constantly face the challenge of finding the time to train our people when they are not front line policing, but we owe it to them.

Performance needs to continue to improve, which requires innovative thinking and new ideas to increase not only our effectiveness, but our efficiency too. Therefore, challenging poor performance and recognising good performance are vital to the success of the organisation. We must be seen to be more proactive and desperately need to apply the tools to do so, but similarly we must be mindful of staff welfare and wellbeing, ensuring that their concerns, issues and health matter to us. We must be supportive and understanding, providing measures and frameworks to address individual distress. Policing is not easy and the stress that comes with what our people witness and experience can be insurmountable.

The role of the GPA in this vision is considered to be an extremely important function and through constant dialogue it is planned to have a relationship that provides transparency, informed decision making processes to enhance the mutual understanding of the complexities of policing such a diverse community and most importantly, trust. Through the GPA's statutory responsibility to ensure efficiency and effectiveness, the RGP has now firmly consolidated its position, but consideration must be given to provide keystone significance of governance, where we can demonstrate positive outcomes and raise concerns. It is here where we must build on the 'critical friend' relationship, exploring partnership, but maintaining sincerity when having to address issues of mutual difference.

We must ensure that as the RGP is, the GPA too are at the heart of engaging with the community, so that the public have confidence in the work we both do, but at the same time maintaining the preservation of operational independence. They have a very important role in supporting the building of effective working relationships between the RGP and other partners, particularly HMGoG, and must have oversight of governance and accountability. Through better accountability also comes a higher level of integrity, and the force needs to build upon what it is already achieving to improve standards and probity. The GPA would be crucial in providing an oversight of the business we are conducting in this area, and we both applaud and encourage to be the most scrutinised professional body in the public service.

In conclusion, it is fair to say that policing will go through significant change in the coming years and the RGP must be prepared to adapt to constant reform, by being innovative in its business approach and adopting different methods for sustainability. It is important that the demand is constantly risk assessed and that the most appropriate approach is applied to any activity being considered. This must be done with effective leadership that can be both transformational and transactional, but equally being servant to the public and the workforce. The officers and staff of the RGP are an important factor in everything we do and they must feel that they are part of an incredible organisation, led with vision and conviction.

Mr. Edward Yome CPM
Commissioner of Police
Police Headquarters
New Mole House
Rosia Road
Gibraltar

Dear Eddie,

Thank you for your letter of 15th November 2017 and enclosures.

Allow me to refer to a number of points made therein:

a) The personal information which you have shared with the Authority may or may not be used in the selection process but, if used at the interview stage, I can assure you that this will be done without any reference to you, direct or indirect;

b) The Authority declined your request to have sight of the candidates vision papers as these were marked confidential and, in any case, it was felt that you could have obtained copies from the candidates;

c) The Authority is happy to grant your request to address it, and has set down a 20 minutes slot on Friday 24th November at 9:45am at our office;

d) The Authority will consider your request to inform the candidates of the outcome of their applications, although initially this is HE's prerogative.

Yours sincerely

Your excellency

RE: SELECTION OF COMMISSIONER OF POLICE

Applications for appointment to the post of Commissioner of Police were received from Superintendent Ian McGrail and Superintendent Richard Ullger.

The candidates were required to make presentations to the Authority setting out their visions for the next 5 years and the priorities that they would set, if promoted, following which they answered questions. Further, the candidates were interviewed in depth by a sub-committee of the Authority, in the presence of all the members, who probed, in particular, issues of neighbourhood policing, Gibraltar Defence Police, the viability of working with the other candidate, community engagement, preparation of case dockets, cybercrime, resources, partnerships, counter terrorism, management style and major public events.

The Authority took into account all the information at its disposal, the performance of the candidates in delivering their written and oral presentations and their interviews.

The Authority deliberated at length on the different strengths of the candidates.

The members of the Authority felt that both candidates were suitable.

By a majority of 7-2, pursuant to section 6 (3) of the Police Act 2006, the Authority considers that Supt Ian McGrail is the stronger of the two highly suitable candidates.

The advice of the Authority is that Supt McGrail be appointed as Commissioner of Police with effect from 1st May 2018, and that the term of his warrant should be for four years. You are kindly requested, pursuant to Section 32 of the Police Act 2006, to act on this advice.

Yours faithfully

Dear John,

APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONER OF POLICE GIBRALTAR

Thank you for your letter of 5th December 2017 which sets out the Gibraltar Police Authority's (GPA) advice regarding the selection of Gibraltar's next Commissioner of Police.

Having consulted with the Chief Minister, I endorse the GPA's recommendation that Superintendent Ian McGrail be appointed as the Commissioner of Police Gibraltar from 1st May 2018 for a four-year term of warrant in this role.

I would request that the GPA formally review progress against the objectives set out in Superintendent McGrail's vision statement and associated action plan at the mid-point of his tenure as Commissioner.

Finally, on behalf of the Chief Minister and I, may I thank the GPA for its diligent work in the conduct for the selection process. It is much appreciated.

Very respectfully

Edward Davis

VN referred to:-

- s.13 of the Police Act, where HE may request on instinct the GPA to provide a report to him, and also to initiate an enquiry;
- s.14 of the Police Act, where HMGOG may ask the GPA to provide a report on Police matters, and also to carry out a full-blown enquiry on the RGP;
- s.19 of the Police Act, when the GPA may ask the CoP for any information to assist preparation of a report.

NP reported on a conversation held with HE, when the latter envisaged that the GPA recommend that an independent enquiry will be held.

The matter was discussed at length and it was concluded that a formal letter be sent to CM stating that, in the first instance, since the GPA has no jurisdiction to involve the MOD, it proposes to proceed under the provisions of s.19 of the Police Act in order to submit a report to him.

RE: AIRFIELD INCIDENT

I refer to our meeting in your office on Tuesday 9th May.

Your request that the GPA enquire into the incident at Gibraltar Airport on 7th February 2017 was conveyed to the members at meetings held on 11th and 15th May.

It was agreed that, in the first instance, since we have no jurisdiction to involve MOD in our enquiry, we ask the Commissioner of Police to provide us with all information which may assist us in the preparation of a report to be submitted to you, pursuant to the provisions of s.19 of the Police Act.

When this is done, you may wish to consider the possibility of a full enquiry, with independent members agreed to by the RGP and the MOD, commissioned by the GPA.

Michelle (and all),

Please see attached suggested amendments to the draft letter.

Separately (though not marked-up in the attached), I would also suggest the letter be carbon copied to HE The Governor.

HE The Governor has "ultimate responsibility for the integrity, probity and independence of policing in Gibraltar and the policing aspects of national security including internal security" (section 11, Police Act); and, given the discussions John had with the CM last week as well as the discussions we have had this morning, I wonder whether it is simply a more open and direct route to convey our proposed course of action to the CM and HE The Governor at the same time (particularly given that the former indicated that the latter was agreeable to the instruction).

If there is any objection to this suggestion by any member, I am entirely relaxed about my suggestion being ignored as the CM is obliged to report to HE The Governor in any event pursuant to section 15(2). I certainly do not wish to prolong discussion or debate, or delay the issue of the letter. As such, if there is any objection at all, please deem the suggestion to cc. HE The Governor retracted.

Thanks and best,

Vikram

I had an opportunity to speak to the Chief Minister later today and sought some verbal clarification on the conversation he had with you regarding reference to the potential independent membership of a panel. He cleared for me that he has not agreed to any MOD involvement in or approval of in respect of members.

In the light of this, I would have to suggest that you do not make reference to "with independent members agreed to by the RGP and the MOD" in your letter to him.

I have just spoken to Nick, given his position, in order to inform him of my conversation.

Dear all,

I am grateful for your comments vis a vis the draft letter to CM, particularly Vikram's suggested amendments.

I cannot accept Vikram's suggestion that the letter be cc'd to HE for the reason given by me at this morning's meeting, viz, that the formal verbal request by CM that the GPA enquire into this matter requires that this letter be addressed to CM, uncopied.

I note the comments made by Ernest and Nick, and will amend my draft accordingly.

Please find the letter below.

Best regards,

John

Michelle, the following is the letter to CM. I'll sign it in the morning:-

RE: AIRFIELD INCIDENT

I refer to our meeting in your office on Tuesday 9th May.

Your request that the GPA (the Authority) enquire into the incident at Gibraltar Airport on 7th February 2017 was conveyed to the members of the Authority at meetings held on 11th and 15th May.

The Authority is of the view, in the first instance, that, since it has no jurisdiction to involve the MOD in an enquiry, it shall proceed to request the Commissioner of Police to provide all relevant information (pursuant to the provisions of s.19 of the Police Act) which may assist in the preparation of a report to be submitted to you (pursuant to the provisions of s.15 of the Police Act).

Once this is done, you may wish to consider the possibility of a full enquiry, commissioned by the Authority.

MINUTES OF MEETING OF THE GIBRALTAR POLICE AUTHORITY HELD ON FRIDAY 11th May 2017 at 09:15 a.m.

Present	Mr John Goncalves (Ch) Mr Albert Danino (AD) Mrs Naomi Hassan Weisfogel (NHW) Mr Stephen Reyes (SR) Mr Nick Pyle (NP) Mr Aurelio Falero	Chairman
In attendance:	Ms E. Hanglin (Sec)	Secretary
Apologies:	Mr Vikram Nagrani Mr Ernest Gomez Mr Edgar Lavarello Rev Fidelio Patron

Item	Discussion and Decisions	Action
1 Item 1 –Approval of minutes of the meeting of 23rd January 2017.	The minutes of the meeting held on 23rd January 2017 were approved.
2. Item 2 - Matters arising from the minutes of meeting of the 23rd January 2017	Policing Plan / Annual Report The Ch informed the meeting that he had raised the matter of changing the annual plan to a 3 year strategy with the MfJ at their meeting. At the meeting it was agreed that the matter would be taken up with the new Commissioner in the run up to his taking office. The 3 year strategy would then be implemented as from 1st April 2018. Selection Weekend The Ch informed the meeting that the RGP had disagreed with Fidel's concerns that one of the candidates at the selection weekend was not selected due to his age. The RGP provided evidence that this was not the case and indicated that they had taken up police men who were older in the past. Community Engagement The Ch informed the meeting that one of the scheduled days to distribute surveys at the piazza had been cancelled due to the bad weather. Appointment of PC Chiara and PC Cruz The GPA was not in agreement with the CoP overruling the recommendation of the reporting officer to extend PC Cruz period of probation. The matter was brought up with the CoP who stated that the recommendation to extend his probation was due to the fact that PC Cruz was deemed to be a little too timid and not forceful enough, albeit shortly after, PC Cruz was commended by the CoP for assisting one of his officers whilst he himself was off duty in an event. Annual report The Ch informed the meeting that Chief Supt. Mifsud had claimed that the figures in the last annual report were not up to date and would be updated in November. The Ch informed Chief Supt. Mifsud that an update in November would not be a realistic interpretation of the RGP's yearly performance considering the Annual report is upto the end of June. Ch Supt. Mifsud agreed. PS Ruffle The Ch informed the meeting that he had not yet received a reply from the CoP to his letter of 21st November 2016. The Ch agreed to write to the CoP and prod him for a reply.

3. Item – Sub-committees' Reports.	a. Policing Plan/Annual Report This item was discussed under matters arising. b. Police Complaints Board. AD informed the meeting that Mr Joe Garcia's and Mr Julio Alcantara's (PCB members) term of office expired on the 16th April this year and asked to extend it until September 2017 in order to have time to find a replacement. The Ch asked AD for a list of names to be discussed at the next meeting of the Authority. The GPA agreed that the nominees should be consulted first. Report for PCB: "Since 1st January 2017, the PCB has received three complaints which have been fully investigated. Complaint 1/17 (Abuse of Authority) was found to be unsubstantiated and not sustained. Complaint 2/17(Discreditable Behaviour) had one of its 9 strands substantiated. The complainant in this case is requesting that the GPA reviews the PCB's ruling of the other 8 strands under section 15(3) of Police Complaints Regulations 2008. Complaint 3/17 (Neglect of Duty) was found to be unsubstantiated and, therefore, not sustained. A further complaint was classified as sub-judicial and, therefore, not considered for investigation at the time it was presented to the Board. This complainant in this case may represent his complaint to the Board after its judicial process is finalised. There are currently three potential complaints under consideration for investigation; two for Discreditable Behaviour and the third for Abuse of Authority. In two of these the complainants cannot so far identify the police officers in question. The PSD is helping the PCB with its enquiries."	AD

	c. Community Engagement The Secretary informed the meeting that a total of 729 survey responses had been received. The Sec would forward the responses database to FP and SR. d. Financial Control SR had circulated the reports prior to the meeting. With regards to the GPA budget, there was an £800 surplus. Although the surplus was due to £1000 bill which was held back by treasury the year before in order to prevent the GPA from going over budget. The budget is in a deficit due to travel costs from HMIC which wasn't budgeted for from the outset. With regard to RGP expenditure, they have ended up with a surplus of £250,000 due to not spending as much on overtime. The Ch expressed his gratitude to SR for his service these past 9 years. e. HR/Training/Professional Standards. There was nothing to report on this matter. f. Legislation/GPA Procedures VN circulated via email an update on the Police Misconduct Regulations. "It appears that the RGP will be making proposals to the law draftsman by the end of the month. I will keep you informed of any updates received from Superintendent McGrail as soon as these are received".	Sec
5. Item 5 – Any other business.	Airfield Incident The Ch informed the meeting that on Tuesday 9th May, he was asked to meet with the CM. The CM requested that the GPA enquire into the Airfield incident on 7th February 2017. The Ch had informed the CM that the Authority did not have any jurisdiction to deal with third parties. The CM asked the Ch to raise the matter with the Authority and that if the decision was made for an enquiry, funds would be made available for an independent legal advisor.

	The Ch pointed out that he had informed VN of the matter who said that the Authority is responsible for upholding the efficiency, effectiveness and probity of the RGP and on the probity side, the Authority may be able to ensure that the RGP action was appropriate and thus may have an enquiry on that before investigation. The GPA agreed that a separate meeting should be called to discuss the matter exclusively. Once the matter is discussed, the Authority can then look into the actions of the RGP. The Authority agreed to ask the CoP whether the investigation into the alleged offences by the serviceman, which had led to the incident, has finished, and if it has, request for the file on the investigation and interview the officers who were directly involved in the incident. This will allow the GPA to formulate a conclusion and pass it on to the CM and HE.	Ch
6. Item 5 – Confirmation of next meeting.	Date to be confirmed.	Sec

Dear all,

The Chief Minister has requested a report on the GPA's assessment of the actions taken by the RGP before, during and after the airfield incident, preferably by early September.

The Commissioner will let me have notes from the leading players in the next few days, which I will send to you, to give you some time to consider their contents, ahead of a meeting which I would ask you to attend on Thursday 27th July at 9:30 am in our office. The purpose of the meeting is to agree the way forward on this matter.

Best regards,

John

IN THE MATTER OF THE EXTENT OF THE ARMED FORCES ACT 2006

JOINT OPINION

Introduction

1. We are asked to advise whether the Armed Forces Act 2006 ("AFA 2006") extends to Gibraltar.

2. An officer of the Royal Air Force ("RAF") stationed in Gibraltar is suspected of possession of indecent imagery of children. The Royal Gibraltar Police ("RGP") wish to investigate. However, the British military have claimed authority to arrest and investigate under the AFA 2006 and have obstructed the investigation by the RGP.

3. For the reasons set out below, it is our opinion that the AFA 2006 clearly does not extend to Gibraltar. The British military have therefore purported to exercise powers of arrest and investigation in a jurisdiction where the law does not grant them such powers. Arrest, entry and search by the British armed forces in Gibraltar is not lawful under the law of Gibraltar.

Factual Background

4. On 4 February 2017 the RGP were informed that the British Armed Forces' Joint Provost and Security Unit ("JPSU") had arrested an officer serving with the RAF in Gibraltar on

9. Part 3 of the AFA confers powers of arrest, search and seizure in relation to service offences. For example, section 67 provides that a person who is reasonably suspected of being engaged in committing, or of having committed, a service offence may be arrested in accordance with the provisions of that section by a person subject to service law. Detailed provision is made by that Part as to the circumstances in which those powers can be exercised and the persons (ordinarily members of the armed forces of a certain rank or service police) who can exercise them.

Duration and extent of the AFA 2006

10. When it entered into force, the AFA 2006 extended to Gibraltar. Section 384(2) AFA 2006, as enacted, provided:

> "This Act extends to -
>
> (a) the Isle of Man, and
>
> (b) the British Overseas Territories,
> subject to such modifications as Her Majesty may be Order in Council specify".

11. Gibraltar is a British Overseas Territory: see Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 13 (2009), paragraph 859.

12. The duration of the AFA 2006 was limited by section 382 AFA 2006, as enacted, which provided that the Act expired at the end of one year beginning with the day on which it was passed, subject to renewal by Order in Council for no more than one year from the time the Act would otherwise expire, with an overall limit to such continuation beyond the end of the year 2011.

13. This limited duration reflects the fundamental constitutional principle, traced back to the Bill of Rights in 1688, which declared:

"[t]hat the raising or keeping a standing army within the kingdom in time of peace, unless it be with the consent of Parliament, is against law".

14. Since the 1950s, legislation has been required every five years to continue in force the legislation enabling the Armed Forces to be recruited and maintained. Those Acts have provided that, in each of the years between five-yearly Acts, an Order in Council is required to continue in force that legislation: see Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 3 (2011), paragraph 303.

15. Section 1 of the Armed Forces Act 2011 ("AFA 2011") substituted a new section 382 into the AFA 2006 by which the AFA 2006 was continued and could be continued by Order in Council until the end of 2016.

16. However, unlike the AFA 2006, the AFA 2011 did not extend its provisions to British Overseas Territories. Rather, section 33 AFA 2011 provided:

"(1) Her Majesty may by Order in Council provide for any of the provisions of this Act, except section 25, to extend to a territory mentioned in subsection (2) with or without modifications.

(2) Those territories are—

(a) any of the Channel Islands;

(b) the Isle of Man;

(c) any of the British overseas territories".

17. No such Order in Council was made and therefore the AFA 2006 did not extend to the British Overseas Territories beyond the end of 2011, by reason of that Act's expiry under its section 382 (as originally enacted).

18. Section 1 of the Armed Forces Act 2016 ("AFA 2016") substituted a new section 382 into the AFA 2006 by which the AFA 2006 was continued and could be continued by Order in Council until the end of 2021.

19. Section 21(2)(b) of the AFA 2016 provides that that Act, with the exception of certain sections, extends to "the British overseas territories, except Gibraltar" (emphasis added). Section 13(1)(b) of the AFA 2016 brings the AFA 2006 back into force in "the British overseas territories except Gibraltar". Section 13(3) of the 2016 Act amends section 384(2) of the AFA 2006 (the original version of which we cite in paragraph 10 above) to exclude Gibraltar.

20. Paragraphs 4 and 6 to 12 of the Schedule to the AFA 2016 make provision in consequence of the fact that AFA 2006 is not to extend to Gibraltar. Paragraph 4 provides that powers in certain Acts to extend amendments of AFA 2006 to jurisdictions outside the United Kingdom cannot be used in respect of Gibraltar. Paragraphs 6 to 12 amend certain references to British overseas territories in AFA 2006 to exclude Gibraltar.

21. The related Parliamentary materials confirm that the decision not to extend the AFA 2006 to Gibraltar was a deliberate choice by the legislature. For example:

(i) The Explanatory Notes in the House of Lords relating to the Bill brought forward from the House of Commons on 12 January 2016 explain in terms at paragraphs 78 to 79 and 99 that the AFA 2006 had previously expired in Gibraltar and was, under the provisions of the Bill, not to extend to Gibraltar. Similar explanation is provided in the Explanatory Notes in the House of Commons relating to the Bill as introduced there on 16 September 2015 at paragraphs 74 to 75 and 90.

(ii) The rationale for not extending the Bill to Gibraltar was explained in the House of Commons during the Committee stage of the Bill by the minister Mark Lancaster, following a question from Jim Shannon MP. The Minister explained that the 2005 Constitution gives Gibraltar wide legislative responsibilities so the Government was discussing with Gibraltar whether it would be best to provide for the 2006 Act to extend to Gibraltar or for Gibraltar to act through its own legislation: Hansard, 16 December 2015, Column 1607.

(iii) During that Committee stage, the minister recognised that the AFA 2006 had not been in force in the British Overseas Territories since 2011 and that, in order for the members of the British armed forces to have powers of arrest, entry and search in those jurisdictions, the 2006 Act would need to be extended to those jurisdictions: Hansard, 16 December 2015, Column 1607.

(iv) On the Third Reading of the Bill before the House of Commons on 11 January 2016, the minister said that the Government was still discussing with Gibraltar

whether it would be best to provide for the 2006 Act and the Bill to extend there, that those discussions were ongoing and if necessary the Government would introduce an amendment to the Bill in the House of Lords; Hansard, 11 January 2016, Column 614 to Column 615.

(v) During the Second Reading of the Bill in the House of Lords on 11 February 2016, the Minister of State, Ministry of Defence, Earl Howe, explained that the Bill provided that it was not to have effect in Gibraltar, although the Government was consulting Gibraltar on whether it would be content for the AFA 2006 to become part of its laws and that, if so, an amendment to the Bill would be made: Hansard, 11 February 2016, Column 2362 to 2363. No such amendment was brought forward before the Bill was passed.

Relevant provisions of the law of Gibraltar

22. The English Law (Application) Act states at section 3(1)(b) that the law in England set out in any Act of Parliament at Westminster applied to Gibraltar by any Order of Her Majesty's Council, or any express provision in any Act, or by necessary implication, shall be in force in Gibraltar.

23. The Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 provides for the powers and duties of the RGP and for evidence and procedure in criminal cases. It confers upon the RGP powers of arrest upon reasonable grounds of suspicion that a person has committed an offence (section 42(2)) and powers of search and seizure in prescribed circumstances (Parts 2 and 3).

Analysis

24. United Kingdom forces present in an overseas territory are subject to that territory's law in the usual way, subject to the AFA 2006 or other legislative provision which extends to those territories: Hendry and Dickson British Overseas Territories Laws (2011), page 178.

25. The AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar. This is not merely a matter of omission or oversight upon the expiry of the AFA 2006 or AFA 2011. It is a choice made by Parliament when enacting the AFA 2016 as part of its important constitutional role of approving the raising or standing of an army.

26. The language of section 13(1)(b), section 13(3) and section 21(2)(b) of the AFA 2016 is clear: the provisions of the 2006 Act and the 2016 Act are to extend to the British overseas territories except Gibraltar. The Schedule to the AFA 2016 makes provision in consequence of the fact that AFA 2006 is not to extend to Gibraltar.

27. It is plain from the related Parliamentary materials that, when considering the Bill which became the AFA 2016, Parliament was aware that the AFA 2006 did not extend to Gibraltar, was aware that it was not to be so extended by the AFA 2016 and was aware that the consequence of that was that arrest, entry and search by British armed forces in Gibraltar would not be lawful under the law of Gibraltar.

28. Accordingly, the clear intention of Parliament, reflected in the clear language of section 21(2)(b) AFA 2016, is that the AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar.

29. The consequence of this is that, as a matter of the law of Gibraltar, and of the law of the United Kingdom, the British armed forces do not have the power of arrest under section 67 AFA 2006 and nor do they have the powers of search and seizure granted by the AFA 2006.

30. In purporting to exercise those powers in Gibraltar, the members of the JPSU were acting in a way which was, in that jurisdiction, ultra vires.

31. It is correct that the AFA 2006 applies to members of the RAF at all times, wherever they are in the world, in the sense that an offence committed abroad can be an offence contrary to the 2006 Act: this is the consequence of sections 367(1) and 42(1) AFA 2006. The minister so confirmed in the House of Lords on 11 February 2016 (see paragraph 21(v) above): Hansard at Column 2362. However, that the AFA 2006 confers such a worldwide jurisdiction over relevant persons does not make it lawful under the law of Gibraltar or under the law of the United Kingdom for the United Kingdom authorities to exercise a power of arrest or investigation in Gibraltar in respect of those persons.

32. By reason of section 13(1) AFA 2016, the AFA 2006 is not in force in Gibraltar and accordingly the power of arrest contained in section 67 AFA 2006 does not apply in Gibraltar, as a matter of the law of Gibraltar and of the law of the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom military authorities have no power to arrest in Gibraltar under the AFA 2006, although of course if the suspect returned to the United Kingdom he could be arrested in the United Kingdom under section 67 AFA 2006 for an offence committed elsewhere. It should not be surprising, when Parliament has expressly decided not to apply the AFA 2006 to Gibraltar, that the United Kingdom military authorities do not have the power under the United Kingdom Act to arrest people in Gibraltar.

33. The law of Gibraltar, in particular the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, confers powers of arrest and investigation of crime upon the RGP. It does not confer such powers upon United Kingdom armed forces and there is no other provision in the law of Gibraltar which does. As explained above, the AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar and accordingly is not in force in Gibraltar: section 13(1)(b), section 13(3) and section 21(2)(b) AFA 2016 and section 3(1)(b) English Law (Application) Act.

34. In reaching our view we have also considered the provisions of the United Kingdom Forces (Jurisdiction of Colonial Courts) Order 1965, which prevents the trial of a member of the United Kingdom armed forces for an offence against the law of another territory where certain criteria are satisfied.[2] However, not only are those criteria not present in the present case, but in any event that Order is concerned only with the question of whether the courts of Gibraltar are prevented from adjudicating upon a certain offence and does not address the issue of whether the United Kingdom military forces have jurisdiction to arrest and investigate in Gibraltar.

35. In summary:

(i) The AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar.

[2] In particular, where the alleged offender is acting in the course of his duties, or where only service personnel (or dependants and civilian components of the armed forces) are involved or where the offence is against UK government property: section 3 of the Order.

(ii) The United Kingdom armed forces do not have powers of arrest and seizure under the law of Gibraltar.

(iii) In purporting to exercise those powers in Gibraltar they were acting in a manner which was unlawful under the law of Gibraltar.

(iv) The RGP have powers of arrest and seizure under the law of Gibraltar and members of the United Kingdom armed forces in Gibraltar are subject to that law and must comply with the lawful exercise by the RGP of those powers.

Dear Commissioner,

I am writing on behalf of Joint Forces Command – the organisation that commands and is responsible for the UK's permanent joint overseas bases – in respect of the ongoing investigations surrounding events on the 8th February, which unfolded in Gibraltar, in particular around Gibraltar International Airport.

There are a number of points that it seems appropriate to reflect to you. It is hoped these reflections are helpful to you on several accounts:

(1) first to acknowledge the role, advice and direction that Joint Forces Command provided to Commander British Forces Gibraltar on the legal issues impacting on the events of 8th February;

(2) secondly, to recognise and support the individuals involved and who are presently under your arrest and whose actions under your investigations were under the auspices of Joint Forces Command in the fulfilment of their duties. In doing so, it is understood these individuals' actions may have clashed with the responsibilities that your officers properly sought to fulfil; and

(3) finally, to reassure you about the seriousness with which Joint Forces Command views the allegations that have been made, the eagerness to try and satisfactorily settle – to everyone's satisfaction – the concerns with which the Royal Gibraltar Police are understandably investigating, and our genuine enthusiasm – if possible – to use these events as a platform to grow an even better understanding between our respective organisations and to build an even stronger and mutually respectful and beneficial future together.

Taking these points in turn:

Joint Forces Command regrets the events that took place in Gibraltar on the 8th February. This includes the events at Gibraltar International Airport and the dispute as to jurisdiction that led to the confusion by British Forces Gibraltar over the appropriate handling of the individual suspected of downloading indecent material whilst in the United Kingdom; and the detailed management of this particular case. It was the view of Joint Forces Command that the case was to be subject to exclusive Service Police jurisdiction – which turned out not to be correct. This was on the basis that Joint Forces Command was unaware of any potential offences that had been committed by the alleged suspect whilst in Gibraltar or of your suspicions in this respect.

It is acknowledged that in responding to your desire to explore potential illegal activities by the suspect, Joint Forces Command and subsequently British Forces Gibraltar did not immediately recognise the jurisdictional legal primacy in this case for you to investigate, and if necessary, prosecute the individual were he to be found to have committed a similar or other offence in Gibraltar. I want to reassure you that subsequent additional advice, including at a senior legal level in the Ministry of Defence, recognises the legal primacy point in this case. Joint Forces Command now, therefore, fully understands and respects your legal primacy in this case as the law currently stands today.

We are aware that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has prioritised the drafting of legislation and an MoU that will clearly spell out our respective, complementary jurisdictional roles. It would also be highly desirable for agreement to be reached between our respective agencies setting out the practical application of jurisdiction for the period between now and the enactment of such legislation.

In the course of the events that unfolded on the 8th February, it is considered very important by Joint Forces Command that you should understand that at all material times our people acted in good faith and to implement the direction and guidance provided by Joint Forces Command and Provost Marshal (Navy). They were not on a "frolic of their own" in any sense and were therefore not consciously seeking to deny your officers jurisdiction, or disrespect your officers' lawful instructions. They were acting entirely in keeping with the instructions they were receiving, albeit, with the benefit of hindsight, in a manner which did not assist in resolving matters as expeditiously as all would have preferred.

I think it is important for you to be made aware that there was a decision, as part of the Joint Forces Command application of our duty of care to our personnel, to return the suspect to the United Kingdom for the individual's own welfare. Again, this decision was based on the view that jurisdiction to deal with the offence in question remained exclusively with Forces law enforcement agencies – which turned out not to be correct. It was in pursuance of this requirement and judgement that more appropriate care would be afforded the suspect in the United Kingdom, that British Forces Gibraltar personnel were instructed to facilitate the opportunity of a military aircraft to both return the individual to the United Kingdom and to transport potentially incriminating evidence for forensic examination. I should clarify that, fundamentally, this was because the facilities at RAF Brize Norton were considered more appropriate for looking after the individual than those of British Forces Gibraltar; and, ordinarily, the capability for Service Police investigations overseas which require electronic and communications forensic analysis is held in the United Kingdom. It is in seeking to implement this approach that, unfortunately, personnel from British Forces Gibraltar had what were clearly unfortunate altercations with officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police who were acting in the lawful execution of their duties. I cannot emphasise to you how much we regret, with the benefit of hindsight and the later legal advice we have received, that we were not better able to cooperate with those of your officers in question. These altercations should not have happened and any active disagreement as to jurisdiction should, in any event, have been handled in the more dignified and usual manner for issues of this type. I must express to you in particular our genuine regret to hear accusations that British Forces Gibraltar personnel behaved disrespectfully towards officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police and that they were inconsiderate of the requirements under which your officers were seeking to undertake their lawful activities and investigations. That is not in the nature of the relationship we have long enjoyed between our organisations.

It is hoped, sincerely, that these events can be used to assist us all in a clearer understanding of the Royal Gibraltar Police's jurisdiction in respect of criminal matters and British Forces Gibraltar's application of service law; and that – looking ahead – there are considerable opportunities to enable our respective law enforcement agencies and leadership to work even more closely together. There are numerous significant opportunities to enable this: the routine business of service people in Gibraltar; the joint policing that is usually put in place for the arrival and duration of Royal Navy warships and submarines; and the ambition that we all have to draw further on various Gibraltar Parliament statutes anticipated to be enacted later this year and which will provide a stronger and clearer platform for continued co-operation and enhanced security measures and resilience for Gibraltar.

It is hoped that this contextual information is of assistance in providing an appropriate and accurate background for many of the actions that Service Personnel took in the course of their duties in respect of the events and associated interactions that flowed from the 8th February incident.

Joint Forces Command assures you that there was not and never envisaged any intention to attempt to fetter the Royal Gibraltar Police's jurisdiction. That it appeared otherwise is deeply regretted. It is sincerely hoped that our future interactions are on a more positive basis and that we collectively work together to enhance the security of the United Kingdom and Gibraltar.

Yours sincerely,

Tony Radakin

Dear John

RE: Waterson Enquiry - Incident

Please find attached 3 documents which hopefully will put into context the investigation of RAF Sergeant Waterson and thesequence of events leading up to and including the blocking of the RAF flight on the 8th February 2017.

Document 1: Report submitted by Supt McGrailof the sequence of events as there were known at the time with a covering letter from me.

Document 2: Legal opinions commissioned by the Attorney General from Lord Pannick QC from Blackstones Chambers, Temple, London.

Document 3: Letter from Rear Admiral A J Radakin, Chief of Staff, Joint Forces Command in no uncertain terms a letter of apology and recognition of jurisdiction.

There are numerous other documents and correspondence between relevant stakeholders which can be made available should a decision be taken to progress this matter by way of a formal enquiry.

There is also material, intelligence and information which came to our notice as we conducted this investigation where senior military officials challenged the authority of constitutional posts in Gibraltar and then some off the cuff comments which were inappropriate to say the least.

My SMT and I are willing to go before the authority should you require any further information.

Kind Regards

RE: RAF Sergeant WATTERSON

13th February 2017

Dear Sirs

Please see attached report submitted by Superintendent McGrail in relation to RAF Sergeant WATTERSON.

This clearly was a sad disappointing day for Law Enforcement in Gibraltar and more so for relations between Gibraltar Forces Command and the RGP.

I do not wish to repeat what is already contained in this report which is quite detailed, but just to echo some of the points which I personally dealt with.

From the outset I wanted a pragmatic and sensible approach notwithstanding I had firm footing on jurisdiction and Gibraltar law. I even went as far as involving the AGs chambers at an early stage to provide legal advice by asking Ricky Rhoda to personally speak to GFC but again to no avail.

To me this was a complete disregard and lack of respect to our Attorney General.

Add insult to injury the matter deteriorated very rapidly when clearly senior MOD officers were being deceitful and evasive to the point that we had no alternative but to obtain a Chief Justice's warrant to make these officials see the gravity of the situation and see sense.

Armed with this warrant I informed the Chief of Staff and later Commander British Forces that I was being pushed against the wall to a place that I would not rather be, and as the last resort, we would now be in a position to execute this warrant on another Law Enforcement body (RNPM) something which I was very reluctant to do. I believe I showed great restraint in holding back from doing this.

A conversation with Commander Jack Hawkins (Chief of RNP- UK) then revealed and confirmed that the evidence was on the aircraft and I then instructed for this aircraft to be held back from departing. CBF then saw sense in de-escalating everything and I believe instructed for the aircraft to return to the stand and for Watterson and the evidence to be disembarked. I was then given his reassurance that the computer devices would be handed over to the RGP. After this was done I allowed for the aircraft to depart.

Even then I proposed that we should join up in taking this forward and for the RNPM officers to assist in the retrieval of evidence and to assist with the Forensics. Finally they acceded and we are now working together.

OFFICIAL SENSITIVE

10th February 2017

Commissioner of Police;

Sir,

RE:- Investigation in to RAF Sgt WATTERSON

This report provides COP with the chronological sequence of events as I have them and with as much a detailed account as I know it to be regarding the above captioned matter. Enquiries are continuing to elicit further information with regards to both the investigation in to Sgt WATTERSON and to the issues that arose once the RGP took an interest in the matter. I would therefore ask you to understand that this paper may not contain all the answers to questions you may have after absorbing the contents herein. On occasions during this report I have also commented on my prima facie observations on matters arising, obviously from a professional local application.

In the early hours of 4th February 2017, an email was received at RGP Command & Despatch from colleagues in the GDP advising that the JPSU had the previous day (3rd Feb 2017) effected the arrest of a serviceman, Sgt WATTERSON, in Gibraltar, on suspicion that this man was in possession of indecent imagery of children. His residence at [redacted] had been searched by JPSU and computers and data storage devices had been seized. That Sgt WATTERSON had since been released from his arrest and had undergone a [redacted] which determined that he was at [redacted]. At that point no further details were available to the GDP.[1]

This information was forwarded by CAD to our Public Protection Unit for their information. Coincidentally, Det/Insp Enriles, o.i.c of the PPU, happened to be the RGP duty officer that morning and on reading the communication sought further details from GDP Sgt Hosken who unfortunately was unable to help any further as they [the GDP] had no additional information to share.

Consequently, Det/Insp Enriles contacted the JPSU Master-at-Arms Claire BELL who informed of the following; that Timothy WATTERSON moved to Gibraltar on the 7th January 2017 for a two year posting. He moved to Gibraltar with his wife and [redacted] That they had received information from their Force Intel Bureau in UK via the National Crime Agency/Leicestershire Police that an IP address in the UK had uploaded an indecent Cat B image of a prepubescent female exposing herself. This image had been uploaded during the course of June 2016 to an IP address allocated to WATTERSON at his previous posting address in Leicestershire, UK. MA BELL

further informed that as a result of this information they had arrested him on suspicion of possession of indecent images and seized various data storage devices in the residence.[2] The authority to arrest was provided to Det/Insp Enriles as Sec 42 & 67 of the Armed Forces Offences Act 2006 UK that she claimed extended them jurisdiction in Gibraltar. No reference to Gibraltar law was made. I also understand that the authority to search WATTERSON's residence was Sections 79 & 80 Chapter 4 of JSP 830 (I believe these to be their version of our codes of practice). WATTERSON was detained by JPSU at their premises.[3]

JPSU procedures are actually based on the UK's Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) so when he was processed by the services police he elected the right to free and independent legal advice – there being no such duty solicitor scheme in Gibraltar the MA explained they would have to fly out one from the UK! Due to this untidy situation the JPSU were compelled to release WATTERSON from his arrest and he was informed that he may be seen at a later date. The devices seized from the search of the residence were retained with the intention of subjecting them to forensic analysis.[4]

MA BELL further explained that post to his release from arrest WATTERSON had also been also psychiatrically assessed by MOD (Gibraltar) medical personnel and this revealed that he might be a risk to himself. Because of this development JPSU appointed him a 24/7 'chaperone' for his own safety and instructed that he was not to return to the matrimonial home.[5] In the meantime, MOD social services SSAFA would be conducting assessment of WATTERSON's [redacted] who attends [redacted] No reference was made of any intended actions with Mrs WATTERSON.

Det/Insp ENRILES expressed his concerns to MA BELL that these type of investigations required the sharing of information at far an earlier stage given the potential local implications. Neither did we have any photograph of the subject to assist us in the identification and generating awareness of him. Although provisionally housed at Devil's Tower Camp, he was still free to roam about Gibraltar as long as the chaperone remained with him. To this Det/Insp Enriles highlighted that notwithstanding the measures in place these could be deemed insufficient and may not necessarily prevent an act of self harm or an attempt on his life, or even prevent him from committing further offences. Det/Insp ENRILES added that even though WATTERSON had not been in our jurisdiction for long he had still had opportunities to interact with members of the public/children and therefore there was a need to properly risk assess him. MA BELL agreed with the Det/Insp and arranged to share WATTERSON's photograph for the purpose of creating awareness for RGP personnel.

[2] On the facts available, the action taken by JPSU in pre-emptively arresting Watterson at such an early stage is not regarded in the RGP, or indeed by UK civilian police, as best practice and procedure.

[3] JPSU premises are not regarded in Gibraltar law as a designated police station for the detention of persons under arrest. Neither can the JPSU grant and/or impose bail conditions post to an arrest.

[4] This begs the question of whether in effect the search and seizure of the devices from the residence and their continued detention retains any legitimacy. I say so because no search warrants were issued for this process & therefore it could potentially be regarded as a tactical short circuit of proper procedures which in turn could be calculated to be an abuse of powers. i.e. Police cannot go about arresting individuals and search their properties without a warrant, then release the person from arrest and retain the exhibits found for further investigation. I may be wrong but it certainly looks a very odd and I dare say unprofessional/unethical practice, if not an illegal one.

[5] I am presuming that the power to impose these control measures is provided by military law.

I expressed dissatisfaction on how the JPSU were handling the matter and how the overall risks attached to this case were not being properly addressed. I described how the RGP operate to best practice and procedures on these type of investigations – that we had a forensic computer expert, dedicated risk managers and all the supporting infrastructure for such an investigation which evidently the MOD did not have in Gibraltar as had been proven with the inability to proceed with the interviewing of WATTERSON and provide free/independent legal advice, their inability to impose grant/impose bail conditions or even custody facilities[17]. Whilst I was assured that WATTERSON was being 'properly managed', I was not reassured that he may have already committed further offences whilst in Gibraltar. I also enquired as to why the other members of the family, i.e. the wife and 14 year son were not being regarded as potential suspects too. The focus was solely on WATTERSON and it was mentioned that they already had evidence against him of having committed an offence in the UK. This caused me to suspect that there was probably more to the case than what met the eye. PM COLLINS' response was that he was under no obligation to discuss his investigation strategies with me. In turn, this further enhanced suspicions that offences had been committed in Gibraltar as otherwise why would the JPSU seize computers and other devices if they did not believe them to contain incriminating material. All these concerns I shared with Col Green and PM COLLINS adding that I was duty bound to investigate WATTERSON locally – I could simply not leave such a serious matter walk under my nose in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar. I explained how in the past the RGP had assumed the lead and conduct of serious criminal investigations within the MOD estate ranging from serious assaults on MOD [children] dependants where the assailant was a serviceman to the sudden death of senior MOD official as only two examples. I referred to these matters simply to highlight our argument from the outset that the RGP had primacy in the jurisdiction.[18]

I conveyed my concerns to the two gentlemen that there were too many factors in terms of possible local victims, possible crimes committed here, public perception of the RGP and the legal position on jurisdiction amongst others that compelled the RGP to have a say on the matter. I did, however, state that there was still room to work the matter together to oblige to both agency's needs. Col GREEN asked me what actions the RGP would take if indeed incriminating material were found in any of the devices seized to which I explained that there would certainly be an intervention on our part to probe in to the matter further. This was totally mis-construed by Col GREEN who argued that going in "guns blazing" would compromise the UK investigation. This argument fazed me as Col GREEN was being critical of a potential action the RGP could consider, but not necessarily carry out, when in fact the JPSU's intervention had already precisely done what he was advocating should not be done.

The proposal to run a parallel investigation was flatly discarded by PM COLLINS who said he had top cover from his superiors in the UK that he was on solid footing to retain conduct of the investigation. He argued that my proposal would put in jeopardy the integrity of the exhibits seized as the examinations he would subject them to comply with Home Office Standards and as the RGP was not a Home Office force there would be a conflict. He added that there was nothing in military protocols that obliged him to consider what I was proposing. In what was a clear moment of forceful assertion of his stance, PM COLLINS told Col GREEN that the solution to the matter was to put WATTERSON on a plane to the UK at the earliest opportunity. I interjected stating that if he was contemplating this course of action it would certainly bring about a considerable and detrimental strain to MOD/RGP/GOG relations. I equally mentioned that the RGP could actually be driven to impose executive action over the JPSU but that I stressed my intentions were not to go down that route but rather to resolve the issues by discussion amongst us senior law enforcement officials in order to prevent any further escalation which could jeopardise relations. I informed them both that I would be reporting up COP on this meeting.

[17] These are issues that should have been given the important consideration they merit before effecting the arrest.
[18] Fourth occasion that the RGP requested to take over the conduct of the investigation.

Sir, I can assure you I tried every possible influencing and negotiating tactic I could think of to resolve the impasse but unfortunately they did not shift from their stance. Before concluding the meeting at 1800Hrs I asked PM COLLINS to refer the arguments I had posed on behalf of the RGP to his superiors in UK so that at least they could have a balanced and more objective understanding of the whole matter. I asked PM COLLINS to do this as a matter of urgency and before any decision was taken to fly out the exhibits and/or WATTERSON. He assured me he would do so. We agreed that he would revert to me once his superiors had taken a view.

I then returned to NMH where I briefed COP on the unfortunate non-progress and on the concerns I had that PM COLLINS and Col GREEN were contemplating actions which would totally bypass the RGP's position on the matter. That evening/night I am aware COP tried unsuccessfully on numerous times to contact CBF who was out of the jurisdiction.

Not having heard from PM COLLINS on what his superiors in UK had to say, at 2130Hrs I phoned him but there was no response. At 2134Hrs I phoned him again and I received no response. Whilst waiting hopefully for a return call from him I conducted some research on the applicability of the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006 in Gibraltar and to my understanding found that it was not applicable.[19] I also looked up service police protocols and what they had to say on the matter and I was not surprised to read that there were provisions stating that local legislation might impose similar jurisdictional arrangements to those PM COLLINS was claiming.[20] Then again, irrespective of whether the Armed Forces Act 2006 is not applicable to Gibraltar and whether service police protocols have seemingly not been abided by, I would like to restate the fact that the RGP has primacy over the matter as enshrined in Gibraltar law.

The matter was now becoming time critical as the plans by MOD (Gibraltar) to fly out the exhibits and possibly WATTERSON were proceeding. I was encountering problems in contacting PM COLLINS and so was COP in reaching CBF. We agreed to a number of actions as follows;

- RGP SB to check passenger manifests to see if WATTERSON was booked on a flight departing Gibraltar Airport.
- Cover crucial areas to prevent WATTERSON from being whisked away.
- Make the necessary arrangements to retrieve exhibits seized from the residence if the JPSU did not change their position. This would be done by applying for a search warrant at the courts.

At 2212Hrs PM COLLINGS returned my call and I shared with him my understanding and interpretation of both the Armed Forces Act 2006/2016 and the service police protocols. Unfortunately again my discussions and arguments as referred to in the preceding paragraph practically fell in deaf ears.[21] He reaffirmed that his position had not changed and that his plans to fly out the exhibits the next day were still on track. I asked him whether it was also intended to fly WATTERSON out and he replied by saying he was not at liberty to discuss his investigation strategies with me. I told him that CoP was trying to contact CBF and had left numerous messages for his calls to be returned but that he had not been successful in reaching him. I further told him that it would only be proper that he stalled his plans until CoP and CBF spoke. In response to this PM COLLINS told me that CoP should call Col GREEN, but that in any case he was not answerable to the Command in Gibraltar but rather to the Provost Marshall (Navy) in the UK. I asked him whether he had received any response from his superiors on what had agreed at the meeting in The Tower. He said that his superiors would probably get back to him the following morning but that at present his intentions remained unchanged.

[19] Sec13 of the AFA2016 when read with the AFA2006 actually excludes Gibraltar in its application. This requires official legal interpretation.

[21] Fifth occasion that JPSU is asked to hand over the investigation.

Still concerned that JPSU would continue to entirely disregard our claims we discussed our tactical options and COP sanctioned that we should proceed to retrieve the exhibits. The intention was to meet up with PM COLLINS once again and ask for the exhibits to be handed over and to only resort to executing the warrant if there was non-compliance on his part. COP also sanctioned any other action falling out from any non-compliance after the warrant had been executed.[22] Consequently, Det/Insp ENRILES and Det/Con HOWARD left NMH to apply for a warrant from the Stipendiary Magistrate to search the JPSU premises at Gun Wharf.

At 2243Hrs I again contacted PM COLLINS asking him to meet with me. The plan was to offer the opportunity once again for the exhibits to be handed over and then, if this was not forthcoming, to proceed and execute the warrant. However, he said that he would not meet at such late hour. We arranged that I would go down to his offices early the next day.

At 2330Hrs, I was informed by Det/Insp ENRILES that the Stipendiary Magistrate had not granted the warrant on the basis that he felt there was insufficient suspicion to believe that the computer devices seized from WATTERSON contained incriminating data of offences committed in Gibraltar.[23] This clearly caused for a re-think of our options which included making a fresh application for the warrant in the morning. I then stood down the team for the night.

At 0845Hrs on Wednesday 8th February 2017, I attended the Office of Prosecutions and Criminal Litigation to seek legal support to make the MOD accept that the RGP had primacy in the matter. Mr RHODA's view was that we should try and avoid taking executive action against the JPSU and pursue discussions to reach a pragmatic solution, however, if these failed he agreed and accepted that we were then left with no option other than to either succumb to the JPSU's posture or indeed proceed with a fresh application for a search warrant and seize the property in question. Understandably so, Mr RHODA was puzzled as to why the situation had reached the levels it had within the MOD. During the course of the morning Senior Counsel RHODA spoke with (i) the Acting Governor, Mr Nick PYLE and (ii) Col GREEN in yet a further attempt to convince them to accede to the RGP's requests. He also tried contacting the Command Secretary but he was not contactable.

I am aware that both Mr PYLE and Col GREEN asked Mr RHODA to request the RGP to defer any intended action as both were seeking legal advice from the FCO and UK military respectively as to [22] Possible offences of obstructing police to be considered and executive action followed through in this regard.

[23] Though respecting the Magistrates views for the non-granting of the search warrant, we believed he may have erred in his decision.

whether the RGP had primacy in the matter. When Mr RHODA relayed this to me I expressed resentment as essentially we were being asked to be subservient to UK legal advice when the local position was already well affirmed. I then returned to NMH and reported these latest discussions to COP who then gave me instructions to re-apply for another search warrant to the Chief Justice. I proceeded to do this and having spoken to the Registrar of the Supreme the matter was listed for 1500Hrs that same day.

Throughout the day I sought updates on possible intelligence relating to WATTERSON flying out and SB confirmed that he was not booked on any commercial flight departing from Gibraltar Airport. I still asked SB to remain vigilant at the airport in the event that JPSU staff were spotted attempting to take out the exhibits on a commercial flight.

At around 1400Hrs, it was brought to my notice that a military aircraft had just landed at RAF Gibraltar on an approximate 1-hour stop over. This straight away caused me to suspect that the exhibits and/or WATTERSON could be put on this RAF plane taken out of Gibraltar. I relayed this to COP who asked for contingencies to be put in place to prevent the aircraft from departing if our suspicions were confirmed.[24] You can appreciate how time critical the situation was getting with on the one hand the application for the warrant being heard at 1500Hrs which coincided with the possible departure of the military flight.

I also learnt that the Acting Governor would see both CoP and Col GREEN at The Convent after a separate [firearms capability] meeting which was being attended by both. The matter would again be discussed. It was COP's intentions at this meeting to seek assurances from Col GREEN that the aircraft would be carrying the exhibits. As it happened Col GREEN did not attend the said meeting.

At approximately 1430Hrs Insp PERERA was instructed to position himself in a marked police car by the south barrier opposite GDP post and await instructions. His position was by the very start of the pedestrian and bicycle lane next to the police post. At about 1514Hrs and unable to discuss the matter with Col GREEN and Acting Governor you directed that we contact PM COLLINS to seek the assurances. Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge tried contacting him to no avail as his mobile phone was switched off. We contacted the JPSU offices requesting to speak to PM COLLINS and RAF Sgt O'Malley stated that he was at a meeting with Col GREEN and was unavailable. We explained how imperative it was that we spoke to PM COLLINS as this was in relation to the on-going WATTERSON matter. Sgt O'Malley undertook to contact PM COLLINS for us.

At approximately 1520Hrs, at the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice, heard my application for the warrant to search for the property seized from WATTERSON's residence by the JPSU. Det/Insp ENRILES, Senior Counsel RHODA and Crown Counsel ZAMMIT supported my application. I took to the witness stand and under oath relayed my information and reasonable suspicions and how time critical the situation was, explaining that we also suspected the property we were looking for could well be on board a military aircraft that was about to depart. Det/Insp ENRILES also had to take the stand as the CJ wanted to know on what basis the Stipendiary had declined the granting of the warrant the previous day. At the end of the application, the CJ granted me the warrant but not before underscoring that it was not a good day for law enforcement when one agency had to take executive action against another law enforcement agency in this fashion. I had to concur with the CJ on this.

As I left the Supreme Court at 1540Hrs, I learnt that the military aircraft was starting it engines but was still at its stand - the barriers to the stop traffic across the airfield were down. I also learnt that the GDP officer at the south barrier had been instructed to request Inspector PERERA to move away from his position as his presence interfered with air movements. The GDP officer was informed that we had an operation on-going and we were exercising our duties in the said operation. Insp PERERA referred the GDP officer to contact his superiors. Supt ULLGER also received information from Air Traffic Control that all flights would be diverted because of our presence, including commercial flights.

Throughout this time Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE was continuously trying to raise PM COLLINS to no avail. Sgt O'Malley also confirmed that he had not been able to contact PM COLLINS either. Sgt O'Malley was asked whether he could confirm if the exhibits in question had been transported on to the military aircraft that was shortly scheduled to depart to which he stated that he was not in a position to respond to that question but acknowledged the importance of the request. Our suspicions that the exhibits were on board the aircraft were growing by the second.

At the airfield, GDP were being instructed by ATC to insist that Insp PERERA moved from his position or alternatively, if he was not going to move, to hand over the keys to the patrol car as otherwise the military aircraft would not be able to take off. They were informed again that there was a police operation in place and he would not move from his position or indeed hand over the keys to the patrol car. Insp PERERA noted the arrival at the location of Stn Cmdr Liz HUTCHINSON.

At approximately 1545Hrs I arrived at JPSU HQ in Gun Wharf together with other officers. I identified myself to staff and asked for PM COLLINS. Sgt O'Malley informed us that PM COLLINS was not there but that he would call him and tell him we were at his office. A few minutes later, Sgt O'Malley told me that PM COLLINS was on his way to the office to meet us.

At about 1551Hrs, the military aircraft was seen to slowly move from its stand towards the boundary of the RAF apron. Simultaneous to this Insp PERERA noted a MOD sweeper vehicle yellow in colour driven by a civilian driver known to be either Jacqueline BARBAN or Alicia MUSCAT, drive towards the RGP patrol car and manoeuvre to block the patrol car which at the time was static. This caused Insp PERERA to circumvent the MOD vehicle so that the RGP vehicle was not blocked in. Insp PERERA then slowly moved up the cycle lane northbound to the middle of the runway. The RGP had it blue lights on. Seconds later Inspector PERERA moved further northwards and stopped the patrol car by the north barrier.

At approximately 1555Hrs a GDP dog section patrol car driven by GDP PC Diani with RAF Stn Cmdr Liz HUTCHINSON in the front passenger seat drove up to Insp PERERA's position. Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON told Insp PERERA that she knew what the RGP was doing and that she was "fed up of these silly games", adding that we were preventing a military aircraft from taking off and also endangering the said aircraft. Insp PERERA retorted that if the military aircraft remained by the apron where it currently was, no one would be endangered adding that if she knew what the police operation was about she should understand that we were exercising our duties in respect of this operation. Insp PERERA who at the time was on speaker phone with Ch Insp FINLAYSON and

Supt ULLGER informed Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON that there was an on going police investigation whereby it was strongly suspected that there were items on the aircraft which were linked to the investigation and that we wanted to retrieve them. She was also told that we were desperately trying to contact Col GREEN but had been unable to locate him. Supt ULLGER asked her to please check the manifest to establish whether such items (computers and mobile phones) were on board. She agreed to revert to Supt ULLGER once she had checked the manifest.

At 1559Hrs Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON called Supt ULLGER and stated that she had the manifest before her and that there was no computer equipment or phones logged in it. She was told that it was suspected that also on-board the aircraft was the serviceman subject of the investigation together with the exhibits appertaining to the case. She was informed that we had a warrant issued by the Chief Justice to retrieve these items which were in the possession of JPSU and that if she had any information she should be disclosing this to him. She was warned of the possible consequences of not co-operating with the requests. To this she stated that she would get back to Supt ULLGER. By responding as she did she was clearly revealing that she was withholding information. However, her word was taken at face value given the responsible post she holds and so the RGP patrol car with Insp PERERA was stood down and moved away from the airfield. Shortly after the aircraft returned to its stand within the apron.

At around 1615Hrs, whilst awaiting the arrival of PM COLLINS at the JPSU HQ at Gun Wharf I was asked by Sgt O'MALLEY to speak to Cmdr Jack Hawkins, PM COLLIN's line manager in the UK. The whole issue of whose jurisdiction over the matter was discussed with each of us arguing our respective positions. Cmdr Hawkins could not understand why we were taking such an interest in this case when the original offence had been disclosed in the UK. I repeated the RGP's position in the same way as it had been promulgated to PM COLLINS and Col GREEN. I also explained that in the absence of the JPSU co-operating with the RGP we had had to resort to securing a warrant from the Supreme Court of Gibraltar to retrieve the exhibits. Unsatisfied with what I saying Cmdr HAWKINS said he wanted to speak to the Chief Justice or a more senior police officer than me. PM COLLINS arrived at JPSU HQ at approximately 1625Hrs (40 minutes after I had arrived at the JPSU premises) whilst I was on the phone to his line manager.

PM COLLINS did not make himself available to me and I exercised great restraint in not asserting my authority under the circumstances and execute the warrant. Believe it or not I was still hopeful that PM COLLINS or his superiors would see sense and appreciate the levels this had reached. It was not to be and when I eventually was able to speak to PM COLLINS I expressed how unprofessional he had been in shunning me in the way he had. I accepted that this was an awkward for situation both of us but we had to be professional and resolve it without further conflict. I informed him that I would rather not execute the warrant and that we could still work the matter out favourably for both. PM COLLINS continued in his rigid way that he was at no liberty to discuss the matter with me. He kept receiving phone calls which he took in private. During one of these breaks in our conversation, I received reliable information that it was very likely that both the exhibits and WATTERSON were in fact on board the aircraft. This I relayed to my colleagues dealing with the airport side of the operation.

At 1629Hrs Supt ULLGER again called up Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON asking for any update to their last conversation. She insisted that she could not see anything in the manifest to suggest computers were on board. Supt ULLGER told her to stop being selective with words as she perfectly knew what he was on about i.e. that we were seeking out property/exhibits relating to the WATTERSON investigation. She was warned yet again to which she nervously replied that she would call Supt ULLGER back.

At 1650Hrs Supt ULLGER again called Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON and this time told her we had information that someone had disembarked from the aircraft with items. She was asked to confirm this and she replied that no-one or any cargo had been come off the aircraft. Supt ULLGER expressed his deep dissatisfaction at the misleading responses she was providing, informing her that RGP officers with eyeball on the aircraft had seen this happen. She again stated that she would revert to the Supt. She was reminded about the existence of the warrant and the fact that she could potentially be obstructing police in the execution of our duties. By this stage and by the tone of her voice Supt ULLGER made out that Stn Cmdr was clearly nervous and somewhat confused.

At 1659Hrs, Supt ULLGER called Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON and told her that the traffic barriers had been down for an inordinate amount of time causing major disruption on all our roads. There was also a potential for public disorder amongst thousands of disgruntled pedestrians and motorists who had been held up for over two and a half hours. He requested that traffic was allowed to circulate forthwith. She stated that pedestrians would be released immediately but when pressed to release vehicular traffic too she said she was working on it.

A RGP patrol car was again despatched to the airfield. Insp PAYAS who was in this patrol car positioned it in the same spot as Insp PERERA had initially positioned himself. He was again approached by a GDP officer who asked him to move the patrol car out of from the airfield or hand over the keys. This was denied on the same basis as earlier. The yellow MOD road sweeper again drove towards the RGP patrol car to block its position and causing Insp PAYAS to evade this manoeuvre. The driver of the sweeper vehicle, Ms MUSCAT was spoken to and advised to desist in her actions as she was rendering herself liable to arrest for obstructing police. She obliged and moved her works vehicle to the area of the western hangar.

At this juncture COP informed me that on conversations with Cmdr Hawkins the latter had pleaded to COP to allow the aircraft to depart as the evidence was required in the UK to pursue the investigation against WATTERSON. This then uncovered the truth which confirmed that the evidence and WATTERSON were on the flight although the three senior MOD officials were saying different, clearly to deceive us.

Around this time, I enquired from PM COLLINS whether the exhibits we wanted to seize were in the building and he replied in the negative. I went to on to inform him that I practically knewthat both WATTERSON and the exhibits were on board the aircraft and that we would proceed to retrieve them. He made no remark to this but I noted he suddenly became very pale and uneasy. I became concerned that he had become unwell but he reassured me he was ok. He took one further private call and after that call his behaviour completely changed. He mellowed to suggest that we should explore the running of a parallel investigation and that he would be making available the exhibits for the RGP to examine. I informed him that this course of action was the one I had suggested initially but had not met with his approval. I added that all the conflict and tensions experienced during the past few days could have been well averted.

The warrant issued by the Chief Justice was not executed in the end. At approximately 1745Hrs I was notified by COP that he had received assurances from the CBF that the exhibits would be handed over to the RGP in due course. Consequently, I returned to NMH where we held a de-brief and I arranged for an investigation team to liaise with JPSU to proceed with the investigation. The RGP vehicle positioned by the south barrier had also been recalled to NMH at 1745Hrs.

Final observations.

You will no doubt have grasped how the escalation of tension was not down to lack of will or desire on our part to resolve the issues in a 'grown up' manner. In fact, as alluded to throughout the chronology of events, we made numerous requests for the handing over of the conduct of the [local] investigation. Sadly, we were taken to the limits only to finally achieve what we are perfectly entitled to. I take the following most salient moments as key to how the matter escalated to the levels they did with I dare say a clear devious intent on the part of the senior military officials we were dealing with;

- The poor judgement by JPSU of not sharing with the Gibraltar authorities the fact that they had a potential sex offender(s) in the jurisdiction and where it was reasonably suspected that offences may have been committed locally.
- The lack of supporting legal/tactical/logistical infrastructure for the JPSU to conduct enquiries in a territory where they claim to have jurisdiction and which in essence can lead to abuses of process.
- The lack of clarity on the part MOD's part as to who has primacy in Gibraltar.
- The local interpretation that the Armed Forces Act 2006 & 2016 are not applicable in Gibraltar; meaning the actions carried out JPSU could be construed as ultra vires.
- The intent by Col GREEN and PM COLLINS to disregard the authority of the RGP to assert jurisdiction over the local aspect of the investigation and undermine this authority further by making arrangements to sneak out the exhibits and WATTERSON when it was perfectly clear that the RGP had a [big] claim on the matter.
- The seemingly devious conspiracy employed by Col GREEN, PM COLLINS and Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON to ensure the RGP could not discharge their lawful duty and create a situation to exert pressure on the RGP to relent in our efforts. This includes (i) the instructions issued to civilian MOD drivers to block the path of two RGP patrol cars who were legitimately engaged in a police operation, (ii) the misleading and obstructive attitude displayed by the Stn Cmdr regarding the exhibits and person on board the aircraft (iii) the unhelpful attitudes and stances displayed by Col GREEN and PM COLLINS throughout, (iv) the traffic chaos and potential public order situation created due to the very long time the traffic barriers were closed when there was no need for this.

Finally, you may have a different view to me on this but, Sir, I submit to you that there has certainly been a serious breach of trust and confidence by, in my view, the three senior military officials referred to in this report. It will be awkward to say the least to re-establish this trust and confidence wherever and whenever our respective roles coincide in the future.

As is common and proper practice in these types of cases, on Monday 6th February, Det/Insp ENRILES, began to make arrangements to hold a strategy meeting under recognised child protection procedures with Gibraltar Social Services and SSAFA to discuss Master WATTERSON and for the purpose of information sharing. Equally, considerations were given to convene a Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangement (MAPPA) strategy meeting to discuss Sgt WATTERSON as a person of interest in the context of sex offender management.[6] Very surprisingly, at 1730Hrs on 6/2/17 the position of SSAFA was that no strategy meeting would take place involving Gibraltar authorities and more worryingly still, that Gibraltar Social Services should not have been in the know of the matter.

On Tuesday 7th February 2017, I contacted Provost Marshall (PM) Chris COLLINS and very briefly expressed my concerns on how the matter was being handled. I arranged for him to meet with Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE and Det/Insp ENRILES @1100Hrs at Bleak House.[7] This meeting was attended by PM COLLINS and MA BELL. They provided a brief along the lines of what MA BELL had provided to Det/INSP ENRILES at the weekend.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE then raised the following question; why had the RGP not been notified by JPSU of this on-going investigation? PM COLLINS stated that the suspect was a serving member of the military stationed in Gibraltar and residing in MOD property. That the offence being investigated occurred in the UK and under the Armed Forces Act 2006 they had the legal powers to assert jurisdiction in the manner they had whereas the RGP did not have any locus. Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE accepted that the RGP had no authority over a UK investigation. However, he explained that it was erroneous to suggest that the RGP had no jurisdiction on crimes that may have occurred or were occurring anywhere in Gibraltar including within the MOD estate. It was precisely this that we were concerned about. If the JPSU suspected the computer devices seized from WATTERSON's house were believed to contain indecent imagery of children, then even if these may have been uploaded in the UK, they were now in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar and in breach of Gibraltar Law. We further expressed concern that WATTERSON (or anyone else in the household) may have accessed or been involved with other child sexual exploitation data or activity whilst here in Gibraltar in addition to whatever he was suspected to have accessed in the UK. PM COLLINS did not accept this position and maintained that the JPSU had full jurisdiction of the case.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE respectfully asked PM COLLINS to hand over the exhibits seized from the residence to the RGP but the latter re-asserted his position that he would retain them under the authority vested by the Armed Forces Act 2006 UK which he claimed extended to Gibraltar. PM COLLINS further revealed that if when examined in the UK, the devices contained any incriminating evidence, they would fly WATTERSON back to the UK to answer to any potential charges.[8] This meeting ended at 1200Hrs and Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE advised PM COLLINS that he would be referring the matter up to RGP senior management and that further contact would be made with him later.

[6] Dee me to be best practice in these types of criminal investi gations.

[7] Ironically DCI Tunbridge and DI ENRILES were attending a training session arran gedby Social Services on child protection and safeguarding which was also being attended by SSAFA. The main theme running through this training session being that of multi agency partnership work and information sharing.

[8] This was the first occasion the RGP requested to take over the [local] angle of the investigation from JPSU on the back of there being reasonable suspicions that offences may have been committed in Gibraltar.

I was then briefed by Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE on JPSU's entrenched posture. Whilst I was 100% absolutely certain of the RGP's position on this[9], I asked Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE to consult with the Office of Criminal Prosecutions and Litigation to seek their views on what the position was when two authorities were claiming jurisdiction over a matter. Consequently, senior counsel Ricky RHODA CBE QC confirmed the RGP's position also expressing concern that if the RGP were claiming jurisdiction on the basis of there possibly being offences disclosed locally, that a [coerced] repatriation[10] of WATTERSON by the MOD to potentially face charges in the UK could be deemed to be unlawful - that the proper way to do this was via established judicial processes i.e. European Arrest Warrant.

At 1254Hrs Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge and Det/Insp ENRILES again held a telecon with PM COLLINS explaining that our legal services had confirmed the RGP's position regarding primacy and the fact that local legislation would be applicable over the Armed Forces Act 2006.[11] PM COLLINS reiterated his position viz the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006 adding his legal advisors had confirmed otherwise and therefore he would not be relinquishing conduct of the investigation, basically disregarding local legislation and our standpoint.[12] It was also disclosed by PM COLLINS that arrangements were already made to despatch the exhibits to the UK on Wednesday 8th February 2017 to submit them to forensic analysis. Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE told PM COLLINS that he would contact him soonest.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE reverted to me with this and we discussed what in my view was a very reasonable proposal which would satisfy the RGP and JPSU needs. In essence this was that in recognising there was a UK investigation taking place and in order not to affect this, we could conduct a parallel examination of the devices seized. This could be achieved by the RGP Hi-Tech Crime Unit officer mirroring the devices seized so that he could examine these 'working copies' to determine if there was evidence to support the reasonable grounds we had that there were offences disclosed in Gibraltar. That the JPSU could also have these devices examined in the UK in furtherance of their own investigation of offences taking place there. We run this proposal past Mr RHODA with a view of de-conflicting the matter in the most pragmatic way, though it must be said that there was no obligation on our part to be as flexible as we were being with the suggested proposal – in other words, we could assert full jurisdiction on the basis that we suspected an offence had been committed in our jurisdiction. However, the proposal recognised and respected the JPSU's interest with regards to the UK investigation. It was being done in the spirit of good relations and mutual respect between agencies.

At 1508Hrs Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE and Det/Insp ENRILES held yet another telecon with PM COLLINS and discussed the said proposal explaining how we acknowledged his investigation and how our suggestion would not hinder it. The reasons why we reasonably suspected that offences had been committed in Gibraltar were re-stated. Unfortunately, PM COLLINS refused this course of action stating it could damage the integrity of the exhibits and would be detrimental to the investigation.[13] PM COLLINS' alternative was for the forensic analysis to be conducted in the UK and if anything relating to Gibraltar were uncovered he would take legal advice on whether to release this evidence to the RGP.[14] Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE further attempted to make PM COLLINS comprehend that the question of jurisdiction was very clear and technically, if need be, the RGP could retrieve the said devices from JPSU's possession, something which we did not want to do hence our continued discussions. PM COLLINS' position did not change[15].

I was kept briefed by Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge of the lack of progress and in turn I briefed COP where we agreed that the position of the RGP was as we were articulating it from the outset. We agreed that I would seek a meeting with Chief of Staff Col GREEN to pursue the matter with a view of arriving at the most pragmatic solution to the status quo.

Consequently, at 1630Hrs I attended The Tower at HM Naval Base and met with Col Green. PM COLLINS was also present. I projected the RGP's desire to de-conflict the matter in the most conventional of ways to be expected from both MOD and us. There were valuable lessons to be learnt from the whole experience and no doubt we should, as senior personnel, provide the clarity necessary so that our respective practitioners were able to work in the best possible [technical] environment. I referred to the need for better understanding of each other's roles and responsibilities and how establishing a set protocols or memorandum of understanding would perhaps address the dilemmas we were facing. We were nonetheless still left with un-doing the issues on this particular case. I highlighted how in investigations of sex offences and particularly where there were children involved the best practice dictated sharing of information.[16] In this case it was seemingly lacking as many of the key stake holders who could bring information to be shared were not even aware of JPSU's investigation.

I went over all the circumstances already related to earlier in the report. I then explained that the situation was seemingly escalating to the extent where the MOD's entrenched position did not fare well for relations with the RGP and by default the wider community in Gibraltar. I was taken quite aback when PM COLLINS stated that his mandate was very clear; that he had to look after the interests of the troops and the UK investigation. I acknowledged what he was saying but I explained that actually my mandate extended further than his – that when it came to criminal investigations, I had to look after the interests of Gibraltar PLC and that included everyone in the territory inclusive of MOD personnel.

[13] Clearly an expression of mistrust towards the RGP displayed by PM COLLINS who also constantly stated that he had to ensure the investigation abided to UK standards implying the RGP's standards were not sufficient. The Home Office standards were constantly repeated by him in this context.

[14] This suggestion basically undermines the RGP's ability to conduct enquiries of potential offences occurring in the jurisdiction. Having the appropriate resources to conduct the examinations locally, it would be wholly unethical that we would have to rely on another agency to search for the evidence and then live in the hope that it could be released back to the RGP.

[15] The third occasion JPSU were refusing to oblige to our requests.

[16] The Bichard Inquiry report into the Soham murders identified one of the main shortfalls to be failure to share information effectively. This inquiry revolutionized processes for the UK police and social services and which the RGP have stringently put in place. Similary, the Rotherham Child Sexual Exploitation scandal - an independent inquiry by Prof Alexis Jay published in Aug 2014 condemned the failure of the authorities in Rotherham to act effectively against the abuse or even, in some cases, to acknowledge that it was taking place.

suspicion of possession of indecent imagery of children. His residence had been searched and computers and storage devices seized. The authority to arrest was claimed under sections 42 and 67 of the AFA 2006.

5. The RGP wish to investigate and have made numerous requests to the British military to enable them to do so, which were refused. This culminated, on 8 February 2017, in the RGP obtaining a warrant to search for the seized property.

6. When the RGP went to the military base to execute the warrant they found the suspect and the seized material were on a military plane about to be flown to the United Kingdom. The RGP prevented the aircraft from taking off.

Legal Background

Offences and powers created by the AFA 2006

7. By virtue of section 367(1) AFA 2006 every member of the regular forces is subject to service law at all times. The regular forces include the RAF; see section 374 AFA 2006.

8. Part 1 of the AFA 2006 provides for a number of service offences.[1] Amongst those offences is that prescribed by section 42(1) AFA 2006, which provides that a person subject to service law commits an offence if he does any act that -- (a) is punishable by the law of England and Wales; or (b) if done in England or Wales, would be so punishable.

[1] Defined by section 50(2)(a) AFA 2006 as including any offence under Part 1.

As I said it was a disappointing day and not one to gloat about but clearly we must not find ourselves in such circumstances ever again why I have proposed a meeting on the 22nd February of all stakeholders. The Attorney General has welcomed such a meeting which he will chair at his offices at No.6.

I strongly believe that MOD senior officials did not behave appropriately and had they used some practical common sense, we could have averted this situation. More worryingly they showed lack of respect by challenging the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Police both Constitutional posts.

I am willing to discuss this further should you so wish.

RE: Wat erson Enquiry - Incident

Please find attached 3 documents which hopefully will put into context the investigation of RAF Sergeant Waterson and the sequence of events leading up to and including the blocking of the RAF flight on the 8th February 2017.

Document 1: Report submitted by Supt McGrail of the sequence of events as there were known at the time with a covering letter from me.

Document 2: Legal opinions commissioned by the Attorney General from Lord Pannick QC from Blackstones Chambers, Temple, London.

Document 3: Letter from Rear Admiral A J Radakin, Chief of Staff, Joint Forces Command in no uncertain terms a letter of apology and recognition of jurisdiction.

There are numerous other documents and correspondence between relevant stakeholders which can be made available should a decision be taken to progress this matter by way of a formal enquiry.

There is also material, intelligence and information which came to our notice as we conducted this investigation where senior military officials challenged the authority of constitutional posts in Gibraltar and then some off the cuff comments which were inappropriate to say the least.

My SMT and I are willing to go before the authority should you require any further information.

RE: RAF Sergeant WATTERSON

13th February 2017

Dear Sirs

Please see attached report submitted by Superintendent McGrail in relation to RAF Sergeant WATTERSON.

This clearly was a sad disappointing day for Law Enforcement in Gibraltar and more so for relations between Gibraltar Forces Command and the RGP.

I do not wish to repeat what is already contained in this report which is quite detailed, but just to echo some of the points which I personally dealt with.

From the outset I wanted a pragmatic and sensible approach notwithstanding I had firm footing on jurisdiction and Gibraltar law. I even went as far as involving the AGs chambers at an early stage to provide legal advice by asking Ricky Rhoda to personally speak to GFC but again to no avail.

To me this was a complete disregard and lack of respect to our Attorney General.

Add insult to injury the matter deteriorated very rapidly when clearly senior MOD officers were being deceitful and evasive to the point that we had no alternative but to obtain a Chief Justice's warrant to make these officials see the gravity of the situation and see sense.

Armed with this warrant I informed the Chief of Staff and later Commander British Forces that I was being pushed against the wall to a place that I would not rather be, and as the last resort, we would now be in a position to execute this warrant on another Law Enforcement body (RNPM) something which I was very reluctant to do. I believe I showed great restraint in holding back from doing this.

A conversation with Commander Jack Hawkins (Chief of RNP- UK) then revealed and confirmed that the evidence was on the aircraft and I then instructed for this aircraft to be held back from departing. CBF then saw sense in de-escalating everything and I believe instructed for the aircraft to return to the stand and for Watterson and the evidence to be disembarked. I was then given his reassurance that the computer devices would be handed over to the RGP. After this was done I allowed for the aircraft to depart.

Even then I proposed that we should join up in taking this forward and for the RNPM officers to assist in the retrieval of evidence and to assist with the Forensics. Finally they acceded and we are now working together.

As I said it was a disappointing day and not one to gloat about but clearly we must not find ourselves in such circumstances ever again why I have proposed a meeting on the 22nd February of all stakeholders. The Attorney General has welcomed such a meeting which he will chair at his offices at No.6.

I strongly believe that MOD senior officials did not behave appropriately and had they used some practical common sense, we could have averted this situation. More worryingly they showed lack of respect by challenging the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Police both Constitutional posts.

I am willing to discuss this further should you so wish.

OFFICIAL SENSITIVE

10th February 2017

Commissioner of Police;

Sir,

RE:- Investigation in to RAF Sgt WATTERSON

This report provides COP with the chronological sequence of events as I have them and with as much a detailed account as I know it to be regarding the above captioned matter. Enquiries are continuing to elicit further information with regards to both the investigation in to Sgt WATTERSON and to the issues that arose once the RGP took an interest in the matter. I would therefore ask you to understand that this paper may not contain all the answers to questions you may have after absorbing the contents herein. On occasions during this report I have also commented on my prima facie observations on matters arising, obviously from a professional local application.

In the early hours of 4th February 2017, an email was received at RGP Command & Despatch from colleagues in the GDP advising that the JPSU had the previous day (3rd Feb 2017) effected the arrest of a serviceman, Sgt WATTERSON, in Gibraltar, on suspicion that this man was in possession of indecent imagery of children. His residence at [redacted] had been searched by JPSU and computers and data storage devices had been seized. That Sgt WATTERSON had since been released from his arrest and had undergone a [redacted] which determined that he was at [redacted]. At that point no further details were available to the GDP.[1]

This information was forwarded by CAD to our Public Protection Unit for their information. Coincidentally, Det/Insp Enriles, o.i.c of the PPU, happened to be the RGP duty officer that morning and on reading the communication sought further details from GDP Sgt Hosken who unfortunately was unable to help any further as they [the GDP] had no additional information to share.

Consequently, Det/Insp Enriles contacted the JPSU Master-at-Arms Claire BELL who informed of the following; that Timothy WATTERSON moved to Gibraltar on the 7th January 2017 for a two year posting. He moved to Gibraltar with his wife and [redacted] That they had received information from their Force Intel Bureau in UK via the National Crime Agency/Leicestershire Police that an IP address in the UK had uploaded an indecent Cat B image of a prepubescent female exposing herself. This image had been uploaded during the course of June 2016 to an IP address allocated to WATTERSON at his previous posting address in Leicestershire, UK. MA BELL

further informed that as a result of this information they had arrested him on suspicion of possession of indecent images and seized various data storage devices in the residence.[2] The authority to arrest was provided to Det/Insp Enriles as Sec 42 & 67 of the Armed Forces Offences Act 2006 UK that she claimed extended them jurisdiction in Gibraltar. No reference to Gibraltar law was made. I also understand that the authority to search WATTERSON's residence was Sections 79 & 80 Chapter 4 of JSP 830 (I believe these to be their version of our codes of practice). WATTERSON was detained by JPSU at their premises.[3]

JPSU procedures are actually based on the UK's Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) so when he was processed by the services police he elected the right to free and independent legal advice – there being no such duty solicitor scheme in Gibraltar the MA explained they would have to fly out one from the UK! Due to this untidy situation the JPSU were compelled to release WATTERSON from his arrest and he was informed that he may be seen at a later date. The devices seized from the search of the residence were retained with the intention of subjecting them to forensic analysis.[4]

MA BELL further explained that post to his release from arrest WATTERSON had also been also psychiatrically assessed by MOD (Gibraltar) medical personnel and this revealed that he might be a risk to himself. Because of this development JPSU appointed him a 24/7 'chaperone' for his own safety and instructed that he was not to return to the matrimonial home.[5] In the meantime, MOD social services SSAFA would be conducting assessment of WATTERSON's [redacted] who attends [redacted] No reference was made of any intended actions with Mrs WATTERSON.

Det/Insp ENRILES expressed his concerns to MA BELL that these type of investigations required the sharing of information at far an earlier stage given the potential local implications. Neither did we have any photograph of the subject to assist us in the identification and generating awareness of him. Although provisionally housed at Devil's Tower Camp, he was still free to roam about Gibraltar as long as the chaperone remained with him. To this Det/Insp Enriles highlighted that notwithstanding the measures in place these could be deemed insufficient and may not necessarily prevent an act of self harm or an attempt on his life, or even prevent him from committing further offences. Det/Insp ENRILES added that even though WATTERSON had not been in our jurisdiction for long he had still had opportunities to interact with members of the public/children and therefore there was a need to properly risk assess him. MA BELL agreed with the Det/Insp and arranged to share WATTERSON's photograph for the purpose of creating awareness for RGP personnel.

[2] On the facts available, the action taken by JPSU in pre-emptively arresting Watterson at such an early stage is not regarded in the RGP, or indeed by UK civilian police, as best practice and procedure.

[3] JPSU premises are not regarded in Gibraltar law as a designated police station for the detention of persons under arrest. Neither can the JPSU grant and/or impose bail conditions post to an arrest.

[4] This begs the question of whether in effect the search and seizure of the devices from the residence and their continued detention retains any legitimacy. I say so because no search warrants were issued for this process & therefore it could potentially be regarded as a tactical short circuit of proper procedures which in turn could be calculated to be an abuse of powers. i.e. Police cannot go about arresting individuals and search their properties without a warrant, then release the person from arrest and retain the exhibits found for further investigation. I may be wrong but it certainly looks a very odd and I dare say unprofessional/unethical practice, if not an illegal one.

[5] I am presuming that the power to impose these control measures is provided by military law.

As is common and proper practice in these types of cases, on Monday 6th February, Det/Insp ENRILES, began to make arrangements to hold a strategy meeting under recognised child protection procedures with Gibraltar Social Services and SSAFA to discuss Master WATTERSON and for the purpose of information sharing. Equally, considerations were given to convene a Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangement (MAPPA) strategy meeting to discuss Sgt WATTERSON as a person of interest in the context of sex offender management.[6] Very surprisingly, at 1730Hrs on 6/2/17 the position of SSAFA was that no strategy meeting would take place involving Gibraltar authorities and more worryingly still, that Gibraltar Social Services should not have been in the know of the matter.

On Tuesday 7th February 2017, I contacted Provost Marshall (PM) Chris COLLINS and very briefly expressed my concerns on how the matter was being handled. I arranged for him to meet with Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE and Det/Insp ENRILES @1100Hrs at Bleak House.[7] This meeting was attended by PM COLLINS and MA BELL. They provided a brief along the lines of what MA BELL had provided to Det/INSP ENRILES at the weekend.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE then raised the following question; why had the RGP not been notified by JPSU of this on-going investigation? PM COLLINS stated that the suspect was a serving member of the military stationed in Gibraltar and residing in MOD property. That the offence being investigated occurred in the UK and under the Armed Forces Act 2006 they had the legal powers to assert jurisdiction in the manner they had whereas the RGP did not have any locus. Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE accepted that the RGP had no authority over a UK investigation. However, he explained that it was erroneous to suggest that the RGP had no jurisdiction on crimes that may have occurred or were occurring anywhere in Gibraltar including within the MOD estate. It was precisely this that we were concerned about. If the JPSU suspected the computer devices seized from WATTERSON's house were believed to contain indecent imagery of children, then even if these may have been uploaded in the UK, they were now in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar and in breach of Gibraltar Law. We further expressed concern that WATTERSON (or anyone else in the household) may have accessed or been involved with other child sexual exploitation data or activity whilst here in Gibraltar in addition to whatever he was suspected to have accessed in the UK. PM COLLINS did not accept this position and maintained that the JPSU had full jurisdiction of the case.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE respectfully asked PM COLLINS to hand over the exhibits seized from the residence to the RGP but the latter re-asserted his position that he would retain them under the authority vested by the Armed Forces Act 2006 UK which he claimed extended to Gibraltar. PM COLLINS further revealed that if when examined in the UK, the devices contained any incriminating evidence, they would fly WATTERSON back to the UK to answer to any potential charges.[8] This meeting ended at 1200Hrs and Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE advised PM COLLINS that he would be referring the matter up to RGP senior management and that further contact would be made with him later.

[6] Deemed to be best practice in these types of criminal investigations.

[7] Ironically DCI Tunbridge and DI ENRILES were attending a training session arranged by Social Services on child protection and safeguardin gwhich was also being attended by SSAFA. The main theme running through this training session being that of multi agency partnership work and information sharing.

[8] This was the first occasion the RGP requested to take over the [local] angle of the investigation from JPSU on the back of there being reasonable suspicions that offences may have been committed in Gibraltar.

I was then briefed by Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE on JPSU's entrenched posture. Whilst I was 100% absolutely certain of the RGP's position on this[9], I asked Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE to consult with the Office of Criminal Prosecutions and Litigation to seek their views on what the position was when two authorities were claiming jurisdiction over a matter. Consequently, senior counsel Ricky RHODA CBE QC confirmed the RGP's position also expressing concern that if the RGP were claiming jurisdiction on the basis of there possibly being offences disclosed locally, that a [coerced] repatriation[10] of WATTERSON by the MOD to potentially face charges in the UK could be deemed to be unlawful - that the proper way to do this was via established judicial processes i.e. European Arrest Warrant.

At 1254Hrs Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge and Det/Insp ENRILES again held a telecon with PM COLLINS explaining that our legal services had confirmed the RGP's position regarding primacy and the fact that local legislation would be applicable over the Armed Forces Act 2006.[11] PM COLLINS reiterated his position viz the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006 adding his legal advisors had confirmed otherwise and therefore he would not be relinquishing conduct of the investigation, basically disregarding local legislation and our standpoint.[12] It was also disclosed by PM COLLINS that arrangements were already made to despatch the exhibits to the UK on Wednesday 8th February 2017 to submit them to forensic analysis. Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE told PM COLLINS that he would contact him soonest.

Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE reverted to me with this and we discussed what in my view was a very reasonable proposal which would satisfy the RGP and JPSU needs. In essence this was that in recognising there was a UK investigation taking place and in order not to affect this, we could conduct a parallel examination of the devices seized. This could be achieved by the RGP Hi-Tech Crime Unit officer mirroring the devices seized so that he could examine these 'working copies' to determine if there was evidence to support the reasonable grounds we had that there were offences disclosed in Gibraltar. That the JPSU could also have these devices examined in the UK in furtherance of their own investigation of offences taking place there. We run this proposal past Mr RHODA with a view of de-conflicting the matter in the most pragmatic way, though it must be said that there was no obligation on our part to be as flexible as we were being with the suggested proposal – in other words, we could assert full jurisdiction on the basis that we suspected an offence had been committed in our jurisdiction. However, the proposal recognised and respected the JPSU's interest with regards to the UK investigation. It was being done in the spirit of good relations and mutual respect between agencies.

At 1508Hrs Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE and Det/Insp ENRILES held yet another telecon with PM COLLINS and discussed the said proposal explaining how we acknowledged his investigation and how our suggestion would not hinder it. The reasons why we reasonably suspected that offences had been committed in Gibraltar were re-stated. Unfortunately, PM COLLINS refused this course of action stating it could damage the integrity of the exhibits and would be detrimental to the investigation.[13] PM COLLINS' alternative was for the forensic analysis to be conducted in the UK and if anything relating to Gibraltar were uncovered he would take legal advice on whether to release this evidence to the RGP.[14] Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE further attempted to make PM COLLINS comprehend that the question of jurisdiction was very clear and technically, if need be, the RGP could retrieve the said devices from JPSU's possession, something which we did not want to do hence our continued discussions. PM COLLINS' position did not change[15].

I was kept briefed by Det Ch/Insp Tunbridge of the lack of progress and in turn I briefed COP where we agreed that the position of the RGP was as we were articulating it from the outset. We agreed that I would seek a meeting with Chief of Staff Col GREEN to pursue the matter with a view of arriving at the most pragmatic solution to the status quo.

Consequently, at 1630Hrs I attended The Tower at HM Naval Base and met with Col Green. PM COLLINS was also present. I projected the RGP's desire to de-conflict the matter in the most conventional of ways to be expected from both MOD and us. There were valuable lessons to be learnt from the whole experience and no doubt we should, as senior personnel, provide the clarity necessary so that our respective practitioners were able to work in the best possible [technical] environment. I referred to the need for better understanding of each other's roles and responsibilities and how establishing a set protocols or memorandum of understanding would perhaps address the dilemmas we were facing. We were nonetheless still left with un-doing the issues on this particular case. I highlighted how in investigations of sex offences and particularly where there were children involved the best practice dictated sharing of information.[16] In this case it was seemingly lacking as many of the key stake holders who could bring information to be shared were not even aware of JPSU's investigation.

I went over all the circumstances already related to earlier in the report. I then explained that the situation was seemingly escalating to the extent where the MOD's entrenched position did not fare well for relations with the RGP and by default the wider community in Gibraltar. I was taken quite aback when PM COLLINS stated that his mandate was very clear; that he had to look after the interests of the troops and the UK investigation. I acknowledged what he was saying but I explained that actually my mandate extended further than his – that when it came to criminal investigations, I had to look after the interests of Gibraltar PLC and that included everyone in the territory inclusive of MOD personnel.

[13] Clearly an expression of mistrust towards the RGP displayed by PM COLLINS who also constantly stated that he had to ensure the investigation abided to UK standards implying the RGP's standards were not sufficient. The Home Office standards were constantly repeated by him in this context.

[14] This suggestion basically undermines the RGP's ability to conduct enquiries of potential offences occurring in the jurisdiction. Having the appropriate resources to conduct the examinations locally, it would be wholly unethical that we would have to rely on another agency to search for the evidence and then live in the hope that it could be released back to the RGP.

[15] The third occasion JPSU were refusing to oblige to our requests.

[16] The Bichard Inquiry report into the Soham murders identified one of the main shortfalls to be failure to share information effectively. This inquiry revolutionized processes for the UK police and social services and which the RGP have stringently put in place. Similary, the Rotherham Child Sexual Exploitation scandal - an independent inquiry by Prof Alexis Jay published in Aug 2014 condemned the failure of the authorities in Rotherham to act effectively against the abuse or even, in some cases, to acknowledge that it was taking place.

I expressed dissatisfaction on how the JPSU were handling the matter and how the overall risks attached to this case were not being properly addressed. I described how the RGP operate to best practice and procedures on these type of investigations – that we had a forensic computer expert, dedicated risk managers and all the supporting infrastructure for such an investigation which evidently the MOD did not have in Gibraltar as had been proven with the inability to proceed with the interviewing of WATTERSON and provide free/independent legal advice, their inability to impose grant/impose bail conditions or even custody facilities[17]. Whilst I was assured that WATTERSON was being 'properly managed', I was not reassured that he may have already committed further offences whilst in Gibraltar. I also enquired as to why the other members of the family, i.e. the wife and 14 year son were not being regarded as potential suspects too. The focus was solely on WATTERSON and it was mentioned that they already had evidence against him of having committed an offence in the UK. This caused me to suspect that there was probably more to the case than what met the eye. PM COLLINS' response was that he was under no obligation to discuss his investigation strategies with me. In turn, this further enhanced suspicions that offences had been committed in Gibraltar as otherwise why would the JPSU seize computers and other devices if they did not believe them to contain incriminating material. All these concerns I shared with Col Green and PM COLLINS adding that I was duty bound to investigate WATTERSON locally – I could simply not leave such a serious matter walk under my nose in the jurisdiction of Gibraltar. I explained how in the past the RGP had assumed the lead and conduct of serious criminal investigations within the MOD estate ranging from serious assaults on MOD [children] dependants where the assailant was a serviceman to the sudden death of senior MOD official as only two examples. I referred to these matters simply to highlight our argument from the outset that the RGP had primacy in the jurisdiction.[18]

I conveyed my concerns to the two gentlemen that there were too many factors in terms of possible local victims, possible crimes committed here, public perception of the RGP and the legal position on jurisdiction amongst others that compelled the RGP to have a say on the matter. I did, however, state that there was still room to work the matter together to oblige to both agency's needs. Col GREEN asked me what actions the RGP would take if indeed incriminating material were found in any of the devices seized to which I explained that there would certainly be an intervention on our part to probe in to the matter further. This was totally mis-construed by Col GREEN who argued that going in "guns blazing" would compromise the UK investigation. This argument fazed me as Col GREEN was being critical of a potential action the RGP could consider, but not necessarily carry out, when in fact the JPSU's intervention had already precisely done what he was advocating should not be done.

The proposal to run a parallel investigation was flatly discarded by PM COLLINS who said he had top cover from his superiors in the UK that he was on solid footing to retain conduct of the investigation. He argued that my proposal would put in jeopardy the integrity of the exhibits seized as the examinations he would subject them to comply with Home Office Standards and as the RGP was not a Home Office force there would be a conflict. He added that there was nothing in military protocols that obliged him to consider what I was proposing. In what was a clear moment of forceful assertion of his stance, PM COLLINS told Col GREEN that the solution to the matter was to put WATTERSON on a plane to the UK at the earliest opportunity. I interjected stating that if he was contemplating this course of action it would certainly bring about a considerable and detrimental strain to MOD/RGP/GOG relations. I equally mentioned that the RGP could actually be driven to impose executive action over the JPSU but that I stressed my intentions were not to go down that route but rather to resolve the issues by discussion amongst us senior law enforcement officials in order to prevent any further escalation which could jeopardise relations. I informed them both that I would be reporting up COP on this meeting.

[17] These are issues that should have been given the important consideration they merit before effecting the arrest.
[18] Fourth occasion that the RGP requested to take over the conduct of the investigation.

Sir, I can assure you I tried every possible influencing and negotiating tactic I could think of to resolve the impasse but unfortunately they did not shift from their stance. Before concluding the meeting at 1800Hrs I asked PM COLLINS to refer the arguments I had posed on behalf of the RGP to his superiors in UK so that at least they could have a balanced and more objective understanding of the whole matter. I asked PM COLLINS to do this as a matter of urgency and before any decision was taken to fly out the exhibits and/or WATTERSON. He assured me he would do so. We agreed that he would revert to me once his superiors had taken a view.

I then returned to NMH where I briefed COP on the unfortunate non-progress and on the concerns I had that PM COLLINS and Col GREEN were contemplating actions which would totally bypass the RGP's position on the matter. That evening/night I am aware COP tried unsuccessfully on numerous times to contact CBF who was out of the jurisdiction.

Not having heard from PM COLLINS on what his superiors in UK had to say, at 2130Hrs I phoned him but there was no response. At 2134Hrs I phoned him again and I received no response. Whilst waiting hopefully for a return call from him I conducted some research on the applicability of the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006 in Gibraltar and to my understanding found that it was not applicable.[19] I also looked up service police protocols and what they had to say on the matter and I was not surprised to read that there were provisions stating that local legislation might impose similar jurisdictional arrangements to those PM COLLINS was claiming.[20] Then again, irrespective of whether the Armed Forces Act 2006 is not applicable to Gibraltar and whether service police protocols have seemingly not been abided by, I would like to restate the fact that the RGP has primacy over the matter as enshrined in Gibraltar law.

The matter was now becoming time critical as the plans by MOD (Gibraltar) to fly out the exhibits and possibly WATTERSON were proceeding. I was encountering problems in contacting PM COLLINS and so was COP in reaching CBF. We agreed to a number of actions as follows;

- RGP SB to check passenger manifests to see if WATTERSON was booked on a flight departing Gibraltar Airport.
- Cover crucial areas to prevent WATTERSON from being whisked away.
- Make the necessary arrangements to retrieve exhibits seized from the residence if the JPSU did not change their position. This would be done by applying for a search warrant at the courts.

At 2212Hrs PM COLLINGS returned my call and I shared with him my understanding and interpretation of both the Armed Forces Act 2006/2016 and the service police protocols. Unfortunately again my discussions and arguments as referred to in the preceding paragraph practically fell in deaf ears.[21] He reaffirmed that his position had not changed and that his plans to fly out the exhibits the next day were still on track. I asked him whether it was also intended to fly WATTERSON out and he replied by saying he was not at liberty to discuss his investigation strategies with me. I told him that CoP was trying to contact CBF and had left numerous messages for his calls to be returned but that he had not been successful in reaching him. I further told him that it would only be proper that he stalled his plans until CoP and CBF spoke. In response to this PM COLLINS told me that CoP should call Col GREEN, but that in any case he was not answerable to the Command in Gibraltar but rather to the Provost Marshall (Navy) in the UK. I asked him whether he had received any response from his superiors on what had agreed at the meeting in The Tower. He said that his superiors would probably get back to him the following morning but that at present his intentions remained unchanged.

Still concerned that JPSU would continue to entirely disregard our claims we discussed our tactical options and COP sanctioned that we should proceed to retrieve the exhibits. The intention was to meet up with PM COLLINS once again and ask for the exhibits to be handed over and to only resort to executing the warrant if there was non-compliance on his part. COP also sanctioned any other action falling out from any non-compliance after the warrant had been executed.[22] Consequently, Det/Insp ENRILES and Det/Con HOWARD left NMH to apply for a warrant from the Stipendiary Magistrate to search the JPSU premises at Gun Wharf.

At 2243Hrs I again contacted PM COLLINS asking him to meet with me. The plan was to offer the opportunity once again for the exhibits to be handed over and then, if this was not forthcoming, to proceed and execute the warrant. However, he said that he would not meet at such late hour. We arranged that I would go down to his offices early the next day.

At 2330Hrs, I was informed by Det/Insp ENRILES that the Stipendiary Magistrate had not granted the warrant on the basis that he felt there was insufficient suspicion to believe that the computer devices seized from WATTERSON contained incriminating data of offences committed in Gibraltar.[23] This clearly caused for a re-think of our options which included making a fresh application for the warrant in the morning. I then stood down the team for the night.

At 0845Hrs on Wednesday 8th February 2017, I attended the Office of Prosecutions and Criminal Litigation to seek legal support to make the MOD accept that the RGP had primacy in the matter. Mr RHODA's view was that we should try and avoid taking executive action against the JPSU and pursue discussions to reach a pragmatic solution, however, if these failed he agreed and accepted that we were then left with no option other than to either succumb to the JPSU's posture or indeed proceed with a fresh application for a search warrant and seize the property in question. Understandably so, Mr RHODA was puzzled as to why the situation had reached the levels it had within the MOD. During the course of the morning Senior Counsel RHODA spoke with (i) the Acting Governor, Mr Nick PYLE and (ii) Col GREEN in yet a further attempt to convince them to accede to the RGP's requests. He also tried contacting the Command Secretary but he was not contactable.

I am aware that both Mr PYLE and Col GREEN asked Mr RHODA to request the RGP to defer any intended action as both were seeking legal advice from the FCO and UK military respectively as to take executive action against another law enforcement agency in this fashion. I had to concur with the CJ on this.

[22] Possible offences of obstructing police to be considered and executive action followed through in this regard.
[23] Though respecting the Magistrates views for the non-granting of the search warrant, we believed he may have erred in his decision.

As I left the Supreme Court at 1540Hrs, I learnt that the military aircraft was starting it engines but was still at its stand - the barriers to the stop traffic across the airfield were down. I also learnt that the GDP officer at the south barrier had been instructed to request Inspector PERERA to move away from his position as his presence interfered with air movements. The GDP officer was informed that we had an operation on-going and we were exercising our duties in the said operation. Insp PERERA referred the GDP officer to contact his superiors. Supt ULLGER also received information from Air Traffic Control that all flights would be diverted because of our presence, including commercial flights.

Throughout this time Det Ch/Insp TUNBRIDGE was continuously trying to raise PM COLLINS to no avail. Sgt O'Malley also confirmed that he had not been able to contact PM COLLINS either. Sgt O'Malley was asked whether he could confirm if the exhibits in question had been transported on to the military aircraft that was shortly scheduled to depart to which he stated that he was not in a position to respond to that question but acknowledged the importance of the request. Our suspicions that the exhibits were on board the aircraft were growing by the second.

At the airfield, GDP were being instructed by ATC to insist that Insp PERERA moved from his position or alternatively, if he was not going to move, to hand over the keys to the patrol car as otherwise the military aircraft would not be able to take off. They were informed again that there was a police operation in place and he would not move from his position or indeed hand over the keys to the patrol car. Insp PERERA noted the arrival at the location of Stn Cmdr Liz HUTCHINSON.

At approximately 1545Hrs I arrived at JPSU HQ in Gun Wharf together with other officers. I identified myself to staff and asked for PM COLLINS. Sgt O'Malley informed us that PM COLLINS was not there but that he would call him and tell him we were at his office. A few minutes later, Sgt O'Malley told me that PM COLLINS was on his way to the office to meet us.

At about 1551Hrs, the military aircraft was seen to slowly move from its stand towards the boundary of the RAF apron. Simultaneous to this Insp PERERA noted a MOD sweeper vehicle yellow in colour driven by a civilian driver known to be either Jacqueline BARBAN or Alicia MUSCAT, drive towards the RGP patrol car and manoeuvre to block the patrol car which at the time was static. This caused Insp PERERA to circumvent the MOD vehicle so that the RGP vehicle was not blocked in. Insp PERERA then slowly moved up the cycle lane northbound to the middle of the runway. The RGP had it blue lights on. Seconds later Inspector PERERA moved further northwards and stopped the patrol car by the north barrier.

At approximately 1555Hrs a GDP dog section patrol car driven by GDP PC Diani with RAF Stn Cmdr Liz HUTCHINSON in the front passenger seat drove up to Insp PERERA's position. Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON told Insp PERERA that she knew what the RGP was doing and that she was "fed up of these silly games", adding that we were preventing a military aircraft from taking off and also endangering the said aircraft. Insp PERERA retorted that if the military aircraft remained by the apron where it currently was, no one would be endangered adding that if she knew what the police operation was about she should understand that we were exercising our duties in respect of this operation. Insp PERERA who at the time was on speaker phone with Ch Insp FINLAYSON and

Supt ULLGER informed Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON that there was an on going police investigation whereby it was strongly suspected that there were items on the aircraft which were linked to the investigation and that we wanted to retrieve them. She was also told that we were desperately trying to contact Col GREEN but had been unable to locate him. Supt ULLGER asked her to please check the manifest to establish whether such items (computers and mobile phones) were on board. She agreed to revert to Supt ULLGER once she had checked the manifest.

At 1559Hrs Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON called Supt ULLGER and stated that she had the manifest before her and that there was no computer equipment or phones logged in it. She was told that it was suspected that also on-board the aircraft was the serviceman subject of the investigation together with the exhibits appertaining to the case. She was informed that we had a warrant issued by the Chief Justice to retrieve these items which were in the possession of JPSU and that if she had any information she should be disclosing this to him. She was warned of the possible consequences of not co-operating with the requests. To this she stated that she would get back to Supt ULLGER. By responding as she did she was clearly revealing that she was withholding information. However, her word was taken at face value given the responsible post she holds and so the RGP patrol car with Insp PERERA was stood down and moved away from the airfield. Shortly after the aircraft returned to its stand within the apron.

At around 1615Hrs, whilst awaiting the arrival of PM COLLINS at the JPSU HQ at Gun Wharf I was asked by Sgt O'MALLEY to speak to Cmdr Jack Hawkins, PM COLLIN's line manager in the UK. The whole issue of whose jurisdiction over the matter was discussed with each of us arguing our respective positions. Cmdr Hawkins could not understand why we were taking such an interest in this case when the original offence had been disclosed in the UK. I repeated the RGP's position in the same way as it had been promulgated to PM COLLINS and Col GREEN. I also explained that in the absence of the JPSU co-operating with the RGP we had had to resort to securing a warrant from the Supreme Court of Gibraltar to retrieve the exhibits. Unsatisfied with what I saying Cmdr HAWKINS said he wanted to speak to the Chief Justice or a more senior police officer than me. PM COLLINS arrived at JPSU HQ at approximately 1625Hrs (40 minutes after I had arrived at the JPSU premises) whilst I was on the phone to his line manager.

PM COLLINS did not make himself available to me and I exercised great restraint in not asserting my authority under the circumstances and execute the warrant. Believe it or not I was still hopeful that PM COLLINS or his superiors would see sense and appreciate the levels this had reached. It was not to be and when I eventually was able to speak to PM COLLINS I expressed how unprofessional he had been in shunning me in the way he had. I accepted that this was an awkward for situation both of us but we had to be professional and resolve it without further conflict. I informed him that I would rather not execute the warrant and that we could still work the matter out favourably for both. PM COLLINS continued in his rigid way that he was at no liberty to discuss the matter with me. He kept receiving phone calls which he took in private. During one of these breaks in our conversation, I received reliable information that it was very likely that both the exhibits and WATTERSON were in fact on board the aircraft. This I relayed to my colleagues dealing with the airport side of the operation.

At 1629Hrs Supt ULLGER again called up Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON asking for any update to their last conversation. She insisted that she could not see anything in the manifest to suggest computers were on board. Supt ULLGER told her to stop being selective with words as she perfectly knew what he was on about i.e. that we were seeking out property/exhibits relating to the WATTERSON investigation. She was warned yet again to which she nervously replied that she would call Supt ULLGER back.

At 1650Hrs Supt ULLGER again called Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON and this time told her we had information that someone had disembarked from the aircraft with items. She was asked to confirm this and she replied that no-one or any cargo had been come off the aircraft. Supt ULLGER expressed his deep dissatisfaction at the misleading responses she was providing, informing her that RGP officers with eyeball on the aircraft had seen this happen. She again stated that she would revert to the Supt. She was reminded about the existence of the warrant and the fact that she could potentially be obstructing police in the execution of our duties. By this stage and by the tone of her voice Supt ULLGER made out that Stn Cmdr was clearly nervous and somewhat confused.

At 1659Hrs, Supt ULLGER called Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON and told her that the traffic barriers had been down for an inordinate amount of time causing major disruption on all our roads. There was also a potential for public disorder amongst thousands of disgruntled pedestrians and motorists who had been held up for over two and a half hours. He requested that traffic was allowed to circulate forthwith. She stated that pedestrians would be released immediately but when pressed to release vehicular traffic too she said she was working on it.

A RGP patrol car was again despatched to the airfield. Insp PAYAS who was in this patrol car positioned it in the same spot as Insp PERERA had initially positioned himself. He was again approached by a GDP officer who asked him to move the patrol car out of from the airfield or hand over the keys. This was denied on the same basis as earlier. The yellow MOD road sweeper again drove towards the RGP patrol car to block its position and causing Insp PAYAS to evade this manoeuvre. The driver of the sweeper vehicle, Ms MUSCAT was spoken to and advised to desist in her actions as she was rendering herself liable to arrest for obstructing police. She obliged and moved her works vehicle to the area of the western hangar.

At this juncture COP informed me that on conversations with Cmdr Hawkins the latter had pleaded to COP to allow the aircraft to depart as the evidence was required in the UK to pursue the investigation against WATTERSON. This then uncovered the truth which confirmed that the evidence and WATTERSON were on the flight although the three senior MOD officials were saying different, clearly to deceive us.

Around this time, I enquired from PM COLLINS whether the exhibits we wanted to seize were in the building and he replied in the negative. I went to on to inform him that I practically knewthat both WATTERSON and the exhibits were on board the aircraft and that we would proceed to retrieve them. He made no remark to this but I noted he suddenly became very pale and uneasy. I became concerned that he had become unwell but he reassured me he was ok. He took one further private call and after that call his behaviour completely changed. He mellowed to suggest that we should explore the running of a parallel investigation and that he would be making available the exhibits for the RGP to examine. I informed him that this course of action was the one I had suggested initially but had not met with his approval. I added that all the conflict and tensions experienced during the past few days could have been well averted.

The warrant issued by the Chief Justice was not executed in the end. At approximately 1745Hrs I was notified by COP that he had received assurances from the CBF that the exhibits would be handed over to the RGP in due course. Consequently, I returned to NMH where we held a de-brief and I arranged for an investigation team to liaise with JPSU to proceed with the investigation. The RGP vehicle positioned by the south barrier had also been recalled to NMH at 1745Hrs.

Final observations

You will no doubt have grasped how the escalation of tension was not down to lack of will or desire on our part to resolve the issues in a 'grown up' manner. In fact, as alluded to throughout the chronology of events, we made numerous requests for the handing over of the conduct of the [local] investigation. Sadly, we were taken to the limits only to finally achieve what we are perfectly entitled to. I take the following most salient moments as key to how the matter escalated to the levels they did with I dare say a clear devious intent on the part of the senior military officials we were dealing with;

- The poor judgement by JPSU of not sharing with the Gibraltar authorities the fact that they had a potential sex offender(s) in the jurisdiction and where it was reasonably suspected that offences may have been committed locally.
- The lack of supporting legal/tactical/logistical infrastructure for the JPSU to conduct enquiries in a territory where they claim to have jurisdiction and which in essence can lead to abuses of process.
- The lack of clarity on the part MOD's part as to who has primacy in Gibraltar.
- The local interpretation that the Armed Forces Act 2006 & 2016 are not applicable in Gibraltar; meaning the actions carried out JPSU could be construed as ultra vires.
- The intent by Col GREEN and PM COLLINS to disregard the authority of the RGP to assert jurisdiction over the local aspect of the investigation and undermine this authority further by making arrangements to sneak out the exhibits and WATTERSON when it was perfectly clear that the RGP had a [big] claim on the matter.
- The seemingly devious conspiracy employed by Col GREEN, PM COLLINS and Stn Cmdr HUTCHINSON to ensure the RGP could not discharge their lawful duty and create a situation to exert pressure on the RGP to relent in our efforts. This includes (i) the instructions issued to civilian MOD drivers to block the path of two RGP patrol cars who were legitimately engaged in a police operation, (ii) the misleading and obstructive attitude displayed by the Stn Cmdr regarding the exhibits and person on board the aircraft (iii) the unhelpful attitudes and stances displayed by Col GREEN and PM COLLINS throughout, (iv) the traffic chaos and potential public order situation created due to the very long time the traffic barriers were closed when there was no need for this.

Finally, you may have a different view to me on this but, Sir, I submit to you that there has certainly been a serious breach of trust and confidence by, in my view, the three senior military officials referred to in this report. It will be awkward to say the least to re-establish this trust and confidence wherever and whenever our respective roles coincide in the future.

COP has requested a meeting between the under mentioned parties to be held at the office of Her Majesty's Attorney General for Gibraltar Michael LLAMAS QC at 1130Hrs on Wednesday 22nd February 2017 to discuss issues to prevent a repetition on of events described in this report.

IN THE MATTER OF THE EXTENT OF THE ARMED FORCES ACT 2006

JOINT OPINION

Introduction

1. We are asked to advise whether the Armed Forces Act 2006 ("AFA 2006") extends to Gibraltar.

2. An officer of the Royal Air Force ("RAF") stationed in Gibraltar is suspected of possession of indecent imagery of children. The Royal Gibraltar Police ("RGP") wish to investigate. However, the British military have claimed authority to arrest and investigate under the AFA 2006 and have obstructed the investigation by the RGP.

3. For the reasons set out below, it is our opinion that the AFA 2006 clearly does not extend to Gibraltar. The British military have therefore purported to exercise powers of arrest and investigation in a jurisdiction where the law does not grant them such powers. Arrest, entry and search by the British armed forces in Gibraltar is not lawful under the law of Gibraltar.

Factual Background

4. On 4 February 2017 the RGP were informed that the British Armed Forces' Joint Provost and Security Unit ("JPSU") had arrested an officer serving with the RAF in Gibraltar on suspicion of possession of indecent imagery of children. His residence had been searched and computers and storage devices seized. The authority to arrest was claimed under sections 42 and 67 of the AFA 2006.

5. The RGP wish to investigate and have made numerous requests to the British military to enable them to do so, which were refused. This culminated, on 8 February 2017, in the RGP obtaining a warrant to search for the seized property.

6. When the RGP went to the military base to execute the warrant they found the suspect and the seized material were on a military plane about to be flown to the United Kingdom. The RGP prevented the aircraft from taking off.

Legal Background

Offences and powers created by the AFA 2006

7. By virtue of section 367(1) AFA 2006 every member of the regular forces is subject to service law at all times. The regular forces include the RAF; see section 374 AFA 2006.

8. Part 1 of the AFA 2006 provides for a number of service offences.[1] Amongst those offences is that prescribed by section 42(1) AFA 2006, which provides that a person subject to service law commits an offence if he does any act that -- (a) is punishable by the law of England and Wales; or (b) if done in England or Wales, would be so punishable.

[1] Defined by section 50(2)(a) AFA 2006 as including any offence under Part 1.

9. Part 3 of the AFA confers powers of arrest, search and seizure in relation to service offences. For example, section 67 provides that a person who is reasonably suspected of being engaged in committing, or of having committed, a service offence may be arrested in accordance with the provisions of that section by a person subject to service law. Detailed provision is made by that Part as to the circumstances in which those powers can be exercised and the persons (ordinarily members of the armed forces of a certain rank or service police) who can exercise them.

Duration and extent of the AFA 2006

10. When it entered into force, the AFA 2006 extended to Gibraltar. Section 384(2) AFA 2006, as enacted, provided:

> "This Act extends to –
>
> (a) the Isle of Man, and
>
> (b) the British Overseas Territories,
> subject to such modifications as Her Majesty may be Order in Council specify".

11. Gibraltar is a British Overseas Territory: see Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 13 (2009), paragraph 859.

12. The duration of the AFA 2006 was limited by section 382 AFA 2006, as enacted, which provided that the Act expired at the end of one year beginning with the day on which it was passed, subject to renewal by Order in Council for no more than one year from the time the Act would otherwise expire, with an overall limit to such continuation beyond the end of the year 2011.

13. This limited duration reflects the fundamental constitutional principle, traced back to the Bill of Rights in 1688, which declared:

"[t]hat the raising or keeping a standing army within the kingdom in time of peace, unless it be with the consent of Parliament, is against law".

14. Since the 1950s, legislation has been required every five years to continue in force the legislation enabling the Armed Forces to be recruited and maintained. Those Acts have provided that, in each of the years between five-yearly Acts, an Order in Council is required to continue in force that legislation: see Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 3 (2011), paragraph 303.

15. Section 1 of the Armed Forces Act 2011 ("AFA 2011") substituted a new section 382 into the AFA 2006 by which the AFA 2006 was continued and could be continued by Order in Council until the end of 2016.

16. However, unlike the AFA 2006, the AFA 2011 did not extend its provisions to British Overseas Territories. Rather, section 33 AFA 2011 provided:

"(1) Her Majesty may by Order in Council provide for any of the provisions of this Act, except section 25, to extend to a territory mentioned in subsection (2) with or without modifications.

(2) Those territories are—

(a) any of the Channel Islands;

(b) the Isle of Man;

(c) any of the British overseas territories".

17. No such Order in Council was made and therefore the AFA 2006 did not extend to the British Overseas Territories beyond the end of 2011, by reason of that Act's expiry under its section 382 (as originally enacted).

18. Section 1 of the Armed Forces Act 2016 ("AFA 2016") substituted a new section 382 into the AFA 2006 by which the AFA 2006 was continued and could be continued by Order in Council until the end of 2021.

19. Section 21(2)(b) of the AFA 2016 provides that that Act, with the exception of certain sections, extends to "the British overseas territories, except Gibraltar" (emphasis added). Section 13(1)(b) of the AFA 2016 brings the AFA 2006 back into force in "the British overseas territories except Gibraltar". Section 13(3) of the 2016 Act amends section 384(2) of the AFA 2006 (the original version of which we cite in paragraph 10 above) to exclude Gibraltar.

20. Paragraphs 4 and 6 to 12 of the Schedule to the AFA 2016 make provision in consequence of the fact that AFA 2006 is not to extend to Gibraltar. Paragraph 4 provides that powers in certain Acts to extend amendments of AFA 2006 to jurisdictions outside the United Kingdom cannot be used in respect of Gibraltar. Paragraphs 6 to 12 amend certain references to British overseas territories in AFA 2006 to exclude Gibraltar.

21. The related Parliamentary materials confirm that the decision not to extend the AFA 2006 to Gibraltar was a deliberate choice by the legislature. For example:

(i) The Explanatory Notes in the House of Lords relating to the Bill brought forward from the House of Commons on 12 January 2016 explain in terms at paragraphs 78 to 79 and 99 that the AFA 2006 had previously expired in Gibraltar and was, under the provisions of the Bill, not to extend to Gibraltar. Similar explanation is provided in the Explanatory Notes in the House of Commons relating to the Bill as introduced there on 16 September 2015 at paragraphs 74 to 75 and 90.

(ii) The rationale for not extending the Bill to Gibraltar was explained in the House of Commons during the Committee stage of the Bill by the minister Mark Lancaster, following a question from Jim Shannon MP. The Minister explained that the 2005 Constitution gives Gibraltar wide legislative responsibilities so the Government was discussing with Gibraltar whether it would be best to provide for the 2006 Act to extend to Gibraltar or for Gibraltar to act through its own legislation: Hansard, 16 December 2015, Column 1607.

(iii) During that Committee stage, the minister recognised that the AFA 2006 had not been in force in the British Overseas Territories since 2011 and that, in order for the members of the British armed forces to have powers of arrest, entry and search in those jurisdictions, the 2006 Act would need to be extended to those jurisdictions: Hansard, 16 December 2015, Column 1607.

(iv) On the Third Reading of the Bill before the House of Commons on 11 January 2016, the minister said that the Government was still discussing with Gibraltar

whether it would be best to provide for the 2006 Act and the Bill to extend there, that those discussions were ongoing and if necessary the Government would introduce an amendment to the Bill in the House of Lords; Hansard, 11 January 2016, Column 614 to Column 615.

(v) During the Second Reading of the Bill in the House of Lords on 11 February 2016, the Minister of State, Ministry of Defence, Earl Howe, explained that the Bill provided that it was not to have effect in Gibraltar, although the Government was consulting Gibraltar on whether it would be content for the AFA 2006 to become part of its laws and that, if so, an amendment to the Bill would be made: Hansard, 11 February 2016, Column 2362 to 2363. No such amendment was brought forward before the Bill was passed.

Relevant provisions of the law of Gibraltar

22. The English Law (Application) Act states at section 3(1)(b) that the law in England set out in any Act of Parliament at Westminster applied to Gibraltar by any Order of Her Majesty's Council, or any express provision in any Act, or by necessary implication, shall be in force in Gibraltar.

23. The Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 provides for the powers and duties of the RGP and for evidence and procedure in criminal cases. It confers upon the RGP powers of arrest upon reasonable grounds of suspicion that a person has committed an offence (section 42(2)) and powers of search and seizure in prescribed circumstances (Parts 2 and 3).

Analysis

24. United Kingdom forces present in an overseas territory are subject to that territory's law in the usual way, subject to the AFA 2006 or other legislative provision which extends to those territories: Hendry and Dickson British Overseas Territories Laws (2011), page 178.

25. The AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar. This is not merely a matter of omission or oversight upon the expiry of the AFA 2006 or AFA 2011. It is a choice made by Parliament when enacting the AFA 2016 as part of its important constitutional role of approving the raising or standing of an army.

26. The language of section 13(1)(b), section 13(3) and section 21(2)(b) of the AFA 2016 is clear: the provisions of the 2006 Act and the 2016 Act are to extend to the British overseas territories except Gibraltar. The Schedule to the AFA 2016 makes provision in consequence of the fact that AFA 2006 is not to extend to Gibraltar.

27. It is plain from the related Parliamentary materials that, when considering the Bill which became the AFA 2016, Parliament was aware that the AFA 2006 did not extend to Gibraltar, was aware that it was not to be so extended by the AFA 2016 and was aware that the consequence of that was that arrest, entry and search by British armed forces in Gibraltar would not be lawful under the law of Gibraltar.

28. Accordingly, the clear intention of Parliament, reflected in the clear language of section 21(2)(b) AFA 2016, is that the AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar.

29. The consequence of this is that, as a matter of the law of Gibraltar, and of the law of the United Kingdom, the British armed forces do not have the power of arrest under section 67 AFA 2006 and nor do they have the powers of search and seizure granted by the AFA 2006.

30. In purporting to exercise those powers in Gibraltar, the members of the JPSU were acting in a way which was, in that jurisdiction, ultra vires.

31. It is correct that the AFA 2006 applies to members of the RAF at all times, wherever they are in the world, in the sense that an offence committed abroad can be an offence contrary to the 2006 Act: this is the consequence of sections 367(1) and 42(1) AFA 2006. The minister so confirmed in the House of Lords on 11 February 2016 (see paragraph 21(v) above): Hansard at Column 2362. However, that the AFA 2006 confers such a worldwide jurisdiction over relevant persons does not make it lawful under the law of Gibraltar or under the law of the United Kingdom for the United Kingdom authorities to exercise a power of arrest or investigation in Gibraltar in respect of those persons.

32. By reason of section 13(1) AFA 2016, the AFA 2006 is not in force in Gibraltar and accordingly the power of arrest contained in section 67 AFA 2006 does not apply in Gibraltar, as a matter of the law of Gibraltar and of the law of the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom military authorities have no power to arrest in Gibraltar under the AFA 2006, although of course if the suspect returned to the United Kingdom he could be arrested in the United Kingdom under section 67 AFA 2006 for an offence committed elsewhere. It should not be surprising, when Parliament has expressly decided not to apply the AFA 2006 to Gibraltar, that the United Kingdom military authorities do not have the power under the United Kingdom Act to arrest people in Gibraltar.

33. The law of Gibraltar, in particular the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, confers powers of arrest and investigation of crime upon the RGP. It does not confer such powers upon United Kingdom armed forces and there is no other provision in the law of Gibraltar which does. As explained above, the AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar and accordingly is not in force in Gibraltar: section 13(1)(b), section 13(3) and section 21(2)(b) AFA 2016 and section 3(1)(b) English Law (Application) Act.

34. In reaching our view we have also considered the provisions of the United Kingdom Forces (Jurisdiction of Colonial Courts) Order 1965, which prevents the trial of a member of the United Kingdom armed forces for an offence against the law of another territory where certain criteria are satisfied.[2] However, not only are those criteria not present in the present case, but in any event that Order is concerned only with the question of whether the courts of Gibraltar are prevented from adjudicating upon a certain offence and does not address the issue of whether the United Kingdom military forces have jurisdiction to arrest and investigate in Gibraltar.

35. In summary:

(i) The AFA 2006 does not extend to Gibraltar.

---

[2] In particular, where the alleged offender is acting in the course of his duties, or where only service personnel (or dependants and civilian components of the armed forces) are involved or where the offence is against UK government property: section 3 of the Order.

(ii) The United Kingdom armed forces do not have powers of arrest and seizure under the law of Gibraltar.

(iii) In purporting to exercise those powers in Gibraltar they were acting in a manner which was unlawful under the law of Gibraltar.

(iv) The RGP have powers of arrest and seizure under the law of Gibraltar and members of the United Kingdom armed forces in Gibraltar are subject to that law and must comply with the lawful exercise by the RGP of those powers.

Dear Commissioner,

I am writing on behalf of Joint Forces Command – the organisation that commands and is responsible for the UK's permanent joint overseas bases – in respect of the ongoing investigations surrounding events on the 8th February, which unfolded in Gibraltar, in particular around Gibraltar International Airport.

There are a number of points that it seems appropriate to reflect to you. It is hoped these reflections are helpful to you on several accounts:

(1) first to acknowledge the role, advice and direction that Joint Forces Command provided to Commander British Forces Gibraltar on the legal issues impacting on the events of 8th February;

(2) secondly, to recognise and support the individuals involved and who are presently under your arrest and whose actions under your investigations were under the auspices of Joint Forces Command in the fulfilment of their duties. In doing so, it is understood these individuals' actions may have clashed with the responsibilities that your officers properly sought to fulfil; and

(3) finally, to reassure you about the seriousness with which Joint Forces Command views the allegations that have been made, the eagerness to try and satisfactorily settle – to everyone's satisfaction – the concerns with which the Royal Gibraltar Police are understandably investigating, and our genuine enthusiasm – if possible – to use these events as a platform to grow an even better understanding between our respective organisations and to build an even stronger and mutually respectful and beneficial future together.

Taking these points in turn:

Joint Forces Command regrets the events that took place in Gibraltar on the 8th February. This includes the events at Gibraltar International Airport and the dispute as to jurisdiction that led to the confusion by British Forces Gibraltar over the appropriate handling of the individual suspected of downloading indecent material whilst in the United Kingdom; and the detailed management of this particular case. It was the view of Joint Forces Command that the case was to be subject to exclusive Service Police jurisdiction – which turned out not to be correct. This was on the basis that Joint Forces Command was unaware of any potential offences that had been committed by the alleged suspect whilst in Gibraltar or of your suspicions in this respect.

It is acknowledged that in responding to your desire to explore potential illegal activities by the suspect, Joint Forces Command and subsequently British Forces Gibraltar did not immediately recognise the jurisdictional legal primacy in this case for you to investigate, and if necessary, prosecute the individual were he to be found to have committed a similar or other offence in Gibraltar. I want to reassure you that subsequent additional advice, including at a senior legal level in the Ministry of Defence, recognises the legal primacy point in this case. Joint Forces Command now, therefore, fully understands and respects your legal primacy in this case as the law currently stands today.

We are aware that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has prioritised the drafting of legislation and an MoU that will clearly spell out our respective, complementary jurisdictional roles. It would also be highly desirable for agreement to be reached between our respective agencies setting out the practical application of jurisdiction for the period between now and the enactment of such legislation.

In the course of the events that unfolded on the 8th February, it is considered very important by Joint Forces Command that you should understand that at all material times our people acted in good faith and to implement the direction and guidance provided by Joint Forces Command and Provost Marshal (Navy). They were not on a "frolic of their own" in any sense and were therefore not consciously seeking to deny your officers jurisdiction, or disrespect your officers' lawful instructions. They were acting entirely in keeping with the instructions they were receiving, albeit, with the benefit of hindsight, in a manner which did not assist in resolving matters as expeditiously as all would have preferred.

I think it is important for you to be made aware that there was a decision, as part of the Joint Forces Command application of our duty of care to our personnel, to return the suspect to the United Kingdom for the individual's own welfare. Again, this decision was based on the view that jurisdiction to deal with the offence in question remained exclusively with Forces law enforcement agencies – which turned out not to be correct. It was in pursuance of this requirement and judgement that more appropriate care would be afforded the suspect in the United Kingdom, that British Forces Gibraltar personnel were instructed to facilitate the opportunity of a military aircraft to both return the individual to the United Kingdom and to transport potentially incriminating evidence for forensic examination. I should clarify that, fundamentally, this was because the facilities at RAF Brize Norton were considered more appropriate for looking after the individual than those of British Forces Gibraltar; and, ordinarily, the capability for Service Police investigations overseas which require electronic and communications forensic analysis is held in the United Kingdom. It is in seeking to implement this approach that, unfortunately, personnel from British Forces Gibraltar had what were clearly unfortunate altercations with officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police who were acting in the lawful execution of their duties. I cannot emphasise to you how much we regret, with the benefit of hindsight and the later legal advice we have received, that we were not better able to cooperate with those of your officers in question. These altercations should not have happened and any active disagreement as to jurisdiction should, in any event, have been handled in the more dignified and usual manner for issues of this type. I must express to you in particular our genuine regret to hear accusations that British Forces Gibraltar personnel behaved disrespectfully towards officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police and that they were inconsiderate of the requirements under which your officers were seeking to undertake their lawful activities and investigations. That is not in the nature of the relationship we have long enjoyed between our organisations.

It is hoped, sincerely, that these events can be used to assist us all in a clearer understanding of the Royal Gibraltar Police's jurisdiction in respect of criminal matters and British Forces Gibraltar's application of service law; and that – looking ahead – there are considerable opportunities to enable our respective law enforcement agencies and leadership to work even more closely together. There are numerous significant opportunities to enable this: the routine business of service people in Gibraltar; the joint policing that is usually put in place for the arrival and duration of Royal Navy warships and submarines; and the ambition that we all have to draw further on various Gibraltar Parliament statutes anticipated to be enacted later this year and which will provide a stronger and clearer platform for continued co-operation and enhanced security measures and resilience for Gibraltar.

It is hoped that this contextual information is of assistance in providing an appropriate and accurate background for many of the actions that Service Personnel took in the course of their duties in respect of the events and associated interactions that flowed from the 8th February incident.

Joint Forces Command assures you that there was not and never envisaged any intention to attempt to fetter the Royal Gibraltar Police's jurisdiction. That it appeared otherwise is deeply regretted. It is sincerely hoped that our future interactions are on a more positive basis and that we collectively work together to enhance the security of the United Kingdom and Gibraltar.

Yours sincerely,

Tony Radakin

"Dear Chief Minister,

Re.: Watterson Inquiry

I refer to your request to the Gibraltar Police Authority ("GPA") to enquire from the Royal Gibraltar Police ("RGP") into the events that transpired on and around 8th February 2017 relating to Sergeant Watterson (the "Watterson Incident").

We have reviewed the relevant reports prepared by the RGP in respect of the Watterson Incident, and have further discussed and raised questions relating to the effectiveness and probity of policing in Gibraltar by the RGP in connection therewith. In particular, we have interviewed the Commissioner of Police and his most senior ranking officers in relation to the Watterson Incident, being careful to understand the thought processes and considerations of the RGP officers involved in the Watterson Incident, including but not limited to (i) whether the consequences of the actions and restraint of the relevant RGP officers throughout the Watterson Incident were considered and deliberated; (ii) whether the actions of, and restraint shown by, the relevant RGP officers throughout the Watterson Incident were necessary and proportional; and (iii) whether with the benefit of hindsight any actions could or should have been taken differently by the RGP.

The GPA has come to the firm conclusion that the actions of and the restraint shown by the relevant RGP officers during the Watterson Incident were considered, deliberated, entirely proportional and highly commendable. As such, we do not doubt the effectiveness and probity of the policing demonstrated by the RGP in respect of the Watterson Incident. We would take the liberty of adding, though it may not be our place to do so, that the actions of certain MOD personnel in respect of the Watterson Incident deserve censure and that you should consider whether a full inquiry ought to be undertaken by an body independent of the RGP and the MOD so that lessons may be learnt from this incident.

I remain at your disposal should you wish to discuss this matter further.

Yours sincerely,

John Goncalves"

Vickram et all,

Thanks for putting this together. Whilst I agree that the text accurately reflects our conclusions, I am not entirely comfortable with the last sentence. I think we should refer to the actions of certain MOD personnel as you have done, but do not think it is our place to suggest an enquiry. I would be more comfortable with something like

"We would take the liberty of adding, though it may not be our place to do so, that the actions of certain MOD personnel in respect of the Watterson Incident deserve censure and feel that it is important that RGP and MOD work together to learn the lessons from this incident and develop a strong working partnership based on a mutual understanding and respect for each other's roles."

Stephen, good morning and thank you.

My reason for including the last sentence is because the Chief Minister originally asked John for the GPA to conduct an inquiry into this matter. I have not stated in my draft that the GPA is suggesting an inquiry be undertaken, but rather that the Chief Minister consider whether an inquiry should be undertaken.

Either way, I am happy for your suggested wording to be included in the letter place of my last sentence because it is the Chief Minister's prerogative in any event to decide whether the full inquiry should be undertaken or not and he does not need the GPA to suggest this course of action.

Thanks and wishing all a great long weekend,

Vikram

Stephen,

I have to disagree with your proposed amendment as, in my opinion, it gives the impression that we came to the conclusion that both the RGP and the MoD may have been equally at fault on matters of "mutual understanding and respect for each other's roles" when this was clearly not the case.

Since we have no jurisdiction to ask for information or documentation from MoD, a matter which was mentioned by some of us, I consider it to be totally in order for us to recommend that an enquiry be held, therefore, I am happy to sign our report, as drafted by Vikram.

Best regards,

John

"Dear Chief Minister,

Re.: Watterson Inquiry

I refer to your request to the Gibraltar Police Authority ("GPA") to enquire from the Royal Gibraltar Police ("RGP") into the events that transpired on and around 8th February 2017 relating to Sergeant Watterson (the "Watterson Incident").

We have reviewed the relevant reports prepared by the RGP in respect of the Watterson Incident, and have further discussed and raised questions relating to the effectiveness and probity of policing in Gibraltar by the RGP in connection therewith. In particular, we have interviewed the Commissioner of Police and his most senior ranking officers in relation to the Watterson Incident, being careful to understand the thought processes and considerations of the RGP officers involved in the Watterson Incident, including but not limited to (i) whether the consequences of the actions and restraint of the relevant RGP officers throughout the Watterson Incident were considered and deliberated; (ii) whether the actions of, and restraint shown by, the relevant RGP officers throughout the Watterson Incident were necessary and proportional; and (iii) whether with the benefit of hindsight any actions could or should have been taken differently by the RGP.

The GPA has come to the firm conclusion that the actions of and the restraint shown by the relevant RGP officers during the Watterson Incident were considered, deliberated, entirely proportional and highly commendable. As such, we do not doubt the effectiveness and probity of the policing demonstrated by the RGP in respect of the Watterson Incident. We would take the liberty of adding, though it may not be our place to do so, that the actions of certain MOD personnel in respect of the Watterson Incident deserve censure and that you should consider whether a full inquiry ought to be undertaken by an body independent of the RGP and the MOD so that lessons may be learnt from this incident.

I remain at your disposal should you wish to discuss this matter further.

Yours sincerely,

John Goncalves"

I'm in agreement with what you say John. The impression I got from the Commisioner and his senior managers responses is that they knew throughout how to work with the MOD and that the primary party at fault was the MOD at all levels of command.

Given the rest of the content of the letter I don't believe it gives that impression, however I am happy to support the majority view.

I will let you know if I decide to attend. At the moment am working at home and avoiding gatherings as I am with my parents and (being over 70) they are staying in. Even with the restrictions being lifted soon they are going to follow the guidance for now and stay in so I am trying to do the same for their protection. I am going to have to start getting back to normality at some point just not sure if now is too soon. Have to think it through and speak to them.

CAUTION: This email originated from outside your organization. Exercise caution when opening attachments or clicking links, especially from unknown senders.

Dear all,

As discussed, I was called to a meeting at the Convent by the Governor. The Chief Minister also attended the meeting.

They explained to me that for a number of reasons (explained at our meeting) they had BOTH lost confidence in CoP and his ability to lead a modern police force. As discussed, today I have met with CoP and explained this to time and also outlining the reasons for this loss of confidence, as explained to the Authority. I also handed him a letter, as discussed, inviting him to retire in view of the fact that both Governor and Chief minister had lost confidence in him BUT with a clear proviso that he has a right to make representations before the whole GPA should he wish to do so and stating that we would consider these representations.

I have stated in the letter that he should write in within seven working days but that if he needs more time, he should put this in writing.

This all all I have so far.

Kind regards,

Joey

Dear colleagues,

Please find letter attached, providing a written explanation for CoP on what was expressed to GPA by Governor and Chief Minister in relation to their loss of confidence. You will glean from this, the seriousness of the matter at hand.

This is copy of letter sent to CoP this evening after his request for concerns in writing.

Regards

Joey

22nd May 2020

Commissioner Ian McGrail OTM MSc
Royal Gibraltar Police
New Mole House

Dear Commissioner McGrail,

Invitation to Retire : Section 34 of the Police Act ('the Act')

Our meeting earlier this morning refers.

Today I expressed to you that the Gibraltar Police Authority was calling upon you to retire under the provisions of Section 34 of the Act.

I told you that the reason that the Authority was taking this step arose from the communication by the Governor and the Chief Minister to the Authority that BOTH had lost confidence in your ability to run policing in Gibraltar. The reasons which the Governor and the Chief Minister have provided the Authority for their loss of confidence are summarised in the paragraphs numbers 1 to 5 below and address the relevant factors set out in Section 34(1) of the Act.

Additionally, the Authority itself has agreed with the matters raised by the Governor and the Chief Minister and have taken the view that your position is untenable as Commissioner given that you have lost the confidence of BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister.

Please find below the main issues contributing to the loss of confidence, as expressed to the Authority by the Governor and the Chief Minister.

1. Efficiency:

The Governor and the Chief Minister are very concerned about the findings of the HMICFRS Report ('the Report'). It is clear damning in respect of the efficiency of the RGP. A large number of the findings of the Report address 'inefficiency' directly and indirectly. Indeed, the "Overview" of the Report specifically provides a criticism (para 2, page 7) that the Force is not 'as effective or efficient as it could be'.

Unit 25B Casemates Square, Gibraltar
Tel: (+350) 20040918, E-mail: secretary@gpa.gi

In this respect, the position is clear as to responsibility. Under Section 33 of the Act, it is the Commissioner who is responsible for the efficient administration of the Force. That means that responsibility in respect of this failing rests legally, directly with you.

It was also pointed out to the Authority that in your application for the role of Commissioner you would, if successful, immediately set up a working group to ensure that the recommendations of the 2015/6 HMIC Report had been met by the 1st March 2019. This action point was considered by you to be necessary for the RGP to be a 'continuously progressing and professional police force.' Not only have the recommendations and action points set out in the 2015/6 reports not been complied with but now, in addition, new and more serious recommendations have had to be made by the HMICFRS in 2020.

Additionally, and equally importantly, the incident at sea in March, resulting in the death of two individuals, was pointed out as further evidence of the RGP acting inefficiently by seeking to act beyond its remit and jurisdiction. The Authority notes that the Chief Minister has written to you directly, under Section 15 of the Act (copied to me as Chairman of the Authority), seeking further information on this matter given that neither he or the Governor seem to have a full picture of what actually transpired. The incident has resulted not just in a diplomatic complaint filed against the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, but also to a vessel being out of action, questions as to standard operating procedures in place and all the other concerns contained in the letter sent to you by the Chief Minister. I do not need to repeat that here, but I would refer you to the paragraphs of that letter which specifically set out that the Chief Minister has no confidence in his having been provided with the information expeditiously about this very serious incident. Additionally, the Governor expressed the view that he feels he has been misled by you about this most serious incident which has resulted in loss of life.

2. Effectiveness:

The issues relating to effectiveness were linked by the Governor and the Chief Minister. Additionally, as a result of the above, the RGP found itself without the use of a vessel for some time and the RGP's effectiveness as sea was therefore severely impacted for some time. The effectiveness of the RGP will also now be seriously compromised given the increased legal workload which will arise as a direct result of the claims made and all the corollary effects that they will give rise to.

3. & 4. Probity & Integrity:

It was communicated to me that both the Governor and the Chief Minister felt that their dealings with you have left them with the sense that you are lacking in both probity and integrity – the maritime incident is one case in point. This is very serious indeed. I think you need to reflect carefully on this. The situation we are in is one where BOTH the Governor and the Chief Minister respectively have expressed this view. It is not one of them that has expressed this view, which would be bad enough, but BOTH of them.

Additionally, the Authority is informed that the Attorney General has also expressed the same feelings.

The seriousness of this cannot be underestimated. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed to the Authority that they consider that the Rule of Law in Gibraltar is compromised by the fact that they lack confidence in your probity and integrity.

5. Independence:

This area of concern was also brought to the attention of the Authority by reference to the parts of the report that deal with the potential for corruption and, consequently, influence, which, given what is identified in the Report, seems not to be completely understood in the RGP. The Governor and the Chief Minister expressed the view that it is not possible for the RGP to claim that it is acts independently in any investigation or matter unless it has properly addressed this recommendation that has remained outstanding for the period of your service.

It is for those reasons that we are calling upon you to retire on the interests of efficiency, effectiveness, probity, integrity and the independence of policing in Gibraltar, but before doing so are giving you an opportunity, as provided for in Section 34(2) of the Act to make representations which we shall consider.

I trust that this serves to clarify matters further.

I look forward to receiving any representations you may wish to make under Section 34(2) of the Act.

Yours,

Dear all,

As discussed, I was called to a meeting at the Convent by the Governor. The Chief Minister also attended the meeting.

They explained to me that for a number of reasons (explained at our meeting) they had BOTH lost confidence in CoP and his ability to lead a modern police force. As discussed, today I have met with CoP and explained this to time and also outlining the reasons for this loss of confidence, as explained to the Authority. I also handed him a letter, as discussed, inviting him to retire in view of the fact that both Governor and Chief minister had lost confidence in him BUT with a clear proviso that he has a right to make representations before the whole GPA should he wish to do so and stating that we would consider these representations.

I have stated in the letter that he should write in within seven working days but that if he needs more time, he should put this in writing.

This all all I have so far.

Kind regards,

Joey

Dear all,

We are going to need to meet urgently and face to face, please. Please let me know if you are able to make a meeting at 9.30 this Thursday. I shall be needing all of you to discuss a very sensitive matter and arrive at a consensus on next steps.

Please confirm that you are able to make it - we shall be keeping to the recommended social distance but only attend if you feel it is appropriate for you, in terms of Health. Note that in view of the sensitivity this cannot really be discussed via Zoom.

Elka let me know if you are able to open the offices for us, please.

Let me know.

Dear all,

We are going to need to meet urgently and face to face, please. Please let me know if you are able to make a meeting at 9.30 this Thursday. I shall be needing all of you to discuss a very sensitive matter and arrive at a consensus on next steps.

Please confirm that you are able to make it - we shall be keeping to the recommended social distance but only attend if you feel it is appropriate for you, in terms of Health. Note that in view of the sensitivity this cannot really be discussed via Zoom.

Elka let me know if you are able to open the offices for us, please.

Let me know.

Regards

Joey

Claire - I'd rather not. If you can't make it, I'll make sure you are kept up to speed.

Thanks Joey
I will let you know if I decide to attend. At the moment am working at home and avoiding gatherings as I am with my parents and (being over 70) they are staying in. Even with the restrictions being lifted soon they are going to follow the guidance for now and stay in so I am trying to do the same for their protection. I am going to have to start getting back to normality at some point just not sure if now is too soon. Have to think it through and speak to them.
